¶ The.xij.Chapter.

¶ The preastes and Leuytes whych cam wyth zorobabel to Jerusalē are nōbred, & the wall is dedycate.

A THese are the preastes and Leuites that wente vp with zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel & with Jesua: Sararia, Jeremi, & Eldras, Amaria, Maluch, Hatus, Sechania, Rehum, Merimoth, Iddo, Genthoi, Abia, Miamin, Maaria, Belga, Semaia, Joiarib, Jadaia, Salu, Amok, Helkia, and Jadaia. These were the heades amōg the preastes, and theyr brethren, in the dayes of Jesua. The Leuytes were these: Jesua, Bennui, Cadmil, Sarabia, Juda and Mathania which was ouer the offyce of thankesgeuynge, he and hys brethren: Bachukia and Himni and theyr brethrē, were aboute them in the watches.

Jesua begat Joakim. Joakim also begat Eliasib, & Eliasib begat Joiada. Joiada begat Jonathan, and Jonathan begat Jadua. In the dayes of Joakim were these the cheke fathers amōge the preistes: vnder Sararia, Maraia: vnder Jeremy, Hanania: vnder Eldras, Mesulam: vnder Amaria, Jehoanan: vnder Melico, Jonathan: vnder Sebania, Joseph: vnder Harim Adna: vnder Maraioth, Helca: vnder Iddo, zachary: vnder Genthō, Mesullam: vnder Abia, zichri: vnder Miniamin and Moadia, Piltai: vnder Belga, Samua: vnder Semeia, Jehonathan: vnder Joiarib, Mathenai, vnder Jadaia, Uli: vnder Selai, Kelai: vnder Amok, Eber: vnder Helchia, Hasabia: vnder Jadaia, Nathanael.

B And in the tyme of Eliasib: Joiada, Johanan & Jadua, were ỹ cheke fathers amōge the Leuites and the preastes, written vnder the raygne of Darius the Persian. The chyldrē of Leui, ỹ principall fathers were written in the Chronicles, vntill the tyme of Jonathan the sonne of Eliasib. And these were the cheke among the Leuites, Hasabia, Serebia and Jesua the sonne of Cadmiel, and theyr brethren in their presence, to geue prayse & thākes, accordynge as Dauid the mā of God had ordeyned it, one watch ouer agaynst another. Mathania, Balbukia, Obadia, Mesullā, Talmon and Abub were porters i the watch at the threcholdes of the gates. These were in the dayes of Joiakim the sonne of Jesua the sonne of Josedec, and in ỹ dayes of Nehemia the captayne, and of the preaste Eldras the scrybe.

And in the dedycacyon of the wall at Jerusalem, they sought the Leuites out of all theyr places, that they myghte be brought to Jerusalem, to kepe the dedicacion & gladnesse, wyth thankesgeuynges, and singinge wyth Cymbales, Psalteries, and harpes. And the chyldren of the syngers geathered them selues together from euery syde out of the playne countre aboute Jerusalem, and from the vyllages of Netho phathi, from the house of Gilgal, and out of the countrees of Geba and Asmaueth: for the syngers had buylded them vyllages rounde aboute Jerusalem. And the preastes and Leuites were purifyed, and clensed the people, and the gates and the wall.

And I brought the princes of Juda vp C
vpon the wall, and appoynted two greate queers of men to geue thankes, whych wēte on the ryghte hande of the wall towarde the Donggate, and after them wente Hosaia, and halfe of the prynces of Juda, and Asaria, Eldras, and Mesullam, Juda, Ben Jamin, Semia and Jeremy: and certayne of the preastes chyldren wyth trompettes, namely zachary the sonne of Jonathā, the sonne of Semeia, the sonne of Mathania, ỹ sonne of Michaia, the sonne of zacur, the sonne of Asaph, and hys brethren Semeia, Asarael, Melalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nathanael & Juda and Hanani, wyth the musicall instrumentes of Dauid the man of God.

And Eldras the Scrybe went before thē, and before the wellgate, they wente vp ouer agaynst them vpon the steppes of the cytye of Dauid at the goynge vp of the wall beyonde the house of Dauid, vnto the Watergate Eastwarde.

The other queer of them that gaue thankes, went ouer agaynst them, and I after them, and the halfe parte of the people vpon the wall, beyonde the fornacegate, vntyll the brode wall, and beyonde the porte of Ephraim, & beyonde the Oldgate, beyonde the fyshgate, and the tower of Hananeel, and the tower of Mea, vntyll the Shepegate. And they stode styll in the preson gate, D and so stode the two queers (of them that gaue thankes) in the house of God, and I and the halfe of the rulers wyth me, and the Preastes, namely Eliakim, Maasia, Miniamin, Michaia, Elioenai, zachary and Hanania, wyth trompettes, and Maasia, Semeiah, Eleasar, Uzzi, Jehohanan, Melchiah, Elam and Ser. And the syngers sange loude, haupnge Jesrahiah for theyr ouerseer.

And the same daye, they offred greate sacrifyces and reioyced: for God had geuen thē greate gladnesse, so that both the wyues ād chyldren were ioyfull, and the myrth of Jerusalem was herde farre of.

At the same tyme were there men appoynted ouer the treasure houses (wherin were the heue offerynges, the fyrstlynges & the tythes) that they shulde geather them out of the feldes aboute the cytyes, to destribute them vnto ỹ preastes & Leuites according to ỹ lawe: for Juda was glad of the preastes preastes, & Leuites, that they stode & wayted vpō ỹ office of their God, which is a pure office. And ỹ singers & porters stode after ỹ cōmaundmēt of Dauid & of Salomō his sonne: *for in the tyme of Dauid & Asaph, were the chefe syngers foūded, & ỹ songes of prayse & thankesgeuyng vnto God. In the tyme of zorobabel & Nehemia, dyd all they of Israel, geue porcions vnto the syngers ād porters, euery daye hys porcion, and they gaue tythes vnto ỹ Leuites: and ỹ Leuites gaue tythes agayne, vnto the children of Aaron. *1.par.xxiiij.a.

¶ The.xiij.Chapter.

¶ The lawe is read, & when they haue heard it, they separate from them all straungers &c.

A AND ỹ daye dyd they reade in the boke of Moses, & ỹ people herkened therto, & there was foūd writen therin, *ỹ the Ammonites & Moabites shulde neuer come into the cōgregacion of God, because they mett not ỹ childrē of Israel wt bread ād water, * but hyred Balaā agaynst them, ỹ he shuld curse them: and oure God turned the curse into a blessing. Now when they herde the lawe, it foxtuned, ỹ they separated from Israell euery one that had myxte hym selfe therin And before this had ỹ preast Eliasib ỹ ouer syght of ỹ treasury of ỹ house of oure God, & he was kynsman vnto Tobia: & had made him a great chambre, & there had they afore tyme layed ỹ offeringes, frankencēse, vessell, & the tythes of corne, and wyne and oyle (accordyng to the cōmaundement geuē to the Leuites, syngers and porters) and the heue offerynges of the preastes: *Neh.xxiij.a. *Deu.xxiiij.a. *Nu.xxiij.a.

But in all this tyme was not I at Jerusalē: for in ỹ two & thyrtie yeare of Artaxerses kyng of Babylō, came I vnto the kyng, and after certayne dayes optayned I lycēce B of the kyng to come to Jerusalē. And I gat knowlege of ỹ euell that Eliasib dyd vnto Tobia, in ỹ he had made him a chābre in the court of the house of God, and it greued me sore, & I cast forth all the vessels of the house of Tobia out of the chābre, and commaunded them to clēse the chambres. And thither brought I agayne the vessels of the house of God, with the meatoffering, and the incense.

And I perceaued, that the porciōs of the Leuites were not geuē them, and that euery one fled to his land, euen ỹ Leuites and syngers ỹ executed ỹ worke. Thē reproued I ỹ rulers, & sayd: why is ỹ house of God forsakē? And I gathered thē together, & set thē in their place. Then brought all Juda ỹ tythes of corne, & wyne and oyle vnto the treasure. And I made treasurers ouer ỹ treasure, euē Selemiah the preast, & zadoc the scrybe, and of the Leuites, Phadaia, & vnder their hand was Hanan the sonne of zacur the sonne of Mathania: for they were counted faythfull, and their office was to distribute the porciōs vnto their brethren. *Thynke vpon me O my God here in, and wipe not out my mercy that I haue shewed on the house of my God, and on the offices therof. *1.Esd.

At the same tyme sawe I some tredynge wyne presses on the Saboth, & bryngyng in shefes, & alles laden wt wyne, grapes, figges & brynging all maner of burthens vnto Jerusalē, vpō the Sabaoth daye. And I rebuked thē carnestly ỹ same daye that they sold the vitayles. There dwelt mē of Tyre also C therin, which brought fysh and all maner of ware, & solde on the Saboth vnto ỹ childrē of Juda in Jerusalem. Then reproued I the rulers in Juda, & sayde vnto thē: what euell thyng is this ỹ ye do, & breake the Saboth daye? Dyd not youre fathers euē thus, & our God brought all thys plage vpon vs & vpō this cytie? And ye make the wrath more yet vpon Israel, in that ye breake the Saboth.

And it foxtuned, ỹ whē the portes of Jerusalem beganne to be darke in the euenyng before the Saboth, I commaunded to shutt the gates, ād charged, that they shuld not be opened tyll after the Saboth. & some of my seruauntes set I at the gates, ỹ there shulde no burthē be brought in on ỹ Saboth daye. Then remayned ỹ chapmen & marchauntes once or twyce ouer nyght without Jerusalē wyth all maner of wares. Then reproued I them sore, and sayde vnto thē: why tary ye all nyght about the wall? If ye do it once agayne, I wyll laye handes vpon you. From ỹ tyme forth came they nomore on the Saboth. And I sayde vnto the Leuites ỹ they shulde clense thē selues, and that they shulde come and kepe the gates, to halowe the Saboth daye. Thynke vpon me (O my God) D concernyng this also, & spare me, accordyng to thy great mercy.

And at the same tyme sawe I Jewes, that maried wyues of Asdod, of Ammon and of Moab, & their childrē spake halfe in ỹ speach of Asdod, & coulde not speake in the Jewes language, but by the tong myght a mā perceaue euery people. Then I reproued them, & cursed them, & smote certayne men of thē, & made thē bare, and toke an ooth of thē by God: Ye shal not geue your daughters vnto their sōnes, nether shall ye take their daughters vnto youre sonnes, or for youre selues. Dyd not Salomō the kyng of Israel synne for soch? and yet among many Heythen was there no kynge lyke him, whych was deare vnto his God, & God made him kynge ouer all Israel, & yet neuertheles, outlandysh women caused hi to synne? Shall we then obeye vnto you, to do all this great euell, & to trāsgresse agaynst oure God, and marye straūge wyues?

sonne of Eliasib the hye preast, had made a cõtracte with Sanabalat the Hozomite: but I chaced him from me. (O my God) thynke thou vpon them that defyle the presthode, & the couenaunt of the presthode & of the Leuites. Thus clensed I thẽ from all soch as were outlandish, and appoynted the courses of ỹ preastes & Leuites, euery one in his office, & to offre the wod at tymes appoynted, and the fyrst frutes. Thinke thou vpon me (O my God) foz the best. (Amen.)

The fyrst Chapter.

¶ Kyng Ahasuerus maketh a royall feast, wherunto the quene Vasthi will not come, foz wheych cause she is deuozced.

¶ Foztuned A in the dayes of Ahasuerus wheych raygned from India vnto Ethiopia (ouer an hũdreth and seuen and twenty landes) euen in those dayes whan the kyng Ahasuerus sate on his seate royall, which was in Susan ỹ cheke cytie, in ỹ thirde yeare of his raygne, he made a feast vnto all his princes & seruaũtes. And the myghtye men of Persia & Media, the captaynes also & rulers of his countrees were before him, & he shewed the riches and glozye of his kyngdome, & the glozious wozshippe of hys greatnesse, many dayes longe, euen an hundreth and foure score dayes.

B And when these dayes were expyred, the kyng made a feast vnto all ỹ people, ỹ were in Susan the cheke cytie, both vnto great ãd small, seuen dayes long in the court of ỹ garden by the kynges palace: where there hãged white, grene & palow clothes, fastened with coardes of fyne sylke & purple in syluer rynges, vpon pylers of Marble stone.

The benches also were of golde & syluer made vpon a pauement of grene, white, palow and black Marble. And they dzanke in vessels of golde, & chaũged vessell after vessell. And the kynges wyne was moch, accozdyng to the power of the kyng. And ỹ dzinke was so apoynted ỹ none shulde compell anye man, foz so the kyng had cõmaunded by the officers of his house, ỹ euery one shuld do as it liked him. And ỹ quene Vasti made a feast also foz the wemen in the palace of Ahasuerus. And on the seuenth daye when the kyng was mery after ỹ wyne, he cõmaunded Mehuman, Bizetha, Harbona, Bigtha, Abagthan, zethar & Carchas, the seuen chamberlaynes (ỹ dyd seruice in the presence of kyng Ahasuerus) to fetch the quene Vasti with ỹ D crowne regal into the kynges presence that he myght shewe the people and princes her fairnesse, foz she was bewtifull. But ỹ quene Vasthi wolde not come at ỹ kinges wozd by his chamberlaynes. Then was ỹ kyng very wzoth, & his indignacion kyndled in him.

And the kyng spake to the wyse men, that had vnderstanding in the ozdinaunces of the land, foz the kynges matters must be hãdled before all soch as haue knowlege of the lawe and iudgement: and the *(chefe and) next vnto hi were, Carsena, Sethar, Admata, Tharsis, Mares, Marsena, & Mamucan, the seuẽ princes of Persia, and Media, wheych sawe the kynges face, & sat aboue in the kyngdom What lawe (saieth ỹ king) shuld be executed vpon the quene Vasthi, because she dyd not accozdyng to the wozde of the kyng Ahasuerus, wheych he cõmaunded by his chamberlaynes? And Memucan answered before the kyng and the princes: the quene Vasthi hath E not onely done euell agaynst the kynge, but also agaynst all the princes and agaynst all the people ỹ are in all ỹ landes of kyng Ahasuerus: foz this dede of the quene shall come abzode vnto all wemẽ, so ỹ they shall despised their husbãdes before their eyes, and shal saye: the kyng Ahasuerus cõmaũded Vasthi ỹ quene to be bzought in before hym, but she wold not come. And so shall the princesses in Persia ãd Media saye likewyse vnto all the kynges princes, whẽ they heare of this dede of the quene, thus shall there aryse to moch despitefulnes & wzath. If it please the kyng therfoze, let there go a commaundmẽt from him, & let it be writtẽ accozding to the lawes of the Persians and Medians (and not to be transgressed) ỹ Vasthi come nomoze before kyng Ahasuerus, & let ỹ king geue her kingdome vnto another, that is better then she.

And when this commaundement of the kyng (which shalbe made) is published thorow out all his empire (wheych is greate) all wemen shall hold their husbãdes in honoure both among great and small.

This

This pleased the kyng & the princes: and the kyng dyd accozding to the wozd of Memucan. Foz he sent letters fozth in to all the kynges lãdes, in to euery land, accozdyng to the wryting therof, & to euery people after their lãguage, ỹ euery man shulde be lozd in his awne house. And this caused he to be spoken after the language of his people.

¶ The. ij. Chapter.

¶ After the quene is put awaye, certen goodly young damosells are searched out. Edith otherwyse called Esther, pleaseth the kyng, & is made quene. Mardocheus openeth vnto the kynge those that wolde betraye hym.

A After these actes, whẽ the displeasure of king Ahasuerus was now layed, he thought vpon Vasthi, & what she had done, ãd what was concluded agaynst her. Then sayd the kynges seruauntes that ministred vnto him: Let there be sayze young virgins sought foz the kyng, and the kyng appointed certayne men in all the landes of his empyze, whõ he charged ỹ they shuld bryng together all the sayze yong virgins vnto Susan the headcite, to the wemẽs buylding, vnder the hand of Hagei the kynges chamberlayne, that kepte the wemen, to geue them their apparell *(& other thynges necessary to be had.) And that the damsell wheych pleased the kynge shuld be quene in Vasthis steade. And this pleased the kyng, and he dyd so.

In the cyte of Susan there was a Jewe, whose name was Mardocheus, the sonne of Jair, the sonne of Semei, the sonne of Cisa mã of Jemini, which was caryed awaye frõ Jerusalem, * whã Jechonia the kyng of Iuda was led awaye, (whom Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon caryed thence (& he nozished Hadassa (that is Esther) his vncles B daughter: foz she had nether father noz mother, and she was a sayze & beutyfull dãsell: whõ Mardocheus (whẽ her father & mother was deed) receaued foz his awne daughter.

So it foztuned that when the kynges commaundemẽt & cõmission was published, and many damosels were bzought together in the cite of Susan vnder the hande of Hagei. Esther was bzought also vnto the kynges house vnder the hand of Hagei the keper of the wemen, & the damsell pleased him, and she founde fauoure in his syght. And he caused oznamentes to be geuen her & soch thynges as belonged to her, and appoynted her seuen cõlye damsels out of the kynges house, & fauoured both her and her gentyll wemen singularly in the house of the wemen. But Esther shewed not her people & her kynred: foz Mardocheus had charged her, that she shuld not tell it. And Mardocheus walked euery daye before the court of the wemens house, that he myght knowe howe Esther dyd, and what shulde become of her.

And when the appoynted tyme of euery damsell came, that she shuld go vnto ỹ kyng Ahasuerus, after that she had bene twelue monethes in the deckynge of the wemen (foz their deckynge must haue so moch tyme, namely syxe monethes with Balme & Myzre, ãd syxe monethes with good spices, so were the wemen beutyfyed) then went there one damosell vnto the kyng, ãd whatsoeuer she requyred *(so that it were comely) that must be ge- *a.
uen her to go wyth her out of the wemens buylding vnto ỹ kynges palace. In the eue- C nyng she went, and in the mozow agayne into the seconde house of the wemen abyding vnder the hand of Saasgas the kynges chamberlayne, whych kept the concubines. And she came in vnto the kyng nomoze, excepte it pleased the kyng to haue her, and that he called her by name.

Now when the tyme came of Esther the daughter of Abihan the vncle of Mardocheus (whych had receaued her as hys awne daughter) that she shuld come into ỹ kyng, she desyred nothyng, but what Hagei the kynges chamberlayne the keper of the wemen, sayde.

And Esther found fauoure in the syght of all them ỹ loked vpon her. And Esther was taken vnto kyng Ahasuerus into his house royall, in ỹ tenth moneth which is ỹ moneth *Tebeth, in ỹ seuenthyeare of his raygne. *December.

And the kyng loued Esther aboue all the wemen, & she found grace and fauoure in hys syght before all the virgins: so that he set the crowne of the kyngdome vpon hir head, and made her quene in steade of Vasthi. And the kyng made a great feast vnto all his princes and seruauntes (which feast was because of D Esther) & caused ỹ landes to be in quyetnes, & gaue giftes, as became ỹ royaltye of a kig.

And when the virgins were gathered together the seconde tyme, Mardocheus sat in the kynges gate. And as yet had not Esther shewed her kynred and her people, accordige as Mardocheus had bydden her: foz Esther dyd after the wozde of Mardocheus, lyke as yf she had bene yet vnder hys gouernaunce. At the same tyme, whyle Mardocheus sat in the kynges gate, two of the kynges chãberlaynes Bigthan and Theres which kept the doze, were wzoth, & sought to laye their handes on ỹ kyng Ahasuerus: wherof also Mardocheus gat knowledge, * and tolde it vnto *Esther vi.a quene Esther, & Esther certifyed the kyng therof in Mardocheus name. And when inquisicion was made, it was founde so. And they were both hanged on tre: and it was writtẽ in the Chzonycles before the kynge.

¶ The. iij. Chapter.

¶ Haman the Agagite doutn after he was exalted obtayned of the kyng that all the Jewes shuld be put to deeth, because Mardocheus had not done hym wozshyp, as other had.

A After these actes dyd ỹ kynge Ahasuerus promote Haman the sonne of Amadatha ỹ Agagite, & set him hye, & set hys seat aboue all ỹ princes that he had with him. And all the kynges seruaũtes that weze in the kynges gate, bowed their knees, and wozshypped hamã: foz the kyng had so commaunded cõcernyng him. But Mardocheus bowed not the knee, and wozshypped him not. Then the kynges seruauntes whych were in the kynges gate, sayde vnto Mardocheus: why transgressest thou the kynges commaundment? And whẽ they spake thus daylie vnto him, he folowed them not, and they tolde Haman, that they myght se how Mardocheus matters wolde endure: foz he had told them, that he was a
B Jewe. And when Haman sawe, that Mardocheus bowed not the knee vnto him, noz wozshipped him, he was full of indignaciõ, and thought it to lyttell to laye handes onely on Mardocheus: foz they had shewed him ỹ naciõ of Mardocheus, wherfoze he sought to destroye all the Jewes, that were thozow out the whole empyze of Ahasuerus, and that were of the nacion of Mardocheus.

In the fyzst moneth (that is the moneth Nisan) in the twelueth yeare of kyng Ahasuerus they cast Phur (that is a lott) befoze Haman from daye to daye, and from moneth to moneth, to the twelueth moneth that is the moneth Adar. And Haman sayde vnto kynge Ahasuerus: There is here a people scatered abzode and dispersed amõg all peo-
C ple in all the landes of thyne empyze, & they haue their lawes contrary from all people, & do not after the kynges lawes, nether is it the kynges profet to suffre them after thys maner. If it please the kynge, let it be wzytten, that they maye be destroyed, & so wyll I weye downe ten thousand talẽtes of syluer, by the handes of ỹ wozckimen, to be bzought into the kynges treasure. And the kyng toke his rynge from his hand, & gaue it vnto Haman the sonne of Amidatha the Agagite the Jewes enemye. And the kynge sayde vnto Haman: Let the syluer be geuen the, and do with that people as it pleaseth the.

D Then were the kynges scrybes called on *Marche. ỹ thirteenth daye of ỹ fyzst moneth ( Nisan) and there was wzitten (accozding as Hamã commaunded) vnto all the kynges officers & to the captaynes that were in all the landes, and to the rulars of euery people in the countreyes on euery syde, accozdyng to the wzyting of euery nacion, and after their lãguage, in the name of kyng Ahasuerus was it wzytten and sealed with the kynges rynge. And the wzytynges were sent by postes into all the kynges landes, to rote out, to kyll, and to destroye all Jewes, both yong & olde, chyldzen & wemen in one daye (namely vpon the thirteenth daye of the twelueth moneth, whych is the moneth * Adar) & to *February.

This was the summe of the wzyting, ỹ there shulde be a cõmaundement geuen in all landes, and published vnto all people, that they shulde be ready agaynst the same daye. And the postes went in all ỹ hast, accozdyng to the kynges commaundement. And in Susan the cheke cytie was the commaundement deuised. And ỹ kyng & Haman sate & dzãcke: whan in the meane tyme the cytie of Susan was disquieted.

¶ The. iij. Chapter.

¶ Mardocheus geueth the queue knowledge of the cruell decree of the kyng agaynst the Jewes.

A When Mardocheus perceaued all ỹ was done, he rente his clothes and put on sack cloth, with asches, and wẽt out into the myddes of the cytie, and cryed loud and lamentably, & came befoze the kynges gate: but he myght not entre within ỹ kynges gate, because he had sack cloth on. And in all lãdes, coũtrees, & places, as farre as the kynges wozde and cõmaundment extended, there was greate lamẽtaciõ amõg the Jewes, fasting, weping, and mourning, and many laye in sack clothes & i asches. So Esthers damosels and her chãberlaynes, came & told it her. Then was the quene exceadyngly astonned. And she sent raymẽt, that
B Mardocheus shulde put on, ãd laye the sack cloth from him. But Mardocheus wold not take them. Then called Esther Hathath one of the kynges chamberlaynes (whych stode befoze her) and gaue him a commaundment vnto Mardocheus, ỹ he might knowe what it were, wherfoze he dyd so. So Hathat wẽt fozth to Mardocheus vnto the strete of ỹ cytie, whych was befoze the kynges gate.

And Mardocheus tolde him of all ỹ had happened vnto him, ãd of the summe of syluer ỹ Haman had promised to weye downe into ỹ kynges treasury, because of ỹ Jewes yf he wolde destroye thẽ (& he gaue hym the coppe of the kynges commaundement, that was deuysed at Susan, to destroye thẽ, that he might shewe it vnto Esther) ãd to speake to her, and charge her, that she shuld go in to
C the kyng, and make her prayer and supplicacion vnto him foz her people.

And whẽ Hathath came in, he told Esther the wozdes of Mardocheus. And agayne, Esther spake vnto Hathath, & commaunded him to saye vnto Mardocheus: all the kynges seruauntes, & the people in the landes of the kynge, knowe that whosoeuer commeth within the court vnto the kyng, whether it be man oz woman, whych is not called, ỹ cõmaundment is, ỹ the same shall dye, excepte the

the kynge holde out the golden scepter vnto vs him * (in token of graciousnes) foz then he shall lyue. As foz me, I haue not bene called to come into the kyng now this thyztie dayes.

And they certifyed Mardocheus of Esthers wozdes, & Mardocheus bad saye agayne vnto Esther, thynke not to saue thyne awne lyfe, while thou art in ỹ kynges house, befoze all Jewes: foz yf ỹ holdest thy peace at this tyme, thẽ shall the Jewes haue helpe and deliueraũce out of another place, & thou
D & thy fathers house shalbe destroyed. And who knoweth whether thou art come to the kyngdom, foz this causes sake? Esther bad thẽ gene Mardocheus this answer: Go thou thy waye, ãd gether together all the Jewes that are found at Susan, and fast ye foz me, that ye eat not and dzynke not in thze dayes, nether daye noz nyght. I and my damosels will fast lykewise, and so will I go into the kyng, which thing yet, is contrary to the cõmaundment: and yf I perishe, I perishe. So Mardocheus went his waye, & dyd all that E Esther had commaunded him.

¶ The. v. Chapter.

¶ Esther entreth into the kyng and byddeth hym and Haman to a feast. Haman prepareth a galouse for Mardocheus.

A And on the thyzde daye it foztuned, that Esther put on her royall apparell, & stode in the court of the kynges palace within, ouer agaynst ỹ kynges house. And the kyng sate vpon his royall seate in the kynges palace ouer agaynst the gate of the house. And when the kyng sawe Esther the quene standyng in the court, she found grace in hys syght. And the kyng held out the golden scepter that was in his hande towarde Esther. So Esther stepte fozth, and touched the toppe of the scepter. Then sayde the kynge vnto her: What wylt thou quene
B Esther? and what requyrest thou? aske euen the halfe of the empire, and it shall be geuen the. And Esther answered. If it please the kyng, let the kyng & Haman come this daye vnto the bancket, that I haue prepared foz hym. And the kyng sayde: cause Haman to make hast, that he maye do as Esther hath sayde.

So the kyng & Haman came to the banket ỹ Esther had prepared, & the kyng sayde vnto Esther at the bancket of wyne: what is thy peticyon? that it maye be geuen the. And what requyrest thou? If it be euen the halfe of the empire, it shalbe done.

C Then answered Esther, and sayd, my peticion and desyze is, yf I haue founde grace in the syght of the kyng, and yf it please the kyng, to geue me my peticiõ, & to fulfyll my requeste, then let the kyng & Haman come to the bancket ỹ I shall prepare foz thẽ, and so will I do tomozow, as the kyng hath sayde.

Then went Haman fozth the same daye ioyfull and mery in his mynde. And whẽ the same Hamã sawe Mardocheus in ỹ kynges gate, ỹ he stode not vp & kneled befoze hym, he was full of indignacion at Mardocheus. Neuertheles, Haman refrayned him selfe: & whẽ he came home, he sent, and called foz his frendes, & zares his wyfe, and Haman tolde them of the glozy of his ryches, and the multitude of his children, & all together howe ỹ
D kyng had pzomoted him so greatly, ãd howe that he had set him aboue the princes ãd seruauntes of the kyng. Hamã sayd moreouer: Yee & Esther ỹ quene dyd let no man come in with the kyng vnto the bancket that she had pzepared, excepte me, & tomozow am I bidden vnto her also with the kyng. But in all this am I not satisfyed, as lõge as I se Mardocheus the Jewe syttynge at the kynges gate. Then sayd zares hys wyfe and all hys frẽdes vnto him: Let them make a galowse of fyftye cubites hye, and tomozow speake thou vnto ỹ kyng, that Mardocheus maye be hanged theron, & go thou in merely with the kynge vnto the bancket. And Haman was wel content with all, & caused the galowes to be made.

¶ The. vj. Chapter.

¶ The kyng turneth ouer the Chronycles & fyndeth the fidelite of Mardocheus, and then to the confusion of Haman, commaundeth Mardocheus to be had in honoure.

A The same nyght could not the king slepe, and he commaunded to bzyng the Chzonicles and stozyes: whych when they were red befoze the kyng they happened on the place where it was wzytten, how *Esther. ii. D. *Mardocheus had told that Bigthana and Theres ỹ kynges two chãberlaynes (which kept the thzeholdes) sought, to laye handes on kyng Ahasuerus. And the kyng sayd: what wozshyppe & good haue we done to Mardocheus therfoze? Then sayde the kynges seruauntes that mynistred vnto hym: There is nothynge at all done foz hym. And
B the kyng sayde: Who is in the courte? (foz Haman was gone into the court wythout befoze ỹ kynges house, that he myght speake vnto the kynge to hange Mardocheus on ỹ tre (that he had pzepared foz hym.) And the kynges seruauntes sayde vnto hym: beholde, Haman standeth without in the court. And ỹ kyng sayd: let him come in. And when Haman came in, the kyng sayd vnto hym: what shall be done vnto the man, whom the C ỹ kynge wolde fayne bzynge vnto wozshippe? Haman thought in his hert: Whom desyreth the kyng to bzyng vnto wozshippe more then me? And Haman answered the kyng: Let the man whõ the kyng pleaseth to bzing vnto wozshippe, be bzought hyther, that he maye be arayed with the royall garmentes which the kyng vseth to weare: & the hozse ỹ the kyng rydeth vpon, and that the crowne royall maye be set vpō his heed. And let this rayment and horse be delyuered vnder the hand of one of the kynges princes, that they maye araye the man withall (whō the kyng is disposed to bring to honoure) & cary hym vpō the horse thorow the strete of the cytie, ād proclayme before him: thus shalt it be done to the man, whom the kynge pleaseth to bring to honoure.

And the kyng sayde: make hast, and take as thou hast sayde, the rayment & the horse: and do euē so vnto Mardocheus the Jewe, ꝑ sytteth before the kynges gate, & let nothing fayle of all that thou hast spoken. Then toke Haman the rayment & the horse, and arayed Mardocheus, ād brought him on horsbacke thorow the strete of ꝑ cytie, and proclaymed before him: Euen thus shall it be done vnto ꝑ man whō the kyng is disposed to honoure. And Mardocheus came agayne to the kynges gate, but Haman gat hym home in all ꝑ hast mournynge bare headed, ād tolde zares his wyfe and all hys frendes, euery thing ꝑ had happened him. Then sayd his wyse men and zares his wyfe vnto him: If ꝑ be Mardocheus, of the sede of ꝑ Jewes, before whō thou hast begonne to fall, thou shalt not preuayle agaynst hym, but shalt surely fall before him. And whyle they were yet talkyng with him, came the kynges chamberlaynes, & caused Haman to make hast, to come vnto the bancket that Esther had prepared.

¶ The. vij. Chapter.

¶ The quene bydeth the kyng & Haman agayne, and prayeth for her selfe and her people. She accuseth Haman, & he hys hanged on the gallowse, whych he had prepared for Mardocheus.

AND the kyng and Haman came into the bancket that quene Esther had prepared, and the kyng sayd vnto Esther on the seconde daye at the bancket of wyne: what is thy petition (quene Esther) that it maye be geuen the? And what requyrest thou? Yee, aske euē half of the empyre, & it shall be donē. And Esther the quene answered, & sayd: If I haue found grace in thy syght (O kyng) and yf it please the kyng, then graunt me my lyfe at my desyre and my people, for my petitions sake: for we are solde, I & my people, to be destroyed, to be slayne & to perishe. And wold God we were solde to be bondmen and bond wemen, B then wold I hold my tonge: For the enemye pondreth not the kynges harme. The kynge Ahasuerus answered, and sayde vnto quene Esther: who is he? And where is he, ꝑ darre presume in hys mynde, to do after ꝑ maner? And Esther sayd: the enemye and aduersary is this wicked Haman.

C Haman, was exceadingly afrayed before the kyng and the quene. And the kynge arose from the bancket and from the wyne in hys displeasure, & went into the palace garden.

And Hamā stode vp, & besought quene Esther for his lyfe: for he sawe, that there was a mischefe prepared for him of ꝑ kig all ready.

And when the kyng came agayne out of D the palace garden into the place where they dranke wyne, Haman had layed him vpō ꝑ bed, ꝑ Esther sat vpō. Then sayd the kyng: wyll he force the quene also before me in the house? As sone as that worde went out of ꝑ kynges mouth they couered Hamans D face. And Harbona one of the chāberlaynes that stode before the kyng, sayde: Beholde, there standeth a galowes in Hamans house fyftie cubytes hye, whych he had made for Mardocheus, that spake good for the kyng. The kyng sayde: hang him theron. So they hanged Haman on the galowes, that he had made for Mardocheus. Then was the kynges wrath pacified.

¶ The. viij. Chapter.

¶ After the deeth of Haman is Mardocheus exalted, and then are ther comfortable letters sent vnto the Jewes.

THE same daye dyd kyng Ahasuerus geue the house of Haman the A Jewes enemye, vnto quene Esther. And Mardocheus came before ꝑ king: for Esther tolde, howe that he belonged vnto her. And the kyng put of his fynger rynge, whych he had taken frō Haman, & gaue it vnto Mardocheus. And Esther set Mardocheus ouer ꝑ house of Haman. And Esther spake yet more before the kyng: & fell downe at his fete weepyng, & besought him, that he wold put awaye ꝑ wickednes of Haman the Agagite, and hys deuyce that he had ymagined agaynst the Jewes. And ꝑ kynge (according to the maner) helde out ꝑ golden scepter toward Esther. (wherby was declared a token of graciousnes.) Then rose Esther, and stode before the kynge, and sayd: yf it please the kyng, & yf I haue found grace in his syght, and yf it be acceptable before the kynge, then let it be wrytte, that the letters of the deuyce of Hamam the sonne of Hamadatha the Agagite, maye be called agayne: whych letters he wrote, to destroye the Jewes, which are in all the kynges landes. For how can I suffre and se the euell, that shall C happen vnto my people? Or how can I loke vpon the destruccion of my kynred?

And ꝑ kyng Ahasuerus sayd vnto quene Esther, & to Mardocheus ꝑ Jewe: Behold, I haue geuen Esther ꝑ house of Hamā, whō they haue hanged vpō a tre, because he layed hand vpon the Jewes. Wryte ye also for the Jewes, as it lyketh you i the kynges name, & seale it with the kynges ryng (for the wrytynges that were wrytten in the kynges name, and sealed with the kynges rynge, durst D no man dysanull.) Then were the kynges scribes called at ꝑ same tyme, euē in ꝑ thirde moneth moneth, that is the moneth * Siuan, on the thre and twentyeth daye.

And it was written (accordynge to all as Mardocheus commaūded) vnto the Jewes, and to the princes, to the Debitres and captaynes in the landes which are frō India vntill Ethiopia, namely an hundred and seuen and twentye landes, vnto euery one accordynge to the writing therof, & vnto euery D people after theyr speche, & to the Jewes accordynge to theyr wrytinge and language.

And he wrotte in ꝑ kinge Ahasuerus name, and sealed it with the kynges ringe. And by postes that rode vpon horses, and swyfte pong Mules, sent he the wrytinges, wherin the kyng graūted the Jewes (in what cyties soeuer they were) to gather them selues together, and to stande for their lyfe, and for to rote out, to slaye, & to destroye all the power of the people and land that wold trouble thē. with chyldren and wemē, and to spoyle their good vpon one daye in all the lādes of kyng Ahasuerus, namely vpō the thyrteenth daye of the twelueth moneth, which is the moneth * Adar.

The some of the wrytynge was, how there shulde be a commaundment geuē in all landes and published amōg all people, and that the Jewes shulde be ready agaynst that daye, and to auenge them selues on their enemyes. And so the postes that rode vpon the swift horses and Mules, made hast with all spede, to execute ꝑ kinges worde: & ꝑ cōmaūdement was deuised in Susan ꝑ cheefe cytie.

And Mardocheus went out (from the pa- * lace and) from the kynge, in royall apparell of yelow and whyte, and with a great crowne of golde, beyng arayed with a garmēt of sylke and purple, and the cytie of Susan reioyced and was glad: and vnto the Jewes there * was come (anew) lyght and gladnesse, ioye and worshippe. In all landes & cyties, into what places soeuer the kynges worde ād cōmaundemēt reched, there was ioye & myrth, prosperite & good dayes among the Jewes: in somoch, that many of the people in the lāde became of the Jewes beleefe, and the feare of the Jewes came vpon them.

The. ix. Chapter.

¶ At the commaundement of the kynge, the Jewes put their aduersaries to deeth. The sonnes of Haman are hanged. The Jewes kepe a feast daye in remembraunce of their deliueraunce.

AN the twelueth moneth, that is the moneth Adar, vpō the thirteenth daye of the same, whan ꝑ kynges worde and commaundement shulde be done, euen vpon the same daye that the enemyes shulde haue destroyed the Jewes to haue oppressed thē, it turned cōtrary wyse, euen that the Jewes shulde subdue their enemyes. For then gathered ꝑ Jewes together in their cyties wythin all ꝑ landes of kynge Ahasuer⁹, to laye hand on soch as wolde do them euell, and no man coulde withstand them: for the feare of them was come ouer all people. And all the rulers in the landes, and princes & Debites, & officers of the kyng, promoted the Jewes, for the feare of Mardocheus came vpō thē. For Mardocheus was greate in the kynges house, and the reporte of him was noysed in all landes, how he increased and grewe.

Thus ꝑ Jewes smote all theyr enemyes 25 with a sore slaughter, and slewe & destroyed, and dyd after their wyll vnto soche as were their aduersaries. And at Susan ꝑ cheefe cytie slewe the Jewes, and destroyed fyue hundreth men: & slewe Pharsandatha, Dalphon Aspatha, Phoratha, Adalia, Aridatha, Pharmastha, Arisai, Aridai, ād Vaizatha, the ten sonnes of Hamā the sonne of Hamadata the enemye of ꝑ Jewes: but on his goodes they layed no handes. At the same tyme was the kyng certyfied of the nōbre of those that were slayne in ꝑ cyte of Susan. And C the kyng sayde vnto quene Esther. The Jewes haue slayne ād destroyed fyue hundreth men in the cytie of Susan, & the ten sonnes of Haman. What haue they done thynke ſt ꝑ in the other landes of the kynge? And what is thy peticion, that it maye be geuen the? or what requirest thou more to be done? Esther answered: If it please ꝑ kynge, let him suffre the Jewes tomorow also to do accordynge vnto thys dayes commaūdement, that they maye hang Hamans ten sonnes vpō the tre. And the kynge charged to do so, ād the commaundement was deuised at Susan, & they hanged Hamans ten sonnes. For the Jewes that were in Susan gathered thē selues together, vpon the fourteenth daye of the moneth Adar, & slew thre hūdreth mē at Susā, but on their goodes they layed no handes.

As for the other Jewes that were in the kynges landes, they came together, ād stode for their lyues, ꝑ they myght haue rest from their enemies: & slew of their enemyes fyue and seuentye thousand, howbeit, they layed no hādes on their goodes. This they dyd on D the thirteenth daye of the moneth Adar, and on the fourteenth daye of the same moneth rested they, which daye they helde vō feastinge ād gladnesse. But the Jewes ꝑ were at Susan, came together both on the thyrteēth daye and on the fourteenth, and on the fyfteenth daye of the same they rested, and helde that daye with feastyng and gladnes. And therfore the Jewes that dwelt in ꝑ villages and vnwalled townes, helde the fourteenth daye of the moneth Adar, with gladnes and feastynge, and kepte holy daye, and euery one sent gyftes vnto another.

And Mardocheus wrote these actes, and sent the

sent the writynges vnto all the Jewes that were in all the landes of kynge Ahasuerus, both nye & farre that they shuld make a law among them selues & holde the fourteenth ād fiftēth daye of the moneth Adar, as ẏ dayes
E wherin the Jewes came to rest frō their enemyes, and as a moneth wherin their payne was turned to ioye, & their sorowe into a holy daye, & that in those dayes they shuld make feastes and gladnes, & one to sende gyftes vnto another, & to distribute vnto the poore.

And the Jewes were cōtent with it ẏ they had begonne to do, and ẏ Mardoche' wrote vnto them: how that Hamā the sonne of Hamadatha all the Jewes enemy, had deuised against ẏ Jewes, how he might destroye thē ād caused to cast Phur (that is a Lot) for to put them in feare, & to bryng thē to naught: & how hester went, and spake to the kynge, ẏ thorowe letters his wicked deuyce (which he ymagined agaynst ẏ Jewes) myght be turned vpō his awne heed, & how hee & his sonnes were hanged on the tre. For the which cause they called this daye Phurim, because of the name of the lott, ād because of all the wordes of this writing: & what they thē selues had sene, & what had happened vnto thē.

F And the Jewes set it vp, and toke it vpō them and their sede, ād vpon all soch as ioyned them selues vnto them, that they wolde not misse but obserue these two dayes yerely, accordynge as they were wrytten and appoynted, how that these dayes are not to be forgotten, but to be kepte of childers childrē among all kynredes in all lādes and cyties. They are the dayes of Phurim, which are not to be ouerslipte among the Jewes, & the memoriall of them ought not to perisshe frō their sede.

And quene Esther the daughter of Abihail and Mardocheus the Jew wrote w̄ all auctorite (to confirme this seconde writting of Phurim) and sent the letters vnto all the Jewes in the hundreth & seuen and twentye landes of the empyre of Ahasuerus, w̄ frēdly and faythfull wordes, to confirme these dayes of Phurim, in their tyme appoynted, accordynge as Mardocheus the Jew & Esther the quene had appoynted them. And they bound their soule and their sede to fasting, &
G prayer. And Esther stablished the wordes of these lottes, as it is written in the boke.

And the kynge Ahasuerus layed trybute vpon the lande, and vpon the Iles of the see. And all that he dyd by his power and auctorite, & the great worshippe of Mardocheus, which the kyng gaue him, be they not written in the Chronycles of the kynges of Media and Persia? For Mardocheus the Jewe was the seconde next vnto kyng Ahasuerus and greate among the Jewes, and accepted among the multitude of his brethrē, as one ẏ seketh the welth of his people, and speaketh the best for all hys sede.

The ende of the boke of Esther.

The.ij. Chapter.

Job ys plaged wyth sore byles, and afterward ys mocked of hys wyfe. Hys frendes vysyte hym, & haue compassyon of hym.

A And the childzen of God came and stode before the Lorde, and Satan came also amonge them, and stode before the Lorde. And the Lord sayde vnto Satā: From whence commest thou? Satan answered the Lorde, and sayde: I haue gone about the lād, and walcked thorowe it.

And the Lorde sayde vnto Satan: hast ẏ not consydered my seruaunt Job? for there is none lyke him in the land. For he is a perfect and iust man, loch a one as feareth God, and eschueth euell, & contynueth styll in hys godlynesse. And thou mouedest me agaynst him, ẏ I shulde punyth him for naught. And Satan answered the Lord, & sayde: Skyn for skynne? yee, a man wyll geue all that euer he hath, for his lyfe. But laye thyne hād now vpon him, and touch once his bone and flesh, and he shall curse the to thy face. And ẏ Lorde sayde vnto Satan: lo, there hast thou hym in thy power, but spare hys lyfe.

So went Satan forth from the presence of the Lord, and smote Job with maruelous sore byles, from the sole of hys fote vnto hys crowne: so that he sat vpon the groūd in the asshes, and scraped of the fylth of hys sores with a potsherde.

Then sayde hys wyfe vnto hym: * Dost C

Now when Jobs frendes hearde of all the trouble, that happened vnto hym, there came thre of them, euery one from hys awne place: namely, Eliphas the Themanite, Bildad the Suhite, & Zophad the Naamathite.

And they were agreed together to come, D to shewe their compassion vpon him, and to comforte hym. So when they lyfte vp theyr eyes a farre of, they knewe him not.

Job answered, and sayde: lost be that daye, wherī I was borne, and the nyght, in the which it was sayde: there is a man chylde conceaued. The same daye be turned to darckenes, and not regarded of God from aboue, nether lett hym shyne vpon it with lyght, but let it be stayned with darcknesse, and the shadowe of death. Let the dymme cloude fall vpon it, and lett it be lapped in with sorowe on the daye tyme. Let the darcke storme ouercome that nyght, and lett it not be ioyned vnto the dayes of the yeare, ner counted in the monethes. Desolate be that night, and without gladnesse, lett them that curse the daye, and that be ready to rayse vp mournyng, geue it also their curse. Let the starres of that night be dymme thorow darcknesse of it. Let it loke for lyght, but lett it se none, nether ☞ the ℣ rysynge vp of the fayre morynge: because it shut not vp the wombe that bare me. For then shulde these sorowes haue bene hyd frō myne eyes.

*Jere.xx.d Alas, *why dyed I not in ꝑ byrth? Why dyd not I perysh, as sone as I came oute of my mothers wombe? Why set they me vpō their knees? Why gaue they me suck with theyr brestes? ¶Eliphas reprehendeth Iob becauſe he aſcribeth wyſdome and purenes to hym ſelfe. He deſcribeth the curſe that falleth on the wycked, reckenyng Iob to be one of that nombre.

Then answered Eliphas the Themanite, and sayd: Shal a wyse mans answer be the spyence of the wynde, and fil any mans Bely as it were with the wynde of the east? Shal he reprone wt a word, that is nothyng worth: and speake the thinges, which can do no good? As for shame, thou hast sett it alyde, elles woldest thou not make so many wordes before God: but thy wyckednesse teacheth thy mouth, and so thou hast chosen the a craftye tonge. Thyne awne mouth condempneth the, and not I: yee, thyne awne lyppes shape an answer agaynst the. Art thou the fyrste man, that euer was borne? Or, wast thou made before the hylles? hast thou hearde the secrete councell of God, that all wysdome is to lytle for the? What knowest thou, ỹ we knowe not? And what vnderstandest thou, but we can the same? With vs are both olde and aged men, yee, such as haue lyued longer then thy father.

Thynckest thou it a small thynge of the consolacyons of God? with the is a lyenge word. Why doth thyne hert so bewytch the? And wherfore wynckest thou wyth thyne eyes, that thy mynde is so pufft vp agaynst God, and lettest such wordes go oute of thy mouth? What is man, ỹ he shulde be cleane? what hath he (which is borne of a woman) wherby he myght be righteous? *Behold, he doth not trust hys sayntes: yee, the very heauens are not cleane in hys syght. When he goeth forth to get his lyuying, he seeth plainely, that the daye of darcknesse is at hande. Sorowe and carefulnesse wyll make hym afrayed, and compasse hym rounde aboute, lyke as it were a kynge with hys hoost ready to the batayll. For he hath stretched out hys hande agaynst God, and armed hym selfe agaynst the almyghtye. He runneth proudly vpon hym, and with a styff necke fyghteth he agaynst hym: where as he couereth hys face with fatnesse, and maketh hys body well lykynge. Therfore shall hys dwellynge be in desolate cyties, and in houses which no man inhabyteth, but are become heapes of stones.

He shall not be riche, nether shall hys substaunce contynue, ner encrease vpon earthe. He shall neuer come oute of darcknesse, the flame shall drye vp hys braunches: with the blast of the mouth of God shall he be taken awaye. He beleueth not that he is in vanyte, and yet he is out of the waye, and vanyte shalbe hys recompence.

He shall peryth, afore hys tyme be worne out, and hys braunche shall not be grene. He shalbe plucked of as an vntymely grape frō the vyne, & shall lett his floure fall, as the olyue doth. ## The.xvj.Chapter.

Job repeatynge hys mysery, sayeth that he suffereth more then hys wyckednesse hath deserued.

Job answered, and sayde: I haue oft tymes hearde such thynges. Wyserable geuers of comforte are ye, all the sorte of you. Shall not vayne wordes come yet to an ende? Or, hast thou yet eny more to saye? I coulde speake, as ye do also. But wold God, that youre soule were in my soules steade: then shuld I heape vp wordes agaynst you, and shake my heade at you. I shuld comforte you with my mouthe, and release youre payne with the talkyng of my lippes. (But what shall I do) For all my wordes, my sorow wyll ceasse: and though I holde my tonge, yet wyll it not departe from me. But now that God hath sente me aduersytie, thou hast troubled all my congregacyon. And that thou hast fylled me wyth wrynckles, my flesche is recorde, and my leanesse rysseth vp agaynst me, and beareth wytnesse agaynst me. My face is swollen with weppynge, and in myne eyes is the shadow of death. Howbeit, there is no wyckednesse in my handes, but my prayer is cleane. O earth (couer not thou my blounde, and let my crye nenge fynde no rowme. For lo, my witnesse is in heauen: & he that knoweth me, is aboue in the heygth: My frendes geue me many wordes, to scorne, and myne eye poureth out teares vnto God. O that a body might pleate with God, as one man doth with another, yet the nombre of my yeares is come, and the waye that I must go is at hande, from whence I shall not turne agayne.

The.xvij.Chapter.

Job sayth that he consumeth awaye, and yet doth patiently abyde yt.

My breth stincketh, my dayes are shortened. I am harde at deathes doze. Froward men are wt me, and myne eye must continue in the bitternesse of them. O deliuer me, and loke out one to be my suertie in thy sight, what is he that knoweth who will promes for me? For thou hast with holden their hertes from vnderstandynge, therfore shalt thou not sett (them) vp on hye. He promiseth his frendes parte of his good, but his awne children spende it. He hath made me as it were a byworde of the people: where as afore, I was theyr iape. Myne eye is dymme, for very heupnesse, & all my strēgth is become like a shadow. Certuous mē therfore shall well consyder this, and the innocēt shall take parte agaynst the ypocrite.

The righteous also will kepe hys waye, and he that hath cleane handes, wyll euer be stronger and stronger. As for you, turne you, and get you hence (I praye you) seynge I cannot fynde one wyse man amonge you: My dayes are past, and my councels and thoughtes of my hart are vanysched awaye chaungynge the night into daye, and ỹ light into darcknes. Though I tary neuer so moch, yet the graue is my house, and I haue made my bed in the darcke. I call corrupcyon my father, and the wormes call I my mother and my syster. What helpeth then my longe tarynge? Or, who hath considred the thynge, that I loke for? All that I haue, shall go downe into the pytt, and lye with me in the dust.

The.xviij.Chapter.

Baldad reherseth the paynes of the vnfaythfull and wycked.

Then answered Baldad the Suhite, and sayde: (when wyll ye make an ende of youre wordes? Marcke well, and then we wyll speake. Wherfore are we counted as beastes, & reputed so vyle in youre sight? He destroied him selfe with his anger: Shal the earth be forsaken, or any stone remoued out of his place because of the? Yee, the light of the vngodly shall be put out: and the sparke of hys fyre shall not burne. The lyght shalbe darcke in his dwelling, and his candle shalbe put out with him. His presumpteous goinges are kepte in, and his awne councell shall cast him downe. For his fete are taken as it were in the nett, and he is at his wittes ende. His fote shalbe holden in the snare, and it shall catch them that be thyrsty of blounde: The snare is layed for him in the grounde, and a pytfall in the waye.

Fearfulnesse shall make him afrayed on euery syde, that he shall not knowe, where to get out. Honger shalbe his strength: mysfortune shall hange vpon him. He shall eate the strength of his awne skynne, euē ỹ fyrst borne of death shall eate his strength. His hope shalbe roted out of his dwellynge, very ferfulnesse shall bringe him (to the kyng. Other men shal dwell in his house (but shalbe none of his) and brymstone shalbe scatered vpon his habitacyon. His rotes shalbe dried vp beneth, and aboue shall his braunch be cutt downe. His remembraunce shall perysshe from ỹ earth, and he shall haue no name in the strete: they shall dryue him from ỹ light into darcknesse, and cast him cleane out of the worlde. He shall nether haue childrē nor kynsfolckes amonge his people, no, ner eny posterite in his dwellinges. They that come after hym, shalbe astonied at his daye, and they that go before, shall be afrayed. Such are now the dwellynges of the wycked, and this is the place of hym ỹ knoweth not God.

Then answered Sophar the Naa-cause do my thoughtes compell me to answere. And why? my mynde is ready within me. I haue sufficiently herde thy checking and reproke, therfore am I pur-posed to make answere after myne vnderstandynge. Knowest thou not this, namely:

that from the begynnyng (euer sence ꝑ creāgodly hath bene shorte, and that the ioye of ypocrites continued but the twynclynge of thing that other men haue laboured for, shall he restore agayne, and shall not eate it vp.

Greate trauayle shall he make for ryches, but he shall not enioye them. And why? he

Here ende the wozdes of Job:

The.xxxij. Chapter.

Elihu after the other had fynyshed theyr communicatyon, reproueth them of folyshnes. Age maketh not a man wyse, but the spzete of God,

SO these thze men wolde stryue no moze with Job, because he helde hym selfe a ryghteous mā. But Elihu the sonne of Barachell the Bussyte of the kynred of Ram, was very soze displeased at Job, because he called hym selfe iust before God. And with Jobs thze frendes he was angry also, because they had founde no reasonable answere to ouercome Job. Now taried Elihu, tyll they had ended theyr communicacion with Job, foz why, they were elder then he. So when Elihu the sonne of Barachel the Bussyte sawe, that these thze men were not able to make Job answere, he was myscontent: Elihu the sonne of Barachel the Bussite answered hym selfe, and sayde: * Consideringe, that I am younge, and ye be men of age, I was afrayed, and durst not shew fozth my mynde, Foz I thought thus within my selfe, It becommeth olde men to speake, ād the aged to teach wysdome. Euery man (no doute) hath a mynde, but * it is the inspiracō of the Almyghty that geueth vnderstandinge. Great men are not all waye wyse, nether doth euery aged man vnderstande the thynge that is lawfull. Therfoze will I speake also (heare me) and I wyll shew you also myne vnderstandinge. Foz when I had wayted tyll ye made an ende of youre talkynge, and hearde youre wysdome, what argumentes ye made in youre communicacyon: yee, when I had diligently pondzed what ye sayde, I founde not one of you that made any good argument agaynst Job, that directly coulde make answere vnto his wozdes: lest ye shulde saye. We haue founde out wysdome: God shall cast hym downe, and no man. He hath not spoken vnto me, and I wyll not answere hym as ye haue done (foz they were so abashed, that they coulde not make ānswere, noz speake one wozde) but in so moche as ye wyll not speake, standynge styll lyke dom me men, and makynge no answere: I haue a good hope foz my parte to shape hym an answere, and to shewe him my meanynge: Foz I am full of wozdes, and the spzete that is within me, compelleth me.

Beholde, my belly is as the wyne, which hath no vente, and burfteth the new vessels in sunder. Therfoze will I speake ꝑ I may haue a vēte: I will open my lyppes, & make answere. I will regarde no maner of personne, no man will I spare. Foz * yf I wold go about to pleasle men, I knowe not howe sone my maker wolde take me awaye:

The.xxxiij. Chapter.

Elihu sheweth wherin Job offendeth, wyth God may we not strybe, nor curiously searche out hys worckes.

WHerfoze, heare my wozdes (O Job) and herken vnto me all that I will saye: Beholde, I haue now opened my mouth, my tonge hath spoken in my thzote. My hert doth ozdze my wozdes a ryght, and my lyppes talke of pure wysdome. The spzyte of God hath made me, ād * the bzeth of the Almyghtye hath geuen me my lyfe. If thou canst, then geue me answere: pzepare thy selfe to stande before me face to face. Beholde, before God am I euē as thou, foz I am fashyoned and made euen of the same mould. Therfoze, thou nedest not to be afrayed of me, nether nedest thou to feare, that my auctozyte shalbe to heuy foz the. Now hast thou spoken in myne eares, and I haue herde the voyce of thy wozdes: I am cleane wythout any faute, I am innocent, and there is no wyckednes in me. But lo, he hath picked a quarell agaynst me, and taketh me foz hys enemy: * he hath put my fote in the stockes, and loketh narowly vnto all my pathes. Beholde, in thys hast thou not done ryght. I wyll make answere vnto the, that God is moze then man. And why doest thou then stryue agaynst him: foz he shall not geue the accomptes of all hys wozdes. Foz whē God doth once cōmaunde a thynge, there shulde no man be curyous, to searche whether it be ryght. * In dreames and vysions of the nyght (when slombzing commeth vpon men, that they fall a slepe in their beddes) he roundeth them in the eares, he infourmeth thē, and sheweth them playnely, that it is he, whych withdzaweth man from cuyll, delyuereth hym from pryde, kepeth hym from the graue, and hys lyfe from the swearde. He chasteneth hym wyth sycknesse, and bzyngeth hym to his bed: he layeth soze punyshement vpon hys bones, so that hys lyfe maye awaye wyth no bzed, and his soule abhozreth to eat any dayntie meat: In so moch that hys body is cleane consumed awaye, and his bones appeare no moze. Hys lyfe dzaweth on to the graue, and hys lyfe to death. Now, yf there be a messenger (one amonge a thousande) sent foz to speake vnto man, and to shewe him the ryght waye: then the Lozde is mercyfull vnto hym, ād sayeth: He shalbe delyuered, that he fall not downe to the graue, foz I am sufficiently reconcyled. Than shall hys flesh be as well lykyng as it was afoze, and shalbe as it was in hys youth. Foz yf he submytte hym selfe vnto God, he shalbe gracious vnto him, ād shewe him his countenaunce ioyfully, & rewardeth man foz his ryghteousnes. Soch a respecte hath he vnto men. Therfoze, let a man confesse (and saye) I haue offended: I dyd vnryghteously, and it hath done me no good. Yee, he hath delyuered my soule from destruccyon, and my lyfe shall se the lyght. Lo, thus wozcketh God all waye with mā, that he kepeth hys soule from perishing, and letteth hym enioye the lyght of the lyuynge. Marcke well (O Job) and heare me: holde the styll, and I will speake. But yf thou hast any thynge to saye, then answere me, and speake, foz thy answere pleaseth me. If thou hast nothinge, then heare me, and holde thy tonge, so shall I teach the wisdome.

The.xxxiiij. Chapter.

Elihu mayneth the iustyce of God, whych iudgeth the worlde, and gouerneth all.

ELihu pzoceadynge fozth in hys answere, sayd: Heare my wozdes (O ye wyse men) herkē vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandynge. Foz the eare pzoueth ād discerneth the wozdes, * and ꝑ mouth tasteth ꝑ meates: As foz iudgement, let vs seke it out amonge oure selues, that we may knowe what is good. And why? Job hath sayde: I am ryghteous, but God doth me wzonge. I must neades be a lyer, though my cause me ryght, and violently I am plaged where as I made no faut: where is there soch a one as Job, that ☞ dzinketh vp scoznefulnes lyke water? whych goeth in the company of wycked doers, and walketh wyth vngodly men? Foz he hath sayed: Though a man be good, yet is he naught before God. Therfoze herken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandynge.

Farre be it from God, that he shuld medle wyth wickednesse: and farre be it from the Almyghtye, that he shulde medle wyth vnryghteous dealynge: * Foz he shall reward the wozckes of man, and cause euery man to fynde accozdynge to his wayes. Foz sure it is, that * God condemneth no man wzongefully, and the iudgement of the Almyghtye is not vnryghteous. Who ruleth ꝑ earth in his steade? Oz, whom hath he sett to gouerne the whole wozlde? To whom hath he geuen hys herte, foz to dzawe hys spzete and breth vnto hym? All flesh shall come together vnto naught, and all men shall turne agayne vnto * dust. If thou now haue vnderstandyng, heare what I saye, and herken to the voyce of my wozdes:

Waye he be a ruler, that loueth no ryght? Oz maye he that is a very innocent man, do vngodly? Is it reason, ꝑ thou shuldest saye to the kynge: Thou art wicked, oz, thou art vngodly, and that before the pzynces? * He hath no respecte vnto the personnes, of the lozdly, and regardeth not the ryche moze then the pooze. Foz they be all the wozcke of hys handes. shalbe suffred to go into indgement wt God.

Many one: yee innumerable doth he punyshe, & setteth other in their steades. Therfore shall he declare their worckes, he shall turne the nyght, and they shall be destroyed. They that were in ỹ steade of Sears, dealt lyke vngodly men: and therfore he punyshed them, because they turned back from hym, and wolde not consyder all hys wayes. In so moch that they haue caused the voyce of the pooze to come vnto hym, ād now he heareth the complaynte of soche as are in trouble. If he graunte pardon, who wyll condemne? And yf he hyde awaye hys countenaunce, who shalbe able to se it? whether it be to the people oz to any man, thus wyll he do. Foz the vngodlynesse of the people, doth God make an ypocrite to reygne, ouer them. Foz so moch then as I haue begōne to talke of God, I will not hyndze ỹ. If I haue gone amysse, enfourme thou me: yf I haue done wzōge, I will leaue of. Can he do nothinge without the? Foz thou hast repzoued hys iudgemēt. Thou also hast thyne awne mynde ād not I. But speake on what thou knowest. Let men of vnderstondyng tell me, and let a wyse man herken vnto me. As foz Job, he hath nether spoken to the purpose noz wisely. O father, let Job be well tryed, because he hath answered foz wycked mē: yee, aboue his synne he doth wyckedly: triumpheth amonge vs, and multiplieth hys wozdes agaynst God.

¶ The.xxxv. Chapter.

¶ Whether doth godlynesse profet, oz vngodlynes hurt to God but to man.

A ELihu spake mozeouer, & sayde: Thynkest thou it ryght, that thou sayest: I am ryghtuous before God? Foz thou sayest: What aduauntage will it be vnto the, and what profyt shalt ỹ haue of my synne. Therfore will I geue answere vnto the and to thy companyōs wyth the: loke vnto the heauen, and beholde it: cōsydze the cloudes, whych are hyer then thou. If thou hast synned, what hast thou done a-
B gainst him? If thine offences be many, what hast thou done vnto hym? If thou be ryghtuous what geuest thou him? Oz what will he receaue of thy hand? Of soche an vngodly personne as thou, and of the sonne of man that is ryghtuous as thou pretendest to be: there is a greate cry and complaynte made by them that are oppzessed wyth vyolence, yee, euery man cōplayneth vpō the crueltye
C of tyzauntes. Foz soche a one neuer sayeth: Where is God that made me? & that geueth vs occasion to prayse hym in ỹ nyght: Whych geueth vs moze vnderstādyng then he doth the beastes of the earth, & teacheth vs moze then he doth the fowles of heauen.

If any soch complayne, no man geueth answere, and that because of the wyckednesse of proude tyzauntes. But yf a man call vpon God, doth not he heare him? Doth not the almyghtye accepte his crye? Whan thou D speakest then, shulde not he pardon the, yf ỹ open thy selfe before hym, and put thy trust in hym? Then vseth he no vyolence in hys wzath, nether hath he pleasure in curyous & depe inquysycions. Therfore doth Job open hys mouth but in vayne, and folyshly doth he make so many wozdes.

¶ The.xxxvi. Chapter.

¶ Elihu sheweth wherfore God punyssheth and, correcteth.

A ELihu proceaded forth in hys talkyng, and sayd: holde the A styll a lytle, & I shall shewe ỹ, what I haue yet to speake on Goddes behalfe. I wyll open vnto the yet moze of myne vnderstādynge, & proue my mater ryghteous. And truly, my wozdes shall not be vayne, seynge he is with the that is perfect in knowlege: behold, the greate God casteth awaye no mā, foz he him selfe is myghty in power and wyssoome.

As foz the vngodly, he shall not preserue hym, but shall helpe the pooze to their ryght. He shall turne hys eyes awaye frō the ryghteous, but as kynges shall they be in theyr trone, he shall stablysh them foz euer, & they shalbe exalted. But yf they be layed in presson and cheynes, oz bounde with the bondes of trouble, then wyll he shewe them theyr wozcke, and the synnes wher with they haue vsed cruell vyolence.

He wyth punyshynge and nurtringe of B

serue him, they shall were out theyr dayes in prosperite, and theyr yeares in pleasure and ioye. But yf they wyll not herkē, they shall go thozow the swearde, and perysh oz euer they be aware. As foz soch as be fayned ypocrites, they shall heape vp wzath foz them selues: foz they call not vpon hym, though they be hys presoners. Thus shall theyr soule perysshe in folyshnesse, & theyr lyfe shalbe condēned amōg the foznicatours. The pooze shall he delyuer out of his affliction, & roūde them in the eare whā they be in trouble. Euē so shall he kepe the (yf thou wylt be content) from the bottomlesse pytte that is beneth: & yf thou wylt holde ỹ quyete, he shall fyll thy table wyth plenteousnesse.

Neuerthelesse, thou hast condemned the C iudgement of the vngodly, yee, euen soche a iudgement and sentence shalt thou suffre.

Foz

foz then shall not thy cause be stylled wyth crueltye, noz pacyfyed wyth many gyftes. Thynkest thou, that he wyll regarde thy riches? he shall not care foz golde, ner foz all them that excell in strength. Prolonge not thou ỹ tyme, tyll ther come a nyght foz the, to set other people i thy steade. But bewarre that thou turne not aside to wyckednesse ād synne, which hither to thou hast chosen more thē mekenesse. Behold, God is of a myghtye hye power: Where is there soche a gyde & lawe geuer as he? Who wyll reprzoue hym of hys waye? who wyll saye vnto him: thou hast done wzong?

D Consydze how greate and excellent hys wozckes be, whom all men loue and prayse: yee, wondze at hym, and yet they se hym but afarre of. Beholde, so greate is God, that he passeth oure knowledge, nether are we able to come to the experience of hys yeares. * He turneth the water to small dzoppes, he dryneth hys cloudes together foz to rayne, so ỹ they poure downe and dzoppe vpon men. He can spzede out the cloudes (a couerynge of hys tabernacle) and cause hys lyght to shyne vpon them, and to couer the botome of ỹ see. By these thinges gouerneth he hys people, and geueth them aboundaunce of meate.

Wyth the cloudes he hydeth the lyght, and at hys commaundement it commeth agayne. The rysyng vp therof sheweth he to hys frendes & to the catell.

¶ The.xxxvij. Chapter.

¶ Elihu prouyth that the wysdome of God is vnsearcheable.

A AT this, my hert is astōnied, and moued out of hys place. Heare then the sounde of hys voyce, ād the noyse that goeth out of his mouth. He gouerneth euery thyng vnder the heauen, and his lyght reacheth vnto the ende of the wozlde. A roaring voyce folowyth hym: foz his glozious maiesty geueth soche a thondze clappe, ỹ (though a man heare it) yet maye he not perceaue it afterwarde. Ye geueth an hozryble sownde, when God sendeth oute hys voyce: greate thynges doth he, whych we can not compze
*Psal.cxlvij. hende. * When he commaūdeth the snowe, it falleth vpon the erth: As soone as he geueth the rayne a charge, immediatly the showers haue theyr strength, and fall downe. He sendeth feare vpon euery man, that they myght knowe their awne wozckes. The beestes crepe into theyr dennes, and take theyr rest.
B Out of the south commeth the tempest, and colde out of the nozth.

At the bzeth of God, the frost commeth, and the waters are shed abzode. He maketh the cloudes to do theyr labour in geuynge moystnesse, & agayne wyth his lyght he dryneth awaye the cloude. He distributeth also on euery syde, accozdynge as it pleaseth hym to deale out hys wozckes, that they maye do whatsoeuer he commaundeth them thorow the whole wozlde: whether it be to punysh any lande, oz to doo good vnto them, that seke hym. C

Herken vnto thys (O Job) stande styll, & consydze the wondzous wozckes of God. Art thou of councell wyth God, when he doth these thinges? When he causeth ỹ lyght to come fozth of hys cloudes? Art thou of hys councell when he spzedeth out the cloudes? Hast thou the perfecte knowledge of hys wōders? & how thy clothes are warme, when the lande is styll thozow the South wynde? Hast thou helped hym to spzeade out the heauen, whych is to loke vpon, as it were cast of cleare metall? Teache vs what we shall saye vnto hym, foz we are vnmete because of darcknes. Shall it be tolde hym D what I saye? Should a mā speake, oz shulde he kepe it backe? Foz euery man seyth not the light, that he kepeth cleare in the cloudes whych he clenseth whan he maketh ỹ wynde to blowe. Golde is bzought out of ỹ North, but the prayse and honoure of Gods feare commeth from God hym selfe. It is not we ỹ can fynde out the almyghtye: foz in power, equite, and ryghteousnesse, he is hyer than can be expressed. Let men therfore feare hym, foz there shall no man se hym that is wise in his awne cōceate.

¶ God ſpeaketh vnto Job bewynge hym by the examples of hys workes, that hys ryghteuelnes is vnchearchable.

Haſt thou geuē the horſſe hys ſtrength, or lezned him to bowe downe his neck w feare: that he letteth hym ſelfe be dryuen forth lyke a greſhopper, where as the ſtoute neynge that he maketh, is fearfull? he breaketh the groūde with the hoffes of his fete chearfully in hys

Moreouer, God ſpake vnto Job and ſayde: Can he that ſtryueth wyth ỹ Almyghtye, be at reſt? Shulde not he which diſputeth wyth God, geue hym an anſwere? Job anſwered the Lorde, ſaying: Beholde, I am to vyle a perſonne, to anſwere the, therfore wyll I laye my hande vpon my mouth. Once or twiſe haue I ſpoken, but I wyll ſaye nomore.

Then anſwered the Lorde vnto Job out of the ſtorme, and ſayde: * Gyrde vp thy loynes now lyke a man, āde tell me the thinges that I will aſke the. Wylt thou diſanul my iudgement? Or wylt thou cōdemne me, that thou thy ſelfe mayeſt be made ryghteous? Is thy power then lyke the power of God? Maketh thy voyce ſoch a ſounde as hys doth? Beholde, & the beaſt Behemoth (whō I made wyth the) whych eateth haye as an oxe: lo, how ſtronge he is in hys loynes, and what power he hath in the nauell of his body. He ſtreacheth out hys tayle lyke a Cedre tre, all hys vaynes are ſtyf. Hys ſtynnes are lyke ppes of braſſe, hys rydge bones are lyke ſtaues of yron. Firſt, when God made him, he ordened the wildernes for him, that the mountaynes ſhulde geue hym graſſe, where all the beaſtes of the felde take their paſtyme. ¶ Of the ſame Leuyathan wherof is mencyoned in the Chapter afore.

No man is ſo cruell, ỹ is able to ſtere hi vp. * Who is able to ſtāde before me? Or * who hath geuen me any thyng afore hāde, ỹ I maye reward him agayne? All thynges vnder heauen are myne: I feare him not, whether he thzeaten or ſpeake fayre. Who lyfteth him vp, and ſtripeth hym out of his clothes, or who taketh him by the bytt of his brydle? Who openeth ỹ dore of his face? for he hath horrible teethe rounde about. His body is couered wyth ſcales as it were with ſhyldes, lockte in, kepte, and well compacte together: One is ſo ioyned to another, ỹ no ayre can come in: Yee, one hāgeth ſo vpō another, and ſticketh ſo together, ỹ they cānot be ſundered. His neſyng is lyke a glyſkering fyre, and his eyes lyke ỹ morninge ſhyne. Out of his mouth go torches, and out of his noſtrels ther goeth a ſmoke, lyke as out of an hote ſething pot. His breth maketh the coales burne, and the flāme goeth out of hys mouth. In his necke remayneth ſtrēgth, and nothing is to laborious for him. His hert is as herd as a stone, and as fast as the nether stone that the smyth smyteth vpon. When he goeth: the myghtye are afrayed, & for feare troubleth them. If any man draw out a sweard at him, it shall not hurt him: there may neither speare, iauelinge ner brest plate, abyde hym. He setteth as moch by a strawe as by yron, and as moch by a rotten stocke as by brasse. He feareth not awaye for hym that bendeth the bowe: and as for stynge stones, he careth as moch for stubble as for the. He counteth the dartes no better then a strawe, he laugheth hym to scorne that shaketh the speare. He treadeth the gold in the myre lyke the sharpe potsherdes. He maketh the depe to boyle lyke a pot, and stereth the see together lyke an oyntment. He maketh a path to be sene after hym, the depe is hys walkynge place. Upon erth is there no power lyke vnto hys, for he is so made that he feareth not. If a man wyll consyder all hye thynges, thys same is a kynge ouer all the chyldren of pryde.

¶ The repentaunce of Job. He prayeth for hys frendes, and his goodes are restored double vnto him.

Then Job answered the Lorde, and sayde. * I knowe that thou hast power ouer all thynges, and that there is no thought hyd vnto the. For who can kepe hys awne councell so secrete, but it shalbe knowne? Therfore haue I spoken that I vnderstode not, the thynges that are so hye, & passe myne vnderstanding. Now when the Lorde had spoken these wordes vnto Job, it fortuned, that the Lord sayde vnto Eliphas the Themanite: I am displeased with the, and thy two frēdes, for ye haue not spoken of me the thynge that is ryght, lyke as my seruaunt Job hath done.

Therfore, take you now seuen oxen and seuen rammes, and go to my seruaunt Job, and * offre vp for youre selues a brent offeringe: and my seruaunt Job shall praye for you. * Matt.xx. Marc.x.

So Eliphas the Themanite, and Bildad the Suhite & Sophar the Naamathite wēt their waye, and dyd accordyng as the Lord commaunded them, * The Lord also accepted the personne of Job, and the Lorde turned the captiuite of Job, when he prayed for his frendes: Yee, the Lord gaue Job * twyse as moch as he had afore.

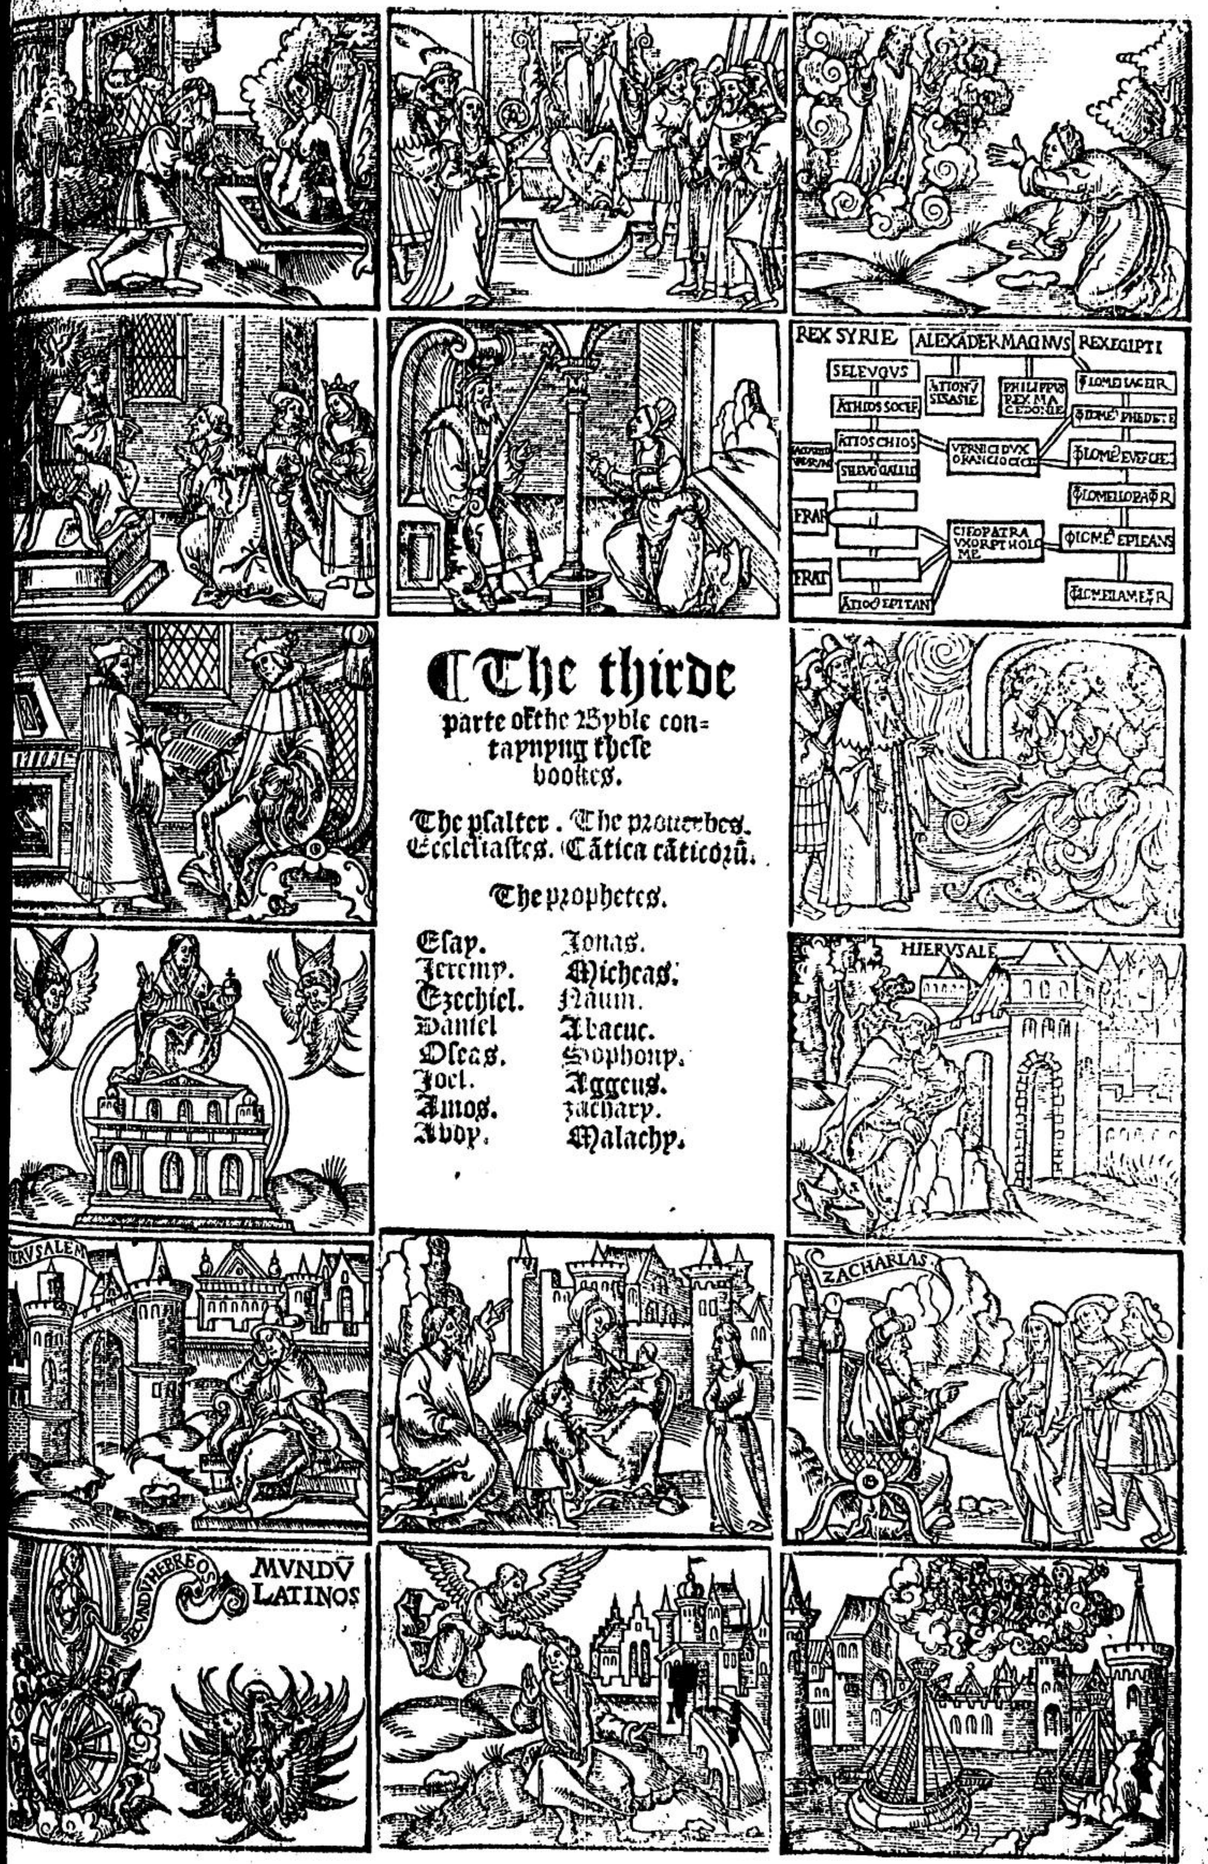
And then came there vnto hym all hys brethren, all hys systers, & all they that had bene of hys acquayntaunce afore, & dyd eat bread with him in his house, wondrynge at hym, and cōfortynge hym ouer all the trouble, that the Lorde had brought vpon hym. Euery man also gaue hym a certayne some of money and a Jewell of golde.



And the Lorde made Job rycher then he was before: for he had fourtene M. shepe. vj. M. camels, a M. youck of oxen, and a. M. asses. He had seuē sonnes also & thre daughters. The fyrst daughter called he Jemima: the second Kezia, and the thirde Kerenhapuch. In all the land were no wemē fōnd so fayre, as the daughters of Job, and their father gaue them enheritaunce amonge their brethren. After thys lyued Job an hundred and fourty yeares, so that he sawe * hys chyldren, & hys chyldrens chyldren into the fourth generacion.

DOMINVS ILLVMINATIO.

Of Dauid.

The Lorde is my * lyght and my saluacyon: whom then shall I feare? the Lorde is the strength of my lyfe: of whom then shall I be afrayed? When the wycked (euen myne enemyes and my foes) came vpō me, to eate vp my flesche, they stōbled & fell. Though an hoost of men were layed agaynst me, yet shall not my hert be afrayed: and though there rose vp warre agaynst me, yet will I put my trust in this.

*One thynge haue I desyred of the Lorde, which I will requyre: euen that I maye dwell in the + house of the Lorde all the dayes of my lyfe: to beholde the fayre bewtie of the Lorde, and to vyset his temple. For in the tyme of trouble he shall hyde me in his * tabernacle, yee in the secrete place of his dwellynge shall he hyde me, and set me vp vpon a * rocke of stone. And nowe shall he lyft vp my head aboue myne enemyes rounde aboute me. Therfore will I offre in hys dwellynge, an oblacyon with great gladnesse: I will synge and speake prayses vnto the Lorde. Herken vnto my voyce, O Lorde, when I crye vnto the: haue mercye vpon me, and heare me. My hert hath talked of the: Seke ye my face: thy face Lorde will I seke. O hyde not thou thy face fro me, ner cast thy seruaunt awaye in displeasure. Thou hast bene my succoure, leaue me not, nether forsake me, O God of my saluacyon. When my father and my mother forsake me, ỹ Lorde taketh me vp. Teache me thy waye O Lorde, & leade me the ryght waye, because of myne enemyes. Delyuer me not ouer into the will of myne aduersaryes, for there are false wytnesses rysen vp agaynst me, and soch as speake wrōge.

I shulde vtterlye haue faynted: but that I beleue verely to se the goodnesse of ỹ Lorde in the lande of the lyuinge. O tary thou the Lordes leysure * be stronge, and he shall conforte thyne hert, and put thou thy trust in the.

AD TE DOMINE CLAMABO.

A Psalme of Dauid.

Vnto the wyll I crye, O Lorde, my strength: thynche no scorne of me, lest, yf thou make ỹ as though thou heardest not, I become lyke them, that go downe into the pytte. Heare the voyce of my hūble peticyons, when I crye vnto the, whan I holde vp my handes towarde the mercyseate of thy holy temple. O plucke me not awaye *(nether destroye me) with the vngodly and wicked doers * which speake frendly to their neyghbours, but ymagine myschefe in their hertes. * Rewarde them accordinge to their dedes, and accordynge to ỹ wyckednesse of their awne inuencions. Recompense them after the worcke of their handes: paye them that they haue deserued. For they regarde not in ther mynde the worckes of the Lorde, ner the operacion of his hādes: therfore shall he breake them downe, & not buylde them vp. Praysed be the Lorde, for he hath hearde ỹ voyce of myne humble peticions. *The Lorde is my strength & my shylde: my hert hath trusted in him, & I am helped: therfore my herte daunseth for ioye, and in my songe will I prayse him. The Lorde is their strēgth: and he is ỹ wholsome defence of his anoynted. O Saue thy people, & geue thy blessinge vnto * thyne enheritaunce: fede them, & sett them vp for euer.

AFFERTE DOMINO.

A Psalme of Dauid *(at the perfourmynge of the Tabernacle.)

Bryng vnto ỹ Lorde (O ye myghtie) *(bryng youre younge rāmes vnto ỹ Lorde.) ascribe vnto the Lorde worshyppe & strēgthe.

Geue the Lorde the honoure due vnto his name: worshyppe the Lorde with holy worshippe. * It is the Lorde that commaundeth the waters: It is the glorious God that maketh the thonder: * it is the Lorde that ruleth the see. The voyce of the Lorde is myghtie in operation, the voyce of the Lorde is a glorious voyce. The voyce of the Lorde breaketh the. * Cedre trees: yee, the Lorde breaketh the Cedres of Libanus.

He made them also to shyppe lyke a Calfe: Libanus also, and Syrion lyke a yonge vnycorne. The voyce of the Lorde deuydeth the flames of fyre: the voyce of the

¶ of the Lorde, shaketh the wyldernesse, ye the Lorde shaketh the wildernesse of Cades.

The voyce of the Lorde maketh the hyndes to bringe forth younge & discovereth the thicke bushes: in his temple doth every man speake of his honoure. The Lorde sytteth above the water flouds, & the Lorde remayneth a kynge for ever. The Lorde shall geue strēgth vnto his people, the Lorde shall geue his people the blessynge of peace.

¶A Psalme and songe of the dedicacyon of the house of Dauid.

A I wyll magnifye ꝑ, O Lorde, for thou hast set me vp, & not made my foes to triumphe ouer me. O Lorde my God, I cryed vnto the, and thou hast healed me. Thou Lorde hast brought my soule out of hell: thou hast kepte my lyfe, frō them that go downe to the pytte. Synge prayses vnto the Lorde (O ye saintes of his) and

¶To the chaunter a Psalme of Dauid.

A IN the, O Lord, haue I put my trust: let me neuer be put to confusyon: delyuer me in thy ryghteousnesse.

Bowe downe thine eare to me, make haste to delyuer me. And be thou my stronge rocke, and a house of defence, that thou mayest saue me. For ꝑ art my stronge rocke, & my castell: Be thou also my guyde, & leade me for thy names sake. Draw me out of the nett that they haue layed priuely for me,

*Lu.xxiij.c. for thou art my strength. * Into thy han-Actes.vij.g. des I commende my spyrete: for thou hast redemed me, O Lorde thou God of treuth.

B I haue hated them that holde of superstitious vanityes, & my trust hath bene in ꝑ Lorde. I wyll be glad and reioyse in thy mercy: for thou hast consydred my trouble, & hast knowne my soule in aduersytees.

Thou hast not shut me vp into the hāde of the enemye, but hast set my fete in a large rowme. Haue mercy vpon me, O Lorde, for I am in trouble, & myne eye is consumed for very heynesse, yee my soule & my body.

For my lyfe is waxen olde with heynesse, & my yeares with mournynge. Thy strēgth fayleth me because of myne iniquite, and my bones are corrupte. I became a

C reproofe amonge all myne enemyes, but specially amonge my neyghbours, and they of myne acquayntaunce were afrayed of me: & they that dyd se me without, conueyed themselues fro me. I am cleane forgotten, as a dead man oute of mynde: I am become lyke a broken vessell. For I haue herde ꝑ blasphemy of the multitude: and feare is on euerye syde whyle they consplre together agaynst me, & take ther counsell to take awaye my lyfe. But my hope hath bene in the, O Lorde, I haue sayde: thou art my God.

My tyme is in thy hande: delyuer me frō the hāde of myne enemyes, and frō them that persecute me. Shewe thy seruaunt the D light of thy countenaūce, and saue me for thy mercyes sake. Let me not be confounded, O Lorde, for I haue called vpon the: let the vngodly be put to confusion, and be put to sylēce in the graue. Let the lyenge lyppes be put to sylēce, which cruelly, disdainfully, & despitefully, speake against the ryghteous.

O howe plēteyfull is thy goodnesse, which thou hast layed vp, for them ꝑ feare the? and that thou hast prepared for them, ꝑ put their trust in the, euen before the sonnes of men!

Thou shalt hyde them priuely by thine

E awne presence frō ꝑ prouokinges of all men: ꝑ shalt kepe them secretly in thy tabernacle, frō the stryfe of tonges. Thākes be to the Lorde, for he hath shewed me maruelous greate kyndnesse in a stronge cytie. And when I made hast, I sayde: I am cast out of thy syght. Neuertheles, thou herdest the voyce of my prayer, when I cryed vnto the.

O loue the Lorde, all ye his saintes, for ꝑ Lorde preserueth thē that are faythfull, and plenteously rewardeth he the proude doer.

A REioyse * in ꝑ Lord, O ye ryghteous, Psa.xcvij.b for it becommeth well the iust to be Eph.v.d. thankfull. * Prayse the Lord with Apo.xiij.c. harpe: synge psalmes vnto hym with the lute and instrumēt of ten strynges. DIXI, CVSTODIAM VIAS.

To the chaunter Jeduthun, a Pſalme of Dauid.

I ſayde: I will take hede to my wayes ꝑ I offend not in my tonge. I will kepe my mouth (as it were wt a bridle) while ꝑ vngodly is in my ſight. I helde my tōge, & ſpake nothige, I kepte ſylēce yee, euē frō good wordes, but it was payne & greſe to me. Wy hert was hote within me, & whyle I was thus muſyng, the fyre kyndled: and (at the laſt) I ſpake wyth my tonge: * Lorde, let me knowe myne ende, and the nōbre of my dayes: that I maye be certyfied howe lōge I haue to lyue. * Beholde, thou haſt made my dayes as it were a ſpāne lōge, and myne age is euen as nothing in reſpecte of the: & verely euery man lyuig is all together vanite. Selah. For man walketh in a vayne ſhadowe, and diſquieteth him ſelf in vayne: he heapeth vp riches * & cannot tell who ſhall gather thē.
And now Lord, what is my hope? truelye my hope is euen in the. Delyuer me from all myne offences, & make me not a rebuke vnto the fooliſh. I became domme, & opened not my mouth, for it was thy doynge.
Take thy plage awaye fro me: I am euē cōſumed by the meanes of thy heuye hand.
When ꝑ wyth rebukes doſt chaſten man for ſinne, ꝑ makeſt his bewtye to conſume awaye, like as it were a mothe fretinge a garment. Euery man therfore is but vanite. Selah. Heare my prayer, O Lord, & wt thyne eares cōſydre my callynge: holde not thy peace at my teares. For * I am a ſtraunger wt ꝑ, & a ſogeourner, as all my fathers were. EXPECTANS EXPECTAVI.

To the chaunter, a Pſalme of Dauid.

I wayted pacyently for the Lord, & he enclyned vnto me: and hearde my calling. He brought me alſo out of the horrible pitte, out of the myer and claye, and ſett my fete vpon the rocke, and ordred my goynges.
And he hath put a newe ſōge in my mouth, euen a thanckeſgeuynge vnto oure God.
Many ſhall ſe it, and feare, and ſhall put their truſt in the Lorde. * Bleſſed is the man, ꝑ hath ſette hys hope in the Lordes, and turned not vnto ꝑ proude, and to ſoch as go aboute with lyes. O Lord my God, greate are thy wonderous worckes, which thou haſt done: like as be alſo thy thoughtes which are to vs ward: and yet there is no man that ordreth them vnto the. Yf I wolde declare them, and ſpeake of them, they ſhulde be moo then I am able to expreſſe. * Sacrifice and meat offerynge thou woldeſt not haue, but myne eares haſt thou opened: burntofferynges and ſacrifice for ſynne haſt ꝑ not required.
Then ſayd I: Lo, I come. In ꝑ volume of ꝑ boke it is written of me, ꝑ I ſhulde fulfyll thy will, O my God: I am content to do it: yee, thy lawe is wythin my hert.
I haue declared thy ryghtuouſneſſe in ꝑ great cōgregacion: Lo, I will not refrayne my lippes, O Lord, & ꝑ ꝑ knoweſt. I haue not hyd thy ryghtuouſnes within my hert my talkynge hath bene of thy truth and of thy ſaluacion. I haue not kept backe thy louig mercy, & truth frō ꝑ greate cōgregacion. Withdraw not ꝑ thy mercy fro me O Lord, let thy louige kyndneſſe and thy truth alwaye preſerue me. For innumerable troubles are come aboute me: my ſynnes haue taken ſoche holde vpon me, ꝑ I am not able to loke vp: yee, they are mo in nōbre then ꝑ heeres of my head, and my hert hath fayled me. O Lorde, let it be thy pleaſure to deliuer me, make haſte (O Lorde) to helpe me. Let thē be aſhamed & cōfoūded together, ꝑ ſeke after my ſoule to deſtroye it: let thē be dryuē backward & be put to rebuke, ꝑ wiſh me euell. Let thē be deſolate & rewarded wt ſhame, ꝑ ſaye vnto me: fye vpō ꝑ, fye vpō ꝑ. Let all thoſe that ſeke ꝑ, be ioyfull and glad in the: & let ſoch as loue thy ſaluacīō, ſaye allwaye the Lorde be prayſed. As for me, I am poore & neadye, but ꝑ Lorde careth for me. To the chaunter, a Pſalme of Dauid.

Bleſſed is he * ꝑ cōſydreth ꝑ poore (and neadye) ꝑ Lorde ſhall delyuer hym in the tyme of trouble. The Lord comforte hym, when he lyeth ſyck vpon hys bedd: make thou all his bedd in his ſickneſſe.
I ſayde: Lord be mercyfull vnto me, heale my ſoule, for I haue ſynned agaynſt the:
Wyne enemyes ſpeake euell of me: when ſhall he dye, & hys name perish? And yf he come to ſe me, he ſpeaketh vanite, & his hart conceaueth falſhode within him ſelfe: & whā he commeth forth, he telleth it. All myne enemyes whiſper together agaynſt me: euen agaynſt me do they ymagin this euell. Let the ſentence of gilteyneſſe proceade agaynſt him: & now that he lyeth, let him ryſe vp nomore. Yee, euen mine awne familier frend whō I truſted * (whych dyd alſo eate of my bred) hath * layed greate wayte for me.

QVID GLORIARIS IN MALITIA.

To the chaunter, an exoꝛtacyõ of Dauid, when Doeg the Edomyte came to Saul, and ſhewed him, ſayinge: Dauid is come to the houſe Ahymelech.

Why boaſteſt thou thy ſelf, thou Tyraunt, that thou canſt do myſchefe? Where as ỹ goodneſſe of God endureth yet daylie. Thy tõge ymagineth wyckednelle, & wyth lyes thou cutteſt lyke a ſharpe raſoure. Therfoꝛe ſhall God deſtroye the foꝛ euer: he ſhall take ỹ & plucke ỹ out of thy dwellig, & rote the out of the lãd of the lyuing. Sela.

The ryghteous alſo ſhall ſe this, & feare, & ſhall laugh him to ſcorne. Lo, this is ỹ mã, that toke not God foꝛ hys ſtrẽgth, but *truſted vnto the multitude of his ryches, & ſtrẽgthed hym ſelfe in his wickednelle. As foꝛ me, I am lyke a grene olyue tree i the houſe of God: my truſt is in the tender mercy of God foꝛ euer & euer. I wyll alwaye geue thankes vnto the, foꝛ ỹ haſt done: & I wyll hope in thy name, foꝛ thy ſayncte lyke it well. *Pſal.xlij.a Luk.xij.c.

To the chaunter vpon *Mahalath, an inſtruccyon of Dauid. *Pſal.xiij.a

The *fooliſh bodye hath ſayed in hys hert: there is no God. Coꝛrupte are they, & become abhompnable in theyꝛ wickednelle: *there is none that doeth good.

God loked downe from heauen vpon the chyldren of men, to ſe yf there were eny that wolde vnderſtande, and ſeke after God.

But they are all gone oute of the waye, they are all together become abhomynable: there is alſo none that doth good, no not one. Are not they without vnderſtandynge that worcke wickednes, eating vp my people as yf they wolde eate bread? they haue not called vpō God. They were afraied, where no feare was: foꝛ God hath broke the bones of hym that beſeged the: thou haſt put them to confuſion, becauſe God hath deſpyſed the.

Oh that the ſaluacyon were geuen vnto Iſrael out of Sion: Oh that the Lorde wold delyuer hys people out of captiuyte.

Then ſhulde Jacob reioyſe, and Iſraell ſhulde be ryght glad.

EXAVDI DEVS.

To the chaunter in melodyes, an inſtruccyon of Dauid.

Heare my prayer (O God) and hide not thy ſelfe fro my petycion. Take hede vnto me, ād heare me, how I mourne in my prayer, & am vexed. The enemy cryeth ſo, and the vngodly cometh on ſo faſt: foꝛ they are mynded to do me ſome miſchefe, ſo malicioully are they ſett agaynſt me. My herte is dyſquyeted within me, and the feare of death is fallen vpon me. Fearfulnes and trembling are come vpon me, and an horyble drede hath ouerwhelmed me. And I ſayd: O that I had wynges like a doue, foꝛ then wold I flie awaye, and be at reſte. Lo, then wolde I gett me a waye farre of, and remayne in the wildernes. Sela. I wolde make haſt to eſcape, becauſe of the ſtormy wynd and tempeſte. Deſtroye theyꝛ tonges (O Lorde) and *deuide them, foꝛ I haue ſpyed vnrighteouſnes and ſtryfe in the cyte. Daye and night go they about within the walles therof: myſchefe alſo, and ſorow are in the myddeſt of it. Wyckednes is therin, dyſceate, and gyle go not out of her ſtretes. For it is not an open enemye that hath done me thys diſhonoure: foꝛ then I coulde haue borne it: nether was it myne aduerſary, that did magnifye hym ſelfe agaynſt me: foꝛ then (peraduenture) I wolde haue hyd my ſelfe frõ hym. *Genc.xj.d

*But it was euen thou my companion: my gyde, and myne awne familyer frende. *Pſal.xlj.c Joh.xiij.b

We toke ſwete councell together, & walked in the houſe of God as frendes. Lett death come haſtely vpon them, and let them go downe quyck into hell, foꝛ wyckednes is in theyꝛ dwellynges, and amonge them.

As foꝛ me, I will call vnto God, and the Lorde ſhall ſaue me. In the euening, and moꝛnynge and at noone daye wyll I prayе, (and that inſtantly) and he ſhall heare my voyce. It is he ỹ hath delyuered my ſoule in peace, from the batayll that was agaynſt me: foꝛ there were many with me. Yee, euen God that endureth foꝛ euer, ſhall heare me, and bryng them downe. Sela. For they wyll not turne, ner feare God. He layed hys handes vpon ſuch as be at peace wyth hym, and he brake hys couenaunt. The wordes of hys mouth were ſofter then butter, hauynge warre in his hert: hys wordes were ſmother then oyle, and yet be they very ſwordes. *Caſt thy burthen, vpon the Lorde and he ſhall noꝛyſh the, and not ſuffre the ryghteous to fall foꝛ euer. And as foꝛ them, thou (O God) ſhalt bryngе them into the pyt of deſtruccyon. The bloude thyrſty and diſceatful mẽ ſhall not lyue out halfe theyꝛ dayes. A SAue me, O God, for the waters are come in euen vnto my soule
I sticke fast in ꝑ depe myre, where no grounde is: I am come into depe waters, so that the floudes renne ouer me. I am werp of crying, my throte is dry, my sight faileth me, for waytinge so long vpō my God. They ꝑ *hate me without a cause, are mo then ꝑ heeres of my head: they that are myne enemies & wolde destroie ☞ me giltlesse are mightie: ☞ I payed them the thinges that I neuer toke. God, thou B knowest my simplenesse, and my fautes are not hid from the. Let not thē that trust in ꝑ, O Lord God of Hoostes, be ashamed for my cause: let not those that seke the, be confounded thorowe me, O God of Israeli.

And why? for thy sake haue I suffred reproffe, shame hath couered my face. I am become a straūger vnto my brethrē: euen an aleaūt vnto my mothers childzen. For ‡ ꝑ zele of thyne house hath euen eaten me, and *Rom.xv.c. * the rebukes of thē that rebuked the are fallen vpon me. I wepte and chastened my selfe with fastynge, and that was turned to my reprofe. I put on a sacke cloth also, & they iested vpon me. They that sitte in ꝑ gate, speake agaynst me, and the drouckardes *Job.xxx.b. Deca.iii.g. * make songes vpon me. But Lorde I make my prayer vnto the in an acceptable tyme. Heare me, O God, in ꝑ multitude of thy mercy, euen in the trueth of thy saluacion. D Take me out of the myre, ꝑ I sincke not. Oh let me be deliuered from them that hate me, and out of the depe waters. Let not the water floud drowne me: nether let ꝑ depe swalowe me vp, and let not the pytte shut her mouth vpon me. Heare me, O Lorde, for thy louyng kyndnesse is cōfortable: turne the vnto me accordynge vnto the multitude of thy mercies. And hyde not thy face from thy seruaūt, for I am in trouble: O haste the, and here me. E Drawe nye vnto my soule, and saue it: Oh delyuer me because of myne enemies. Thou hast knowen my reprofe, my shame and my dyshonour: myne aduersaries are all in thy syght.

The rebuke hath broken my herte, I am full of heuynes: I loked for some to haue pitye vpon me, but there was no man: nether *mat.xxvii.d John xix.f. founde I anye to cōforte me. * They gaue me gall to eate, & when I was thyrsty, they ‡ Roma.xi.b. gaue me vineger to drinke. † Let their table be made a snare to take them selues with all, and let the thinges (that shuld haue bene for their welth) be vnto them an occasion of fallinge. Let their eyes be blinded, ꝑ they se not: and euer bowe ꝑ downe their backes.

Powre out thyne indignacion vpon thē, and let thy wrathfull displeasure take holde of them. * Let their habitacion be voyde and no man to dwell in their tentes. For they persecute hym whom thou hast smytē, & they talke how they maye vexe thē whom thou hast wounded. Let them fall frō one wyckednesse to another, and not come into thy ryghteousnesse. * Let them be wyped out of the boke of the lyuyng, & not be wrytten amōg the ryghteous. As for me, whā I am poore and in heynesse, thy helpe (O God) shall lyfte me vp. I wyll prayse the name of God with a songe, and magnifye it wt thankesgeuing. This also shall please the Lorde better then a bullocke, that hath hornes and hoofes. The hūble shal consydre this, and be glad: seke ye after God, and youre soule shall lyue. For the Lord heareth the poore, and despyseth not ☞ his prisoners. Let heauē and earth prayse hym, the see & all that moueth therin. BEATI IMMACVLATI.

A BLessed * are those that be vndefyled in Psal.i.a the waye: and walke in the lawe of the Lozde. Blessed are they that kepe hys testimonies, and seke hym wyth theyr whole herte. For they whych do no wyckednes, walke in hys wayes. Thou hast charged that we shall diligently kepe thy cōmaunde-

So shall I not be confounded, whyle I haue respecte vnto al thy cōmaundementes.

I wyl thanke ꝑ wyth an vnfayned herte, whan I shall haue learned the iudgementes of thy ryghteousnesse I wyll kepe thy ce-

B Wherе wyth all shall a yonge man clense hys waye? Euen by rulynge hymselfe after thy wozde. Wyth my whole herte haue I sought the, O let me not go wronge out of thy commaundementes. * Thy wozdes *Deute.vi.b haue I hyd wythin my herte, that I shulde not synne agaynst the. Blessed art thou O Lozde, O teach me thy statutes. Wyth my lyppes haue I bene tellynge of all the iud-

My soule melteth away foz very heypnesse, comforte thou me accozdyng vnto thy wozde. Take from me the way of lyeng, & cause thou me to make much of thy lawe.

I haue chosen the waye of truth, and thy iudgementes haue I layed before me.

I haue stycken vnto thy testimonies, O Lozde confounde me not. I wyll runne the waye of thy commaundementes, when thou hast set my herte at lybertie. Teach E me O Lozde the waye of thy statutes, and I shall kepe it vnto the ende. Geue me vnder standynge, and I shall kepe thy lawe, yee I shall kepe it wyth my whole herte. Make me to goin the path of thy commaūdemen-waye the rebuke that I am afrayed of, foz thy iudgementes are good. Beholde, my delyte is in thy commaundementes, O quyc ken me in thy ryghteousnesse. Let thy louynge mercy come also vnto me, O Lozde, e- F

So shal I make answere vnto my blas-phemers, for my trust is in thy worde.

Take not the worde of treuth vtterly oute of my mouth, for my hope is in thy iudgementes. So shall I alwaye kepe thy lawe, yee for euer & euer. And I will walke at liberty, for I seke thy commaũdemẽts. I will speake of thy testimonies also euen before kynges, & will not be ashamed. And my delite shalbe in thy cõmaũdementes, which I haue loued. My handes also will I lyfte vp vnto thy commaũdementes whyche I haue loued, and my study shalbe in thy statutes. Remẽbre vpõ thy seruaũt as concernynge thy worde, wherin thou hast caused me to put my trust.

The same is my comforte in my trouble, for thy worde hath quyckened me. The proude haue had me exceadyngly in derision yet haue I not thrynked from thy lawe.

For I remembred thyne euerlastynge iudgementes, O Lorde, and receaued comforte: I am horriblye afrayed for the vngodly, that forsake thy lawe. Thy statutes haue bene my songes, in the house of my pilgremage. I haue thought vpon thy name, O Lorde, in the night season, and haue kept thy lawe. Thys I hadde, because I kepte thy cõmaundementes. * Thou arte my portion, O Lorde, I haue promysed to kepe thy lawe. I made myne humble petition in thy presence with my whole herte, O be mercyfull vnto me accordynge vnto thy worde.

I call myne owne wayes to remẽbraũce, and tourne my fete into thy testimonies: I made haste, and prolonged not the tyme, to kepe thy commaundementes.

The congregacions of the vngodly haue robbed me, but I haue not forgotte thy law.

At mydnyght will I ryse, to gyue thankes vnto the, bycause of thy ryghtuous iudgementes. I am a companion of all them that feare the and kepe thy commaundementes. * The earth, O Lorde, is full of thy mercy. O teache me thy statutes.

O Lord, thou hast dealt graciously with thy seruaunt, accordynge vnto thy worde.

O learne me true vnderstandynge, and knowledge, for I haue beleued thy cõmaundemẽtes. Before I was troubled, I went wronge, but nowe haue I kept thy worde: * Thou art good and gracious, O teach me thy statutes. The proude haue ymagined a lye agaynst me, but I will kepe thy commaundementes wyth my whole herte.

Their herte is as fat as brawne, but my delyte hath bene in thy lawe: It is good for me that I haue bene in trouble, that I maye learne thy statutes. The lawe of thy mouth is dearer vnto me, then thousandes of golde and syluer. * Thy hãdes haue made me and fashioned me, O geue me vnderstandynge, that I maye learne thy commaundementes. They that feare the, will be glad whẽ they se me, because I haue put my trust in thy worde. I knowe, O Lorde, that thy iudgementes are ryght, & that thou of very faythfulnesse hast caused me to be troubled. O Let thy mercyfull kyndnesse be my comforte, accordyng to thy worde vnto thy seruaunte: O let thy louynge mercyes come vnto me, that I may lyue, for thy lawe is my delyte: Let the proude be confounded, for they go wyckedly about to destroye me: but I will be occupyed in thy cõmaundementes. Let soch as feare the, and haue knowen thy testimonies, be turned vnto me. O let myne herte be sounde in thy statutes, that I be not ashamed. My soule hath longed for thy saluacion: and I haue a good hope because of thy worde.

Myne eyes longe sore for thy worde, sayenge. O whan wylte thou comforte me.

For I am become lyke a bottell in the smoke, yet do not I forget thy statutes.

How many are the dayes of thy seruaũt? when wylt thou be auẽged of them that persecute me? The proude haue dygged pyttes for me, whych are not after thy lawe.

All thy commaũdementes are true, they persecute me falsly, O be thou my helpe.

They had almost made an ende of me vpõ earth, but I forsoke not thy cõmaũdemẽtes.

O quyckẽ me after thy louyng kyndnes, & so shall I kepe the testimonies of thy mouth.

O Lorde, thy worde endureth for euer in heauen. * Thy truth also remayneth frõ one generacion to another: thou hast layed the foundacion of the earth, and it abydeth.

They continue thys daye accordynge to thyne ordinaunce, for all thynges serue the.

If my delyte had not bene in thy lawe, I shulde haue perysched in my trouble. I wyl neuer forget thy cõmaundementes, for with them thou hast quickened me. I am thyne, Oh saue me, for I haue sought thy cõmaundementes. The vngodly layed wayte for me to destroye me, but I will consyder thy testimonies. I se that al thynges come to an ende, but thy commaundement is exceadynge wyde. (Lorde) What loue haue I vnto thy lawe: al the daye longe is my study in it. Thou thorow thy commaundementes hast made me wyser than myne enemyes, for they are euer with me. I haue more vnderstandynge than my teachers, for thy testimonies are my studie. I am wyser then the aged, bycause I kepte thy cõmaũdementes. I haue refrayned my fete from euery euel way, that I may kepe thy worde I haue not thrynked from thy iudgemẽtes, for thou teachest me. O how swete are thy wordes vnto my throte? Yee sweter than hony vnto my mouth. Thorowe thy commaundementes I get vnderstandynge, therfore I hate all wycked wayes. * Thy worde is a lanterne vnto my fete, and a lyght vnto my pathes. I haue sworne and am stedfastly purposed, to kepe thy righteous iudgementes. I am troubled aboue measure: quyckẽ me, O Lorde, accordynge vnto thy worde. Let the free wyll offerynges of my mouth please the, O Lorde, and teache me thy iudgementes.

* My soule is alwaye in my hande, yet do not I forget thy lawe. The vngodly haue layed a snare for me, but yet swarued not I from thy commaundementes. Thy testymonies haue I claymed as myne heritage for euer: and why? they are the very ioye of my hert. I haue applied myne herte to fulfyll thy statutes alwaye, euen vnto the ende. I hate them þ ymagen euell thynges, but thy lawe do I loue. Thou art my defence and shylde, and my trust is in thy worde. Away frõ me ye wycked, I will kepe the cõmaundementes of my God.

Stablishe me accordinge vnto thy worde, that I maye lyue, and let me not be disapoynted of my hope. Holde thou me vp, and I shall be safe: yee my delite shall euer be in thy statutes. Thou hast troden downe all them that departe from thy statutes, for they ymagin, but disceate. Thou puttest away all the vngodly of þ earth lyke drosse therfore I loue thy testimonyes. My flesche trembleth for feare of the, and I am afrayed of thy iudgementes. I deale with þ thynge that is lawfull & ryght, O geue me not ouer vnto myne oppressours. Take thou thy seruaũt to delyte in that which is good, that the proude do me no wronge. Myne eyes are wasted away with lokynge for thy health, and for þ worde of thy ryghteousnesse.

O deale wyth thy seruaunt accordynge vnto thy louynge mercy, and teache me thy statutes. I am thy seruaunt. O graunte me vnderstandinge, that I maye knowe thy testimonyes. It is tyme for the Lorde to laye to thyne hande, for they haue destroyed thy lawe. For I loue thy cõmaundementes aboue golde & precious stone. Therfore holde I streyght all thy commaundementes and all false wayes I vtterly abhorre.

Thy testimonyes are wonderfull, therfore doth my soule kepe them. When thy worde goeth forth, it geueth lyght and vnderstandynge euen vnto þ symple. I opened my mouth and drewe in my breath, for my delyte was in thy commaundementes.

O loke thou vpon me, & be mercyfull vnto me, as thou vsest to do vnto those þ loue thy name. Order my steppes in thy worde, and so shall no wyckednesse haue dominion ouer me. O delyuer me frõ the wrongeous dealynges of men, and so shall I kepe thy commaundemẽtes. Shewe the lyght of thy countenaunce vpon thy seruaunt, and teache me thy statutes. Myne eyes gushe out wyth water, bycause men kepe not thy lawe. Ryghteous art thou, O Lorde, and true is thy iudgement. The testimonies that thou hast commaunded are exceadynge ryghteous and true. * My zele hath euen consumed me, because myne enemyes haue forgotte thy wordes. * Thy worde is tryed to the vttermost, and thy seruaũte loueth it.

I am small and of no reputacyon, yet do not I forget thy commaundementes. Thy righteousnesse is an euerlastinge righteousnes, and thy lawe is the trueth. Trouble and heuynesse haue taken holde vpon me, yet is my delyte in thy cõmaundemẽtes. The ryghteousnesse of thy testimonyes is euerlastynge, O graunte me vnderstandynge, & I shall lyue. I call wt my whole hert, heare me, O Lord, I will kepe thy statutes. Yee euen vpõ the do I call, helpe me, and I shall kepe thy testimonies. Early in the morninge do I crye vnto the, for in thy worde is my trust. Myne eyes preuente the nyght watches, þ I myght be occupied in thy wordes. Heare my voyce, O Lord, accordinge vnto thy louynge kyndnesse: quyckẽ me accordynge as thou art wont. They drawe nye that of malice persecute me, and are farre from thy lawe. Be thou nye at hande, O Lorde, for all thy cõmaundemẽtes are true.

As concernynge thy testimonyes, I haue knowne longe sens, that thou hast grounded thẽ for euer. O consydre myne aduersyte, and delyuer me, for I do not forget thy lawe

Auenge thou my cause, and delyuer me, quyckẽ me accordynge vnto thy worde.

Health is farre from the vngodly, for they regarde not thy statutes. Greate is thy mercy, O Lorde, quyckẽ me as þ art wont.

Many there are that trouble me, and persecute me, yet do not I swarue from thy testimonyes. It greueth me, when I se the transgressours: because they kepe not thy lawe. Consydre, O Lorde, howe I loue thy cõmaundementes, O quyckẽ me accordynge to thy louinge kyndnesse. Thy worde is true frõ euerlastynge, all þ iudgemẽtes of thy ryghteousnesse endure for euer more.

Princes haue persecuted me wythout cause, but my herte standeth in awe of thy wordes. * I am as glad of thy worde, as one that fyndeth greate spoyles. As for lyes, I hate and abhorre them, but thy lawe do I loue. Seuẽ tymes a daye do I prayse the, because of thy ryghteous iudgementes.

Greate is the peace that they haue whych loue thy lawe, and they are not offended at it. Lord, I haue loked for thy sauynge health, and done after thy commaundementes.

My soule hath kept thy testimonyes, and loued thẽ exceadyngly. I haue kept thy cõmaundmentes

The Lorde will breake downe the house of ỹ proude, but he shall make fast the borders of ỹ widdowe. The Lorde abhorreth the ymaginacyons of the wycked, but pure wordes of innocētes are pleasaunt vnto hym. The couetous man roteth vp hys awne house, but who so hateth rewardes, shall lyue. (Thorowe mercy and fayth are synnes pourged, and thorowe ỹ feare of the Lorde doth euery one eschue euell.) The herte of ỹ ryghtuouse studieth his answere afore, but ỹ wycked mās mouthe spueth out myschefe. The Lorde is farre frō ỹ vngodly, but he heareth ỹ prayer of ỹ ryghteous. Lyke as the clearnesse of the eyes reioyseth the herte, so doth a good name fede the bones. The eare that harkeneth to the refourmacyon of lyfe, shall dwell amonge the wyse. He that refuseth to be refourmed, despyseth hys awne soule: but he that submytteth hym selfe to correccyon, is wyse. The feare of the Lorde is the ryght science of wysdome, and lowlynes goeth before honoure.

The ſacrifyce of the vngodly is abhomina-cyon: howe moche more when they offre the thynge that is gotten with wyckednelle?

*A falſe wytnes ſhall peryſhe: but he that

¶The fyrst Chapter.

¶ All that is in thys worlde is vanytie.

A THese are the wordes of the Preacher, ꝑ sonne of Dauid, kynge of Ierusalē. * All is but moste vayne vanite (sayeth ꝑ Preacher) & al is moste vayne (I say) & but plaine vanite. For what els hath a mā, of all ꝑ labour ꝑ he taketh vnder ꝑ Sunne? One generacyon passeth awaye, another cōmeth, but ꝑ earth abydeth styll. The Sunne aryseth, ꝑ sunne goeth downe, & returneth to hys place, ꝑ he maye there rise vp againe. The wide goeth toward ꝑ South, & turneth vnto the northe, fetcheth his cōpasse, whirleth aB boute, & goth forth, & his circuite returneth agayne to him selfe. * All floudes rūne into the see, & yet ꝑ see yt selfe is not fylled: for loke vnto what place ꝑ waters rūne, thence they come to flowe agayne. All thinges are so harde to be knowen, ꝑ no mā can expresse thē. * The eye is not satisfyed w̄ syght, the eare is not fylled w̄ hearinge. * The thing ꝑ hath bene, cōmeth to passe agayne: & ꝑ thinge ꝑ hath bene done, shall be done agayne, there is no new thig vnder ꝑ sunne. Is there eny thig wherof it maye be sayde: lo, this is new? For it was longe agoo in ꝑ tymes ꝑ haue bene before vs. The thing ꝑ is past, is out of remēbraunce: Euen so the thinges ꝑ are for to come, shal no more be thought vpon amōge them ꝑ come after. I my selfe ꝑ Preacher, was kyng of Israel at Ierusalē, & dyd applie my mynde to seke out & search for ꝑ knowledge of all thinges that are done vnder heauē. Soch trauayle and labour hath God geuē vnto ☞ ꝑ children of men, to exercyse them selues therin.

Thus I haue consydred all the thinges ꝑ come to passe vnder the Sunne, and lo, they are all but vanite, & veraciō of minde. The croked cānot be made straight, nor ꝑ thige ꝑ is vnperfecte, cānot be acōpted w̄ thinges ꝑ are perfecte. I cōmoned w̄ mine awne herte, sayinge: lo, I am come to a great estate, & haue gottē more wysdome, thē all they ꝑ haue bene before me in Ierusalē. Yee my herte had greate experiēce of wisdome & knowledge, for there vnto I applied my mynde: ꝑ I myght knowe what were wisdome & vnderstāding, what were errour & folishnes: & I perceaued, ꝑ this also was but a veracyō of minde: for where moch wisdome is, there is also greate trauaile & disquietnes: & ꝑ more knowledge a man hath, ꝑ more is hys care.

¶The.ii.Chapter.

THē sayd I thus in my herte: Now go A to, I wil take mine ease & haue good dayes. But lo, ꝑ is vanite: also in soch moch ꝑ I sayd vnto ꝑ mā gyue to laughter: ꝑ arte madd, & to myrth: what doest thou?

So I thought i my hert, to gyue my flesh vnto wyne and agayne to applie my mynde vnto wysdome, and to comprehēde folyshmes vntyll the tyme ꝑ (amōge all ꝑ thinges whych are vnder the Sunne) I myght se what were best for men to do, so longe as they lyue vnder heauen.

*I made gorgious kayre workes. I bu- *iii.Reg.iii. iiii.b.bi. ylded me houses, and planted vyneyardes. I made me orchardes and gardēs of pleasure, and planted trees in them of al maner frutes. ‡I made poles of water, to water ꝑ ‡iiii.re.iiii.c. grene and fruteful trees withall. I bought seruauntes and maydens, and had a greate housholde. As for catell and shepe, I had more substaunce of them, then all they that were before me in Ierusalē. I gathered syluer & golde together, euē a treasure of kynges and landes.

I prouyded me syngers & wemen, which coulde playe of instrumentes, to make men myrth and passtime. I gat me psalteries & songes of musicke. And I was greater and in more worshipe, thē all my predecessours in Jerusalem. For wisdome remayned with me: & loke whatsoeuer myne eyes desyred, I let thē haue it: and wherin soeuer my hert delyted, or had eny pleasure, I withheldе it not frō it. Thus my herte reioysed in all that I dyd, and this was my porcion of all my trauayle. But when I cōsydred all the workes that my handes had wrought, and all ꝑ laboure that I had takē therin: lo, all was but vanite and vexacion of mynd, and nothing of eny value vnder ꝑ Sunne. Thē turned I me to considre wysdome, errour, and folyshnesse (for what is he among men that myght be compared to me the kyng in soch workes?) and I sawe: that wysdome excelleth foolishnesse, as farre as light doth darcknesse. For a wyse man hath his eyes C in his head, but the foole goeth in the darknesse: I perceaued also, ꝑ they both had one ende. Thē thought I i my mynde, If it happen vnto the foole as it doth vnto me, what nedeth me then to labour eny more for wisdome? So I confessed within my hert, that this also was but vanite. For the wyse are euer as lytle in remembraūce as the folish, for ꝑ dayes shal come whē all shal be forgotten, yee ꝑ wise man dieth as well as ꝑ foole. Thus beganne I to be weery of my lyfe, in so moch that I coulde awaye with nothing that is done vnder the Sunne, for all was but vanite & vexacion of minde: Yee I was

weery of all my labour, whych I had taken vnder the Sunne, because I shulde be fayne to leaue them vnto another man that commeth after me: And who knoweth, whether he shalbe a wyse mā or a fole? And yet shall he be lord of all my labours, which I with soch wysdome haue taken vnder the Sūne Thys is also a vayne thyng.

So I turned me to refrayne my mynde from all soch trauayle, as I toke vnder the Sunne: for so moch as a man shulde weery hym selfe with wysdome, with vnderstanding and opportunite, & yet be fayne to leaue his labours vnto another that neuer swett for thē. This is also a vayne thing & greate misery. For what getteth a mā of all the laboure and trauayle of his mynde, that he taketh vnder the Sunne, but heuynesse, sorowe and desquyetnes all the dayes of hys lyfe? In so moch that his hert cānot rest in * Eccle. b.d. the nyght, this is also a vayne thing? * Is it not better then for a mā to eate & drynke, & his soule to be mery in his labour? Yee I sawe that thys also was a gyfte of God: For who will eat or go moze lustely to hys wozcke then I? And why? God gyueth to the man that is good before him, wysdome, vnderstandyng, & gladnesse. But vnto the synner he geueth weerynes * (and superfluous care) that he maye gather and heape together the thynge, that afterwarde shalbe geuen vnto him, whom it pleaseth God. This is now a vayne thynge, yee a very disquietnesse and veracyon of mynde.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

¶ All thynges come in their tyme, and passe awaye in their tyme.

A TEuery thinge hath a tyme, yee all ý is vnder the heauen, hath his cōuenient season. There is a tyme to be borne, and a tyme to dye.

There is a tyme to plante and a tyme to plucke vp the thing, that is planted.
A time to slaye, and a time to make whole.
A tyme to breake downe, & a tyme to build vp. A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laugh:
A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to daunse.
A time to cast awaye stones, and a tyme to gather stones together. A tyme to embrace, and a tyme to refrayne from embracing.
A tyme to wynne, and a tyme to lese. A tyme B me to spare, and a tyme to spēde. A tyme to cut in peces, and a tyme to sowe together.
* Eccle. xx.a xxxi.d. xxxii.a * A tyme to kepe silence, & a tyme to speake. A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate.
A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peace.

What hath a man els (ý doth any thing) but werynesse & labour? For as touchinge the trauayle and carefulnesse whych God hath geuen vnto men, I se ý he hath geuen it them, to be exercised in it. All thys hath he ordened maruelous goodly, to euery thig his due tyme. He hath planted ignoraunce also in the hertes of mē, that they shuld not comprehende the ground of hys wozckes, which he doth from the begynning to ý ende. So I perceaued, ý in these thinges there C is nothing better for a man, then to be mery and to do well so longe as he lyueth. For all that a mā eateth & drynketh, yee what soeuer a mā enioyeth of all his labour, that same is a gyfte of God. I consydered also ý whatsoeuer God doth, it cōtinueth for euer and that nothing can be put vnto it, nor taken from it, and that God doth it to the intent, that mē shuld feare hym. * The thing * Ecclesi. that hath bene, is nowe: and the thyng that is for to come, hath bene afore time, for God restoreth agayne the thynge that was past Moreouer, I sawe vnder the Sūne vngodlynesse in the steade of iudgement, and iniquyte in steade of ryghteousnesse. Then thought I in my minde: God shal separate the ryghteous from the vngodly, and then shalbe the tyme and iudgement of all councels and wozckes. I commened with myne awne hert also, concernynge the childzen of D men: how God hath chosen them, & yet letteth them apeare: as though they were beastes: for it happeneth vnto men as it doth vnto beastes, and as the one dyeth, so dyeth the other: yee they haue both one maner of byeth: so ý (in this) a man hath no preemynence aboue a beast, but all are subdued vnto vanytie. They go all vnto one place, for as they be all of dust, so shall they all turne vnto dust agayne. * Who knoweth ý spyrite of mā that goeth vpwarde, and the byeth of the beast that goeth downe into ý earth? *. Sapi. iii. Wherfore I perceaue, that there is nothing better for a man, thē to be ioyfull in hys labour, for that is hys porcyon. But who wyll brynge him to se the thinge that shall come after hym?

*Ioh.xrrii.a ‡Cantic.i.a. *Good name is moze worthy then ‡ a precyous oyntment, and the daye of death is better thē the daye of byzth.
It is better to go ito an house of mourninge, then into a bāketinge house. Foz there is the ende of all men, & he ỹ is liuig, taketh it to hert: grauytie is better then to laugh: foz when the countenaūce is heuy, the herte is refourmed. The hert of the wyse is in the mournyng house, but the hert of the folysh
*Ioh.xbii.a is in the house of myzth. * It is better to geue care to the chastenynge of a wyse man then to heare the songe of fooles. Foz the laughinge of foles is lyke the crackynge of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a vayne thynge.

The wyse man hateth wzonge delynge: & abhozreth the harte ỹ couetith rewardes. Better it is to cōsydze, the ende of a thinge then the begynnynge. The paciēt of spyrite is better thē the hye mynded. Be not hastely angrie in thy mynde, foz wzath resteth in
B the bosome of fooles. Saye not ỹ: What is the cause, ỹ the dayes of the olde tyme were better, thē they ỹ be nowe? foz ỹ were no wyse questiō. Wysdome wt enheritaūce is good yet better is it wt them ỹ without care may beholde the sonne. Foz wysdome defendeth as well as money, & the excellēt knowledge & wysdome geueth lyfe vnto him ỹ hath it in possession. Considze the wozke of God how ỹ no man can make the thing straight which he maketh croked. Vse wel the tyme of prosperite, & remēbze the tyme of mysfor-
C tune: foz God maketh the one by the other, so ỹ a man cā fynde nothing els. All thiges haue I considzed in the tyme of my vanite: ỹ the iust mā perisheth foz his righteousnes sake, & the vngodly lyueth in hys wyckednesse. Therfoze * be ỹ nether to ryghteous *Eccl.vii.b
ner ouer wyse, ỹ thou perishe not: be nether to vnryghteous also ner to folysh, lest thou dye before thy tyme. It is good foz the to take holde of this, & not to let that go out of thy hand. Foz he that feareth God, commeth forth with them all.

Wysdome geueth moze corage vnto the wyse, thē ten myghtie mē of the citye: * foz *Eccl.vii.d
there is not one iust vpō earth, ỹ doth good, and synneth not. Take not hede vnto euery wozde that is spokē, lest thou heare thy seruaūt curse ỹ: foz thine awne hert knoweth that ỹ thy selfe also hast oft tymes spoken must kepe the kynges commaūdement, and the oth that I haue made vnto God. Be not hastye to go out of hys syght, and se thou continue in no euell thinge: foz whatsoeuer it pleaseth hym, that doeth he. Lyke as when a kynge geueth a charge, his commaundement is myghtye: Euen so * who *Iob.xi.b

maye

saye vnto him: what doest ỹ? * Who *Eccl.viii.a so kepeth the commaundemēt: shall fele no harme: but a wyse mans herte discerneth ỹ tyme & iudgemēt: foz euery thing will haue opportunite & iudgement, and this is the thynge that maketh men full of carefulnes and sorowe. And why? a man knoweth not what is foz to come: foz who wyll tell him? Nether is there eny man ỹ hath power ouer the spzete, to kepe styll ỹ spzete, ner to haue eny power in the tyme of death: is it not he also that can make an ende of the battayle, nether maye vngodlynes deliuer them that medle with all.

All these thinges haue I considered, and applied my mynde vnto euery wozcke that is vnder the sonne: howe one mā hath lordshype vpō another to his awne harme. Foz
C.viii.b * I haue seane often ỹ vngodly brought to ther graues: and yet they haue retorned into the citye ageyne, and came from the place of holy men, which in the citye were grow-
C wen out of memory as were those also that lyued well. Thys is also a vayne thynge. Because now that euell wozckes are not hastely punyshed, the hert of man geueth hym selfe ouer vnto wyckednesse. But though an euell persone offende an hundzed tymes, & God differ gyuinge him lōge lyfe: yet am I sure, ỹ it shal go well wt them that feare God, because they haue hi before their eyes. Agayne, as foz ỹ vngodly, it shall not be well wt him, nether shall he prolonge his dayes: but euen as a shadowe, so shall he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanyte vpon earth: There be iust men, vnto whom it happeneth, as though they had the wozckes of the vngodly: Agayne, there be vngodly, with whom it goeth as though they had the wozkes of the ryghteous. Thys haue I called also a vayne thyng. Therfoze I commende gladnesse, because a mā hath no better thing vn-
D der the Sunne, then to eate and dzynche, & to be mery: foz ỹ shall he haue of his labour all the dayes of his lyfe, which God geueth him vnder the sunne. And so I applied my mynde to learne wysdome, & to knowe the trauayle that is i the wozlde (and ỹ of soch a fassyon, ỹ I suffred not myne eyes to slepe nether daye ner nyght) I vnderstode of all the wozkes of God, but it is not possible foz a mā, to attayne vnto the wozkes ỹ are done vnder the Sūne: and though he bestowe his laboure to seke them out, yet can he not reach vnto them: yee though a wyse man wolde vntertake to knowe them, yet shall he not fynde them.

and ☞ there is no man ỹ knoweth ether ☜

Amonge all thynges that come to passe vnder the Sunne, thys is a misery ỹ it happeneth vnto all a lyke. And in ỹ citie there was fonde a pooze mã (but he was wyle) which with hys wyldome delyuered the citye: yet was there no bo dy, that had eny reſpect vnto ſoch a ſimple man. Heare, O heauen, & herken O earth: for the Lorde hath spoken: I haue norished ād promoted children, but they haue done wyckedly agaīst me. The oxe hath knowne his owner & ꝑ asse his maisters cribb: but Israel hath receaued no knowledge, my people hath no vnderstandyng. Alas for thys synfull nacion, a people of great iniquitie: a seed of vngracious people corruptinge ther wayes. Wasch you therfore, and make you cleane, put awaye youre euell entētes out of my syght, cease from doynge of euell. Lerne to do ryght, applye your selues to equite, delyuer ꝑ oppressed, helpe ꝑ fatherles to his ryght, let the widowes cõplainte come before you. Come I praye ye (sayeth ꝑ Lorde) let vs reasō oure matter together. Though youre sinnes be as read as scarlet, they shalbe as white as snowe. And though they were lyke purple, they shalbe as whit as wolle. If ye be louynge & obediēt, ye shal enioye ꝑ best thyng ꝑ groweth i ꝑ lād. But yf ye be obstinate & rebellyous, ye shalbe deuoured wt ꝑ swerde: for thus ꝑ Lorde hath promised wt his awne mouth. How happeneth it then ꝑ ꝑ ryghteous cytie (which was full of equite) is become vnfaythfull as an whore? ryghtuousnes dwelt i it, but now murtherers. Thy syluer is turned to drosse, & thy wyne myxte with water. Thy princes are wicked & companyõs of theues. They loue gyftes altogether, and gape for rewardes. As for ꝑ fatherles, they helpe hī not to his ryght, nether wyll they lett the wydowes causes come before thē. Therfore, sayeth ꝑ lorde God of hostes, ꝑ myghty gouernor of Israel, Oute vpon ye, I will ease me of myne enemyes, & I will auenge me of myne aduersaryes, I shall laye my hād vpon ỹ, & burne out thy drosse frõ ꝑ tynest & purest, & put out all thy tynne, & set thy iudges agayne as they were sometyme & thy Senatours as they were frõ ꝑ beginnynge. Then shalt ꝑ be called ꝑ ryghteous cytie, ꝑ kaythfull cytie. Siō shalbe redemed wt equite, & they that turne againe vnto her i ryghteousnesse. For ꝑ trāsgressours & vngodly, and soch as are become vnfaythfull vnto the Lord, must altogether be vtterly destroyed. For they shall be ashamed of the goddes ỹ you longed for. And ye shall be put to shame for ꝑ Idols grouegardēs ỹ ye haue chosen: ye shalbe as a tree whose leaues are fallen awaye, & as a garden ꝑ hath no moystnesse. And as for the glory ☞ of your graued Images, it shalbe turned to drye strawe, and he ỹ made them to a sparke. And they shal both burne together, so that no man shalbe able to quench them.

¶ The second Chapter.

¶ Of the commyng and death of Christ, and of the callynge of the Heathen.

THyys is the worde ꝑ was opened vnto Esay the sonne of Amoz, vpon Juda & Jerusalem. It wilbe also ☞ in the last dayes ꝑ ꝑ hyll where ꝑ house of ꝑ Lorde is builded, shall be ꝑ chefe amōge hylles, and exalted aboue all lytle hylles. And all nacyons shall preace vnto hym, and the one to another: vp, * let vs go to ỹ hyll of the Lord, & to the house of the God of Jacob: that he maye shewe vs his waye, and ỹ we maye walcke in his pathes. For the lawe shall come out of Sion, and the word of the Lorde from Jerusalē, and shall geue sentēce amonge the heathen, and shall reforme the multitude of people: They shall breake theyr swerdes also i to mattockes, and theyr speares to make sythes. And one people shall not lyft vp weapen agaīst another, nether shal they learne to fyght from thēs forth. Come ye (O house of Jacob) let vs walcke i the lyght of ỹ Lorde. But thou hast forsaken thy people ỹ house of Jacob, because they go farre beyōde ỹ east cōtreys i Southcrpes (whō they haue as ỹ Philistines had) and ☞ in straunge chyldren they thinke them selues to haue ynough. Theyr land is full of siluer and gold, nether is there any ende of theyr treasure: Theyr lād is also full of horses, & no ēde is there of theyr charets. Theyr lande is also full of vayne goddes, and before ỹ worcke of theyr awne handes haue they bowed thē selues, yee, euē before the thinge that theyr awne fyngers haue made. There kneleth the man, there falleth the man downe before thē, but ỹ (O Lorde) wilt not leaue them vnpunished.

C And therfore get the in to some rock, and hyde ỹ in the grounde for feare of the Lord, and for the glory of his magestye: Which casteth downe the high lookes of presūptuous personnes, and bringeth lowe ỹ pryde of man, and the Lorde only shall be exalted in that daye. For the daye of ỹ Lord of hostes shall go ouer al pride and presumptiō, vpon all them that exalte them selues, and shall bryngе thē all downe: vpō all ỹ hygh and stoute Cedre trees of Libanus, & vpon all the okes of Basan, vpon all hygh hylles, and vpon all stoute mountaynes, vpon all costly towres, & vpon all stronge walles, vpon all shyppes of Tharsis, and vpon euery thyng that is glorious and pleasaūt to loke vpon. And it shall bryngе downe the pryde of man, and laye mans presumptuousnesse full lowe, and the Lorde shall only haue the worshyp in that daye. But the Idols shall vtterly be roted out. And shall crepe in to holes of stone, and into caues of the earth, for feare of the Lorde, and for the glory of hys magesty: what tyme as he shall aryse vp to condemme ỹ earth. Then shall man cast awaye hys goddes of syluer, and hys goddes of gold (which he neuertheles had made to honour them) vnto Molles & Backes: And they shall crepe in to the caues and rockes, & into the clyftes of hard stones, for feare of God, and for the glory of hys magestye, whan he ryseth to condemne the earth. Feare not ye then any man, whose breth is in hys nostrels. For what is he of reputacion?

The thyrd Chapter.

The prophecyeth that at the commyng of Christ all strength and powre shall be put forth of Iurye.

FOr lo, the Lorde God of Hostes doth take awaye from Jerusalē and Juda, all possessions & power A al meat and dryncke, the captayne and the soudyar, the iudge and prophete, the wyse and the aged man, the prince of fyftie peare olde, and the honorable: the Senatours, and men of vnderstādynge: the master of craftes and oratours. And I shall geue thē children to be theyr princes, & babes shall haue the rule of you. The people also shalbe pylled and polled, and one shall euer be doynge violence and wronge to another. The boye shall presume agaynst the elder, and the vyle persone agaynst the honorable. Yee, one shall take a frēde of hys awne kynred by the bosome, and saye: thou hast clothynge, thou shalt be our head, for thou mayest kepe vs frō thys fall & parell. Then shall he sweare & saye B I cannot helpe you. Moreouer, there is neither meate ner clothyng in my house, make me no ruler of the people. For Jerusalē is ouerthrowne & Juda must fall to ỹ grownde, because that both theyr wordes & counsels are agaynst the Lorde, to prouoke the presence of hys magesty vnto anger. The chaungynge of theyr countenaunce bewrayeth them, yee, they declare theyr awne synnes, thē selues, as the Sodomites, & hyde thē not. Wo be vnto theyr soules for they haue retourned eupll vnto thē selues. Byd the ryghteous do well, for they shall enioye the frutes of theyr studies. But wo be to ỹ vngodly and vnryghtreous, for they shalbe rewarded after theyr worckes. Childrēn C are extorcioners of my people, and wemen haue rule of them.

O my people, those that call the blessed deceaue the, and deprаue the waye of thy fotesteppes. The Lorde is rysen vp to cōmen of the matter, and stādeth vp (I saye) to geue iudgement of the people. The Lorde shall come forth to reason with the Senatours and prynces of hys people. It is ye that haue burnt vp my vyneyarde, the extorcyon done to the poore is i your houses. Wherfore do ye oppresse my people, & marre ỹ faces of ỹ poore? sayeth the Lorde God of hostes. Moreouer, thꝰ sayth ỹ lord: Seing ỹ daughters of Sion are be come so proude, and come in wt stretched out neckes and with vayne wanton eyes: leynge they come i tryppyng so nycely with theyr fete: Therfore shall the Lorde shaue the heades of the daughterꝫ of Siō, and shal discouer D

theyr shame. In that daye shall ỹ Lord take awaye the gorgiousnes of theyr apparell, and spanges, cheynes, partelettes, and colarres, bracelettes and hooues, ỹ goodly floured, wyde and brodered rayment, brooches, and headbandes, rynges and garlandes, holy daye clothes and vales, kerchefes and pinnes, glasses and cyprelles, bonettes and taches.

And in steade of good smell, there shalbe stynck amonge thē. And for theyr gyrdles there shalbe lowse bādes. And for well sett heare there shalbe baldenesse. In steade of a stomacher, a sack cloth, and for theyr bewty witherdnesse, and sonne burnyng. Youre housbandes and myghtie men shall perysh with the swerde in batayle.

☞ At that tyme shal ☞ theyr gates mourne and complayne, and they shall sytt as desolate folck vpon the earth.

The fourth Chapter.

For want of men, seuen wemen desyre to haue one man.

A THen shall seuen wyues take holde of one man, and saye: we wyll laye all our meate and clothynge together in comen, only that we may be called thy wyues, & that thys shamefull reproche maye be taken frō vs. After that tyme shall the braunche of the Lorde be bewtyfull and myghtye, and the frute of the earth shalbe fayre and pleasaunt for those Israelytes that shal escape therof. Then shall the remnaunt in Sion & the remnaunt at Jerusalem be called holy: Namely all soch as are wryttē among the lyuynge at Jerusalem: what tyme as the Lorde shall wasch awaye the fylthynes of the daughters of Sion, and pourge ỹ blonde out from Jerusalem with the wynde of B hys iudgmente and with fyre. Moreouer, vpon all the dwellynges of the hyll of Sion and vpon theyr whole congregacion, shall the Lorde prouyde a cloude and smoke by daye, & the shynynge of a flammynge fyre by nyght: for all theyr glory shalbe preserued. And Jerusalem shall be a tabernacle for a shadowne because of hete in the daye tyme a place and refuge where a man maye kepe hym from wether & rayne.

The .v. Chapter.

Of Christ and hys vyneyarde, with an execracyon of couetousnes and dronckenes.

A NOw will I synge my beloued frēde a songe of my frēdes, because of hys vyneyarde. My beloued frende hath a vyneyarde in a very frutefull plenteous grounde.

This he hedged, thys he walled rounde aboute, and plāted it with goodly grapes. In the myddest of it buylded he a towre, and made a wyne presse therin. And afterwarde when he loked that it shulde bryngе hi grapes, it brought forth thornes. Now therfore (O ye Cytysens of Jerusalē and whole Juda:) Judge I praye you betwixte me, and my vyneyard. What more could haue bene done for it that I haue not done? Wherfore then hath it geuē thornes, where I loked to haue had grapes of it.

Well, now I shall tell you how I wyll do with my vyneyarde: I will take ỹ hedge from it, that it maye perysh, and breake downe the wall, that it maye be trodē vnder fote. I will laye it waste, that it shall nether be digged nor cut, but beare thornes and brears. I will also forbyd the cloudes that they shall not rayne vpō it. As for the vyneyarde of the Lorde of hostes it is the house of Israel, and whole Juda hys fayre planting. Of these he loked for equite, but se there is wrong: for ryghteousnesse, lo, It is but mysery. B

Wo vnto thē that ioyne one house to another, & bring one lande so nygh vnto another, that ỹ poore can get no more grounde, & ỹ ye maye dwel vpon the earth alone. These thynges are i the eares of the Lorde of Hostes: shall not many greater & more gorgyous houses be so waste, that no man shall dwell in thē? And ten akers of vynes shal geue but a Quarte, and. xxx. bushels of sede shall geue but an ☞ Epha. C

Wo be vnto them, that ryse vp early to followe dronckennes, and to them that continue so, vntyll nyght, & tyl they be sett on fyre with wyne. In those cōpanyes are harpes and lutes, tabrettes & pipes, and wyne. But they regarde not the worcke of the Lord, and cōsydre not the operacyon of his hādes. Therfore commeth my folk also in D to captyuite, because they haue no vnderstandynge. Theyr glory is famished with hūger, and theyr pryde is marred for thyrste. Therfore gapeth hell, and openeth her mouth maruelous wyde: that theyr pryde, boastinge and welth, with soch as reioyse therin, maye descende into it.

Thus hath man a fall, and is brought lowe, and the hygh loke of the proude shalbe layde downe. But the Lord of hostes is exalted in iudgement, and God that is holy, is praysed in ryghteousnes: Then shall the shepe eate in ordre, and the rych mens landes that were layde waist, shall straūgers deuoure. Wo be vnto thē, that drawe wyckednes vnto them with coardes of vanite and synne, as it were with a cart rope.

Which vse to speake on thys maner: let hym make haste nowe, & go forth with hys worcke, that we maye se it. Lett the councell of the holy one of Israel come, and drawe nye, that we maye knowe it. E lyght darckenesse, that make sowre swete, & swete sowre. Wo be vnto them that are wyse in theyr awne syght, and thynke thē selues to haue vnderstādynge. Wo be vnto them, that are strong to suppe out wyne and experte men to sett vp dronckenesse.

Wo be vnto them ỹ call euell good, and good euell, which make darcknesse lyght, &

These geue sentēce with the vngodly for rewardes, but condempne the iust cause of the ryghteous.

Therfore, lyke as fyre lycketh vp the strawe, and as the flame consumeth the stubble: Euen so theyr rote shalbe as corrupcion: and theyr blossome shall vanyish awaye lyke dust: for they haue cast awaye the lawe of the Lord of hoostes, & blaspheamed the word of the holy maker of Israel.

F Therfore is the wrath of the Lord kindled also agaynst hys people, and he shaketh his hande at them: yee, he hath smyten, so that the hylles dyd trēble. And theyr karcases dyd lye i the opē streates, lyke myre. And i all thys, the wrath of God hath not cealled, but hys hande is stretched out styl. And he shall gyue a token vnto a straunge people: and call vnto thē in a farre coūtre: and beholde, they shall come haistely with spede. There shall not be one faynt nor feble amōge thē, no not a slogysh nor slepery persone. There shall not one of thē put of the gyrdle from his loynes, ner lowse theyr lachet of his shooe. Hys arowes are sharpe, & al his bowes bent. His horse hookes are lyke flynt, & his cartwheles lyke a stormy wynde. His crye is as it were of a lyon, and he roareth lyke lyons whelpes. They shall roare, & hantch vp the praye, & no mā shall recouer it or get it from thē. In that daye they shalbe so fearce vpon them, as the see. And yf we looke vnto the lāde, beholde, it shalbe all darcknesse & sorowe. If we loke toward heauen: beholde, it shalbe darcke.

The.vi. Chapter.

¶ Esay sawe the glory of the Lorde, and was sent to prophecye the desolacyon of Iurye.

A IN the same yeare that kinge Oziah dyed, I sawe ☞ the Lorde syttynge vpon an hygh and glorious seate, & his trayne fylled the tēple. And aboute hī stode the Seraphins, wherof euery one had sixe wiges. With twayne eche couered his face, wt twayne hys fete, and with twayne dyd he flye. They cried also eche one to ather on thys maner: holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hoostes. The whole worlde is full of his glory. Yee, ꝑ geastes and dorechekes moued at his crycg, and the house was full of smoke. Then I sayde, O wo is me for I am lost in almoch as I am a man of vncleane lyppes, & dwell amōge people ꝑ hath vncleane lyppes also: for myne eyes haue 25 sene the kynge and Lorde of hoostes.

Then flewe one of the Seraphins vnto me, hauynge a hote cole in his hande, which he had taken from the aulter with the tonges, and touched my mouth, and sayde, lo: this hath touched thy lyppes, & thyne vnryghteousnes is taken awaye, & thy synne forgeuen. Also, I herd the voyce of ꝑ Lord sayēge on this maner: Whom shall I send, and who wyll be oure messaunger? Then I sayde: here am I, sende me. And he sayde, go, and tell this people: * ye shall heare in dede, but ye shall not vnderstande: ye shall playnely se, and not perceaue. Harden the harte of this people, stoppe theyr eares, ād shut theyr eyes, that they se not with theyr eyes, heare not with theyr eares, and vnderstand not with theyr hertes, and conuerte and be healed.

Then spake I: Lorde, how longe? he answered: vntill the cytes be vtterly wasted without inhabitours, & the houses without men, tyll the lande be also desolate, and lye vnbuylded. For the Lorde shall take ꝑ men farre awaye, so that the lāde shal lye waste a longe season, yet in yt shall succeade .x. kinges, and the lande shall retorne and be layde waste. And as The terebint tre and oke in winter cast ther leaues, and yet haue ther sappe in them so shall the holy seed cōtynue in theyr substance.

The.vii. Chapter.

¶ The Syrians moue batayle agaynst Jerusalem. A byrgyn shall beare a chylde.

A IT happened in the tyme of Ahaz the sonne of Jotham, which was the sonne of Uziah kynge of Juda: ꝑ* Razin the kynge of Syria, and Pechah ꝑ sonne of Romelyah, kynge of Israel: went vp toward Jerusalem to besege it, but Razin was not able to winne ye. Now when the house of Dauid (that is Ahaz) herde worde therof, ꝑ Syria & Ephraim were confederate together: his herte quaked (yee and the hertes also of his people) lyke as whan a tree in the felde is moued with the wynde.

* iiii.Re.xvi.a. ii.par.xxviii.a.

Then sayde God vnto Esay: go mete Ahaz (thou and thy sonne Sear Jasub) at the head of the ouer pole, in the fote path by the fullers grounde, & saye vnto hym, take hede to thy selfe & be styll, but feare not, nether be faynt harted, for these two tayles: ꝑ is: for these two smokyng fyre brandes, the wrath and furiousnes of Razin the Syrian and Romelies sonne: because that the kynge of Syria Ephraim and Romelies sonne haue wickedly cōspyred agaynst the sayig: We wyll goo vp agaynst Juda, vexe them, and brynge them vnder vs, and B set a kynge there, euen the sonne of Tabeel

For thus sayeth the Lorde God therto, It shal not so goo forth, nether come so to pas: for ☞ the head cytie of ꝑ Syriās is Damascus, but the head of Damasc' is Rayzin. And after fyue & threscore yeare, shall Ephraim be no more a people. And ꝑ chefe cytie of Ephraī is Samaria, but the head of Samaria is Romelies sōne. Yf ye beleue not: it commeth of thys: that ye are vnfaithfull to God. Moreouer, God spake once agayne vnto Ahaz, sayinge, requyre a token of the Lorde thy God, whether it be toward the depth beneth, or towarde ꝑ heygth aboue. Then sayd Ahaz: I will requyre none, nether wyll I tempte ꝑ Lorde The Lorde answered: Then heare to, ye of ꝑ house of Dauid: Is it not ynough for you ꝑ ye be greuous vnto men, but ye must greue my God also? And therfore ꝑ Lord shall geue you a token: Behold, a vyrgin shall conceaue and beare a sonne, and (ꝑ hys mother) shalt cal his name ☞ Emanuel. But ter ād hony shall he eate, ꝑ he maye knowe to refuse the euell, and chose the good. For or euer the chyld come to knowlege, to eschue the euel and chose the good. The lande (that thou so Abhorrest) shalbe desolate of both her kynges. The Lorde also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, & vpon thy fathers house (such as neuer came sence the tyme that Ephraim departed frō Juda) thorowe the kynge of the Assirians. For at ꝑ same tyme shall the Lord whystle for the flyes that are aboute the water of Egypt, and for the Bees in ꝑ Assirians lāde. These shall come, and shall lyght all in the desolate valeyes, in the holes of stones, vpon all thornye and bushye places.

☞ At the same tyme shall the Lord ☞ shaue the heare of the head and the fete and ꝑ beerd cleane of, with the rasoure that he shall hyer beyōde the water: namely, with the kynge of the Assirians. At the same tyme shall a man lyue with a kowe, and two shepe. Then, because of the aboundaunce of mylck, he shall make butter & eate it. So that euery one which remayneth in the lāde, shall eate butter and hony. At the same tyme all vyneyardes (though there be a thousande vynes in one, & were solde for a thousande syluerlynges) shalbe turned to brears & thornes. Lyke as they shall come in to the lande wt arowes & bowes, so shall all the lande be come brears and thornes. And as for al hylles that are hewē downe, ther shall not come vpon thē anye feare of brears & thornes. But ꝑ catell shal be dryuen thyther, and the shepe shall fede there.

The.viii. Chapter.

MOreouer, the lord sayd vnto me: A Take ꝑ a greate leaf, & ☞ wryte in it, as men do wt a penne, make hastye spede to robbe, & haste to ꝑ spoyle. And I called vnto me faythfull witnesses to record. Uryah the preest, & zachariah the sonne of Barachiah. After that wēt I vnto the Prophetisse, ꝑ had conceaued & borne a sonne. Then sayde the Lorde to me: geue him this name: a spedie robber: an hastie spoiler. For why, or ouer ꝑ chylde shal haue knowledge to crye father, & mother: shall the ryches of Damascus & ꝑ substaunce of Samaria be taken awaye by ꝑ spoyler, before the kyng of the Assirians.

The Lorde spake also vnto me, sayinge: 15 for so moch as thys people refuseth the still rennynge water of Sylo, and put theyr delyte in Razin & Romelies sonne: Behold, the Lorde shall brynge myghtie & greate floudes of water vpon them: namely, the kynge of the Assirians with all his power: Which shall clyme vp vpō all his floudes, and renne ouer all theyr banckes. And shal breake in vpon Juda, flowinge & increasig in power, tyll he gett hī by ꝑ neck. He shall fyll also the wideneſſe of thy lande ☞ with hys brode winges, O Emanuel. Breake downe (o ye peple of Assur) and ye shall be, brokē downe: herken to all ye of farre coūtrees. Muster you, and you shalbe broken downe, prepare you to batell and you shall be torne in peces: take your councell together, yet must your coūcel come to naught: go in hande withall, yet shall it not prosper: for God is with vs. For the Lord spake thus to me in the powre of his hande, & C warned me, sayinge vnto me: that I shulde not walcke in the waye of this people.

He sayde moreouer: rounde with none of thē, whosoeuer saye: ponder people are bounde together: feare them not, nether be afrayd of them, but sanctifie the Lord of hostes, lett hym be youre feare and drede. For he shall be the holy place to flye to, and stone to stomble at: the rock to fall vpon: a snare and net to both the houses of Israel, and the inhabitours of Jerusalem. And many shall stomble, fall, and be brokē vpon hym: yee, they shalbe snared & taken. D

Now laye the witnesses together & seale the lawe wt my disciples. Thus wil I wayte vpon the Lorde that hath turned his face from the house of Jacob, and I will loke for him. But lo, as for me, and the children which the lord hath geuen me: we are a token and a wonder in Israel, for the Lord of hostes sake, which dwelleth vpon the hyll of Sion.

And yf they saye vnto you: aske councell at the sothesayers, witches, charmers and conjurers, then make them thys answere.

*Luk.xviii. a. Is there a people eny where, ꝑ walketh not coſcell at his God? * Shulde mē renne vnto the dead for ꝑ lyuynge? If eny mā want lyght, leet hym loke vpō the lawe, and the teſtimony, whether they ſpeake not after this meanig. If he do not thys, he ſtōbleth and ſuffreth hūger. And yf he ſuffre hunger he is out of pacience, and blaſpheneth his kyng & his God. Then loketh he vp ward, & downeward to ꝑ earth, & beholde, the re is trouble and darckenceſſe, veracīō is rounde aboute hym, and the cloude of errour.
And out of ſoch aduerſite, ſhal he not eſcape. Euen lyke as in tyme paſt, it hath bene well ſene, that the lande of zabulon and the lande of Nephtaly (where thozow ꝑ ſee waye goeth ouer Jozdane into the lande of Galilee) was at the fyrſt in lytle trouble:
but afterwarde ſoze vexed.

de ceaſſed, but yet hys hande ſtretched oute ſtyll. For the people turneth not vnto hym that chaſtyſeth them, nether do they ſeke the Lozde of Hoſtes. Therfoze hath ꝑ Loz-de roted oute of Iſrael both head and tayle, bzaunche and twigge in one daye.

By the head, is vnderſtande the Senatoure and honozable man, and by the tayle the Pzophet that preached lyes. For all they which enfourme the people that they be in a ryght caſe, ſoch be diſceauers. Soch as men thyncke alſo to be perfecte among theſe, are but caſt awayes.

Therfoze ſhall the Lozde haue no pleaſu- D re in theyr yōge men, nether fauoure theyr fatherleſſe & wydowes. For they are all together ypocrytes and wycked, and all theyr mouthes ſpeake foly. After all thys is not ꝑ Lozdes wzath ceaſſed, but yet hys hande is ſtretched out ſtyll. For vngodlyneſſe burneth, as a fyze in the bzyers and thoznes. And as it were out of a fyze in a wood oz a rede buſh, ſo aſcendeth the ſmoke of theyr pryde.

For cauſe of the wzath of the Lozde of Hoſtes, is the lande full of darckeneſſe, and the people be conſumed, as it were with fy-re, no mā doth ſpare his bzother, but he rob byth on ꝑ ryght hand: & doth famiſhe, he eateth on the lefte hāde, and he ſhall not ha ue ynough. Euery man ſhall ☞ eate the E fleſh of his awne arme. Manaſſes ſhall ea-te Ephzaim, and Ephzaim. Manaſſes, and they both ſhall ete Juda. After all thys is not the Lozdes wzath ceaſſed, but yet is hys hande ſtretched out ſtyll.

¶ The.x. Chapter.

¶ He threatneth the oppreſſours of the poore, and prophecyeth againſt Sennaherib.

WO be vnto thē ꝑ make vnrygh- A teous lawes, & deuyſe thinges, which be to harde for to kepe:
wher thozow the poore are op-preſſed, on euery ſyde, and ꝑ in-nocentes of my people robbed of iudgemēt:
that wyddowes maye be theyr praye, and that they maye robbe ꝑ fatherleſſe. What will ye do in tyme of the viſitacyon, and whan deſtruction ſhall come frō farre? To whom wyll ye ronne for helpe? and to whō wyll ye geue youre honoure, that he maye kepe it? that when I with drawe my hāde ye come not amonge the preſoners, oz lye amonge the dede? After all this doth not B the wzath of the Lozd ceaſſe, but yet is his hande ſtretched out ſtyll.

Wo be

Wo be alſo vnto Aſſur, which is a ſtaf of my wzath, in whoſe hande is the rod of my punyſhemēt. I ſhall ſende hym amōge thoſe ypocritiſh people, amōge the people that haue deſerued my dyſpleaſoures ſhall I ſend hym: that he may vtterly robbe thē, ſpoyle thē, and treade them downe lyke the myre in ꝑ ſtrete. Howbeit, his meanyng is not ſo nether thynketh his hert of thys falſhyon.
But he ymagineth onely, how he may rote out and deſtroye moch people, for he ſayeth are not my Pzynces all kynges? Is not ☞ Calno as eaſye to wynne, as Charcha- C ☞ mis? Is it harder to conquere ☞ Hamath then Arphad? Oz is it lyghter to ouercome Damaſcus then Samaria? As who ſay: I were able to wynne the kyngdome of the Idolaters and their goddes: but not Jeru-ſalem & Samaria. Shal I not do vnto Je ruſalem & their ymages, as I dyd vnto Sa maria and their ydoles?

Wherfoze ꝑ Lozd ſayeth: Allone as I haue perfourmed my whole wozcke vpon the hyll of Syon and Jeruſalem, then wyll I ☞ vyſet the noble and ſtoute hart of the kynge of Aſſyria, with hys proude lookes.
For he ſtandeth thus in his awne conceate:
This do I thozowe ꝑ power of myne awne hāde, and thozow my wyſdome: For I am wyſe, I am he that remoue the lādes of the people: I robbe their treaſures: and (lyke one of the wozthyes) I dzyue them frō their D hye ſeates. Wy hande hath founde out the ſtrēgth of the people, as it were a neſt. And lyke as egges, that were layde here and the re, are gathered together: So do I gather all countrees. And there is no man, ꝑ darre be ſo bolde, as to touch a fether, that darre open his mouth, oz once whyſper.

Shall the axe boaſt it ſelfe, agaynſt him that heweth therwith? oz doth ꝑ ſawe ma-keeny bzaggig agaynſt him that ruleth it?
That were eueñ lyke, as yf the rod dyd exal-te it ſelfe agaynſt him that beareth it: oz as though the ſtaff ſhulde magnifye it ſelfe, as E who ſaye: it were no wood. Therfoze ſhal ꝑ Lozd of hoſtes ſend hi amōge his fatlinges leanes, & burne vp his glozy, as it were wt a fyze. But the lyght of Iſrael ſhalbe that fyze, and his Sanctuary ſhalbe the flamme and it ſhall kyndle, and burne vp his thoz-☞ nes and bzeers in one daye, yee ☞ all the F glozy of his woddes and feldes ſhalbe conſumed with body & ſoule: And they ſhalbe as an hooſt of men, whoſe ſtanderd bearer fayleth. The trees alſo of hys felde which remayne, ſhalbe of ſoch a nōbze, that a childe maye tell them.

After that daye ſhall the remnaūt of Iſ-rael, & ſoch as are eſcaped out of the houſe of Jacob, ſeke nomoze conforte at him that ſmote thē, but with faythfulneſſe & treuth ſhal they truſt vnto the Lozd, the holy one of Iſrael. The remnaunt, euen the Poſte- F ryte of Jacob, ſhall conuerte vnto God the myghty one. For though thy people (O Iſ rael) be as ꝑ ſande of the ſee, yet ſhal ꝑ remnaunt of them conuerte in hym. Perfecte is the iudgement of him that floweth in rygh teouſneſſe, and therfoze the Lozde of hoſtes ſhall perfectly fulfyll the thynge, ꝑ he hath determined in ꝑ myddeſt of ꝑ whole wozlde Therfoze thus ſayeth the Lozd God of hoſtes: Thou my people, ꝑ dwelleſt in Syon, be not afrayed, for ꝑ kynge of the Aſſiriās:
He ſhal ſmyte the with a rodd, & ſhal wagg his ſtaff at the, as the Egyptians dyd ſome tyme: But ſoone after, ſhall my wzath and myne indignaciō be fulfylled i the deſtruccion of them.

Moreouer, the Lozd of hoſtes ſhall pre- G pare a ſcourge for hi, lyke as was ꝑ ſlaugh-ter of Madiā vpon the rock of Oreb. And he ſhall lyft vp his rodd ouer the ſee, as he dyd ſomtyme ouer the Egyptians. Then ſhall hys burthen be taken from thy ſhoulders, and his yocke from thy neck, yee, the ſa me yocke ſhall be corrupte for very fatneſſe.
He ſhall come to Aiath, and go thozow toward Wygron: at Wychmas ſhall he laye vp his harneſſe, and go ouer the foorde. Sy bea ſhall be their reſtynge place, Rhamah ſhalbe a frayed, Sybea Saul ſhall flye awaye. The voyce of ꝑ noyes of thy hoꝛſes
(O daughter Gallim) ſhalbe herde vnto Lays & to Anathoth, which alſo ſhalbe in trouble. Madmena ſhall tremble for feare, but ꝑ citezens of Gabin are manly, yet ſhal
he remayne at Nob ꝑ daye. After that, ſhal he lyft vp hys hāde agaynſt the mount of ꝑ daughter Syō, the hyll of Jeruſalem. But ſe, the Lozd God of hoſtes ſhall take awaye the proude from thence, with feare. He ſhall hewe downe the proude, & fel the hye mynded. The buſſhes alſo of ꝑ wood ſhal be ro-te out with yron, and Lybanus ſhall haue a myghtye fall.

¶ The.xi. Chapter.

¶ The prophecyeth of the natiuite of Chriſt and of hys people: of the remnaunt of Iſrael, and of the faieth of the heathen oz gentyles.

AND there ſhall come a rodd forth A of the kynred of Iſai, and a bloſſome ſhall flozith out of hys rote.
The ſpzete of ꝑ Lozd ſhall lyght vpon hym: the ſpzete of wyſdome, and vn-derſtādynge: ꝑ ſpzete of councell, & ſtrength the ſpzete of knowledge, and of the feare of the Lozde: and ſhall make hym feruent in the feare of God.

For he ſhall not geue ſentence, after the thyng that ſhal be bzought before his eyes, nether repzoue a matter at ꝑ fyrſt hearing:
but wt ryghteouſneſſe ſhal he iudge ꝑ poore, and with

and with holynes shal he refourme the simple of the worlde.

He shall smyte the worlde with the rodd of hys mouth, & w̄ the breath of hys mouth shall he slaye the vngodly. Rightcousnesse shalbe the gyrdle of his loynes, & trueth & faythfulnesse, the gyrdynge vp of hys raynes. The wolfe shall dwell with the lambe, and the Leoparde shal lye downe by ꝑ goate. Bullockes, Lyōs & catell shall kepe compāy together, so ꝑ a lytle chylde shall rule them. The kowe & the Bere shall fede together, & their yonge ones shall lye together. The Lyō shall eate strawe lyke the oxe, or the kowe. The childe whyle he sucketh, shal haue a delire to the serpētes nest, and when he is weaned, he shall put hys hāde into the Cockatrypes denne. No man shall do euel to another, no mā shal destroye another, in all the hyll of my holynes. For the earth shalbe full of the knowledge of the Lord, euē as the see floweth ouer with water.

And in ꝑ daye shal the gentyles enquere after ꝑ rote of Jesse which shalbe set vp for a token vnto the people, & hys dwellynge shalbe glorious. At ꝑ same time shal ꝑ lord take in hande agayne, to conquere the remnaūt of his people (which shalbe left alyue) from the Assyriās, Egyptcians, Arabiās, Moriās, Elamites, Caldeyes, Antiochiās and frō the Ilandes of the see. And he shall sett vp a token amonge the Gentyles, and gather together the dispersed of Israel, yee & the out castes of Juda from the foure corners of the worlde. The hatred of Ephraim also and enemyes of Juda shalbe cleane rooted oute. Ephraim shall beare no euell will to Juda, and Juda shal not hate Ephraim: but they both together shall flye vpon the shoulders of ꝑ Philistines toward the west, and spoyle thē together that dwell towarde the East. The Idumytes and the Moabites shall lett their handes fall, & the Ammonites shalbe obedient vnto them.

The Lorde also shall cleue the tunges of the Egyptcians see, & with a myghtie wynde shall he lyft vp his hāde ouer Nilus, and shall smyte hys seuen streames, and make men go ouer drye shod. And thus shal there be a waye for his people, ꝑ remayneth from the Assirians, lyke as it happened to the Israelites, what tyme they departed out of ꝑ land of Egypt.

The.xii. Chapter.

The songe of the Church for the obtayninge of the victorie and ouer comyng of the worlde.

SO that then ꝑ shalt saye: O Lorde, I wyll thanke the, for thou waste displeased at me, but refrayne thou from thy wrath, and comforte me. Behold, God is my saluacion in whom I will trust, and not be afrayde. For the Lorde God is my strength, & my songe, he also is become my saluacion. Therfore with ioye shall ye drawe water out of the welles of the Sauioure, & then shall ye saye: geue thankes vnto the lorde, call vpon his name, declare his councels amonge the people, kepe them in remembrance, for his name is excellent. O syng prayses vnto the Lord, for he hath done greate thynges, as it is knowne in all the worlde. Crye out, and syng thou ꝑ dwellest in Syon, for great is the holy one of Israell in the myddes of the.

The.xiii. Chapter.

The prophecieth the destruccion of Babylon, the captiuite, and the comimyng agayne of the people.

THis is the heuy burthen of Babylon, which Esay the sonne of Amos dyd se. Lyft vp the banner vpon the hye hyl, call vnto thē, holde vp youre hande that the Prynces maye go in at the doze. I haue sent for my debytes & my gyauntes (sayth the Lord) which shall execute wrath, I wyll call for soch, as triumphe in my glory.

There is a noyse of a multytude in the moūtaynes, like as of a great people, a russhynge, as though the kyngdomes of ꝑ nacions came together. (And the Lord of Hostes, mustreth his armye to bataile.) They come out of a farre countree, from the ende of heauen: Euen the Lord hym selfe w̄ the ministers of his wrath, to destroye ꝑ whole lande. Mourne ye, for ꝑ daye of the Lord is at hande, and shall come as a destroyer from the almyghtie. Therfore shall all handes be letten downe, & all mens hertes shal melt awaye, they shall stāde in feare, carefulnesse and sorow shall come vpon them, & they shall haue payne, as a woman ꝑ trauayleth with childe. One shall be abasshed of another, and their faces shall burne lyke the flamme of fyre.

Beholde, the daye of the Lord shall come, terrible, full of indignaciō, furoure & wrath to make the lande waste, & to roote out the synners therof. For the starres & planetes of heauen shal not gene their lyght, the sunne shalbe darkened in the rysynge, and the moone shall not shyne with his lyght. And I wyll punyth the wickednesse of the worlde, and the synnes of the vngodly, sayeth the Lorde. The hye stomackes of the proude wyll I take awaye, and wyll laye downe the boastynge of tyrauntes. I will make a man dearer thē fyne golde, and a mā to be more worth then a goldē wedge of Ophir. Therfore, I wyll shake the heauen, and the earth shall remoue out of her place: in the wrath of the Lord of hostes, and in the daye of hys fearfull indignacion. And Babylon shalbe as an hunted or chased doo, and as a shepe ꝑ no man taketh vp. Euery mā shall turne to hys awne people, and flye eche one into his awne lande. Who so is founde alone, shalbe shot thorow: And who so gather together, shalbe destroyed with the swerde. * Their chyldren shalbe slayne before their eyes, their houses spoyled, and their wynes rauished. For lo, I shall brynge vp the Medes agaynst them, which shall not regarde syluer, nor be delirous of gold. With bowes shall they destroye the yonge chidren, & haue no pytie vpon wemen wyth chylde, & their faces shall not spare the chyldren. And Babylon (that glory of kyngdomes and bewtye of the Caldees honour) shalbe destroyed euen as God destroyed * Sodome and Gomorre. It shall not endure for euer, nether shall there be any more dwellyng there, frō generacyon to generacyon.

The Arabiās shall pytch no tentes there, nether shal ꝑ shepheardes make their foldes there any more: but fearfull wild beastes shall lye there, & ꝑ houses shalbe full of greate Oules. Estriches shall dwel there, & Apes shal daūse there wild cattes shal crye in the palaces, and Dragōs shalbe in ꝑ pleasaūt houses. And as for Babylons tyme it is at hād, & her dayes shal not be prolōged.

The.xiiii. Chapter.

The returne of the people from captiuitye. The prosperitye of the people of God, and acceptcon of theyr enemyes. The pryde of Babylon.

BUt the Lord wylbe mercyfull vnto Jacob, and wil yet chose Israel agayne, and set them i their awne lande. Straungers shal cleaue vnto them, & get them to the house of Jacob. The people shal take them, & cary them home to their awne lāde. And make thē to enherite ꝑ house of Israel in ꝑ lande of ꝑ Lord ꝑ they maye be seruauntes & hand maydēs of the Lord. They shal take those prisoners whose captynes they had bene a fore: & rule those ꝑ had oppressed them. Whē the Lord now shal brīge the to rest, frō the trauayle, feare, & harde bondage ꝑ thou wast laden w̄ all: thē shalt thou vse thys mockage vpon the kyng of Babylon, & saye: How happeneth it ꝑ the oppressour leaueth of? Is the golden tribute come to an ende? The Lord hath brokē ꝑ ceptre of ꝑ vngodly & the rodd of the lordly. Which whē he is wroth smyteth ꝑ people w̄ cōtinual strokes, & tyrānou selye reigneth ouer ꝑ hethen whom he persecuted without compassion. And therfore the whole worlde is now at rest & quyetnes and men synge for ioye.

Ye, euē ꝑ Fyrre trees & Cedres of Libanus reioyse at thy fall sayēg: Nowe ꝑ thou art layd downe, there come no mo vp to hewe downe vs. Hell also beneth trēbleth to mete ꝑ at thy cōmynge, & for thy sake hath raysed his deade, & all myghtie mē & princes of ꝑ earth. All kynges of ꝑ earth stāde vp frō their seates, ꝑ they may all answere & speake vnto ꝑ. Art ꝑ become weake also as we? art thou become lyke vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pryde is layde downe into the pyt, and so is the melody of thy instrumentes. Wormes be layde vnder the, & wormes are thy couerynge.

How art thou fallen from heauē (O Lucifer) thou faire morynge childe? how hast thou gotten a fall euen to the grounde, and art become weaker thē ꝑ people? For thou saydest in thyne herte: I will clyme vp into heauen, & exalte my throne aboue beyde ꝑ starres of God, I will syt also vpon the holy mount towarde the North, I will clyme vp aboue the cloudes, and wylbe lyke the hyghest of al. Yet thou shalt be brought downe to ꝑ depe of hell. They that se the, shall narowly loke vpō the, and thynke in them selues, sayenge: Is thys the mā, ꝑ brought all lādes in feare, and made the kingdomes afrayde? Is this he that made the worlde i a maner waste, and layde the cytyes to the groūde, which let not his prisoners go out?

The kynges of the nacīōs lye euery one in his awne house with worshype, and ꝑ art cast out of thy graue lyke a filthy abhominable braūch: lyke as dead mens raymēt ꝑ are shot thorow with the swerde, & go downe to the stones of the depe: as a dead coarse that is troden vnder fete: and art not buried with them. Euē because that thou hast wasted thy lande, and destroyed thy people The generacyō of the wycked shalbe without honour, for euer. Let there a waye be sought to destroye their childzen, that be in their fathers wyckednes, ꝑ they come not vp agayne to possesse the lande, and fyll the worlde full of enemyes.

I will stande vp agaynst thē (sayeth the lord of hostes) & roote out ꝑ name & remaūt sonne, & sonnes sonne of Babylō (sayeth ꝑ Lord) & will geue it to ꝑ Otters, & will make water poddels of it. And I wyll swepe thē out w̄ the besome of destrucciō, sayeth ꝑ Lorde of Hostes. The Lord of hostes hath sworne an othe, sayinge: It shall come to passe as I haue determyned, and shalbe fulfylled as I haue deuysed. So that Assiria shal I destroye in my lande, & vpō my moūtaynes will I treade hi vnder foote. Wher thorow his yock shal come from them, and his burthen shalbe taken frō their shoulder. Thys deuyce hath God taken thorow the whole worlde, and thys is hys hande stretched out ouer all people. For yf the Lord of hostes determē a thynge, who is able to dysanulle it? And yf he stretch forth his hāde, who maye holde it in agayne?

The same yeare that Kynge Ahaz dyed, god threatened on this maner: Reioyse not thou

(thou whole Palestyna) because the rod of hym þ beateth the is broken: for out of the serpētes rote, there shall come an adder, & þ frute shalbe a fyrie flynge worme. But the ☞ fyrst borne of þ poore shalbe fed, & þ sym ple shal dwel in safetye. Thy rote also will I destroye wt honger, & it shal slaye thy rem naūt. Mourne þ porte, wepe þ citye, for (O whole land of Palestina) þ art layde waste for there shall come frō þ North, a smoke that not one alone may abyde in his place
Who shall then answere þ messangers of þ Gētyles? For þ Lord hath stablyshed Syō, & the poore of his people þ be therin, do put theyr trust in him.

¶ The.xv.Chapter.

¶ A prophecie agaynst Moab.

THis is the heuy burthen vpō Moab:
Ar of Moab was destroyed & ouer-throwen in þ nyght season: Kir also in Moab was destroyed & perysshed in the nyght. They wente vp to the ydols house, euen to Dibō to the hye places, to wepe for Nebo, and Moab dyd mourne for Medba:
☞ All theyr heades, were balde & all theyr beardes shaven. In theyr stretes are they gyrded aboute with sack cloth. In all þ top pes of their houses & stretes shalbe nothyn-ge but mournynge & weppynge. Hesebon & Eleale shall crye, þ theyr voyce shalbe hear de vnto Jahaz. The worthyes also of Moab shall bleare out and crye for very sorow of their Myndes: Wo shall my herte be for ¶ Moabs sake. They shal flye vnto þ cyte of Zoar, which is lyke a fayre yong bullock of thre yere olde, for they shall all go vp to Luith, wepinge. Euē so by þ waye toward Horonaim they shall make lamētacion for ther vtter destrucciō. For þ waters of Nim ri shalbe dried vp, by reason wherof þ grasse is withred, þ herbes destroyed, & the grene thynges gone. For the relidue þ he hath done, they are sory. As for theyr substaūce, þ enemyes haue caried thē to the broke of þ wyllyes. For þ crie wēt ouer þ whole lande of Moab: vnto Eglaim & vnto Beer Elim was there nothing but mournyng, because the waters of Dimō were full of bloude: for I the Lord shall sende more bloude vpō Di mon, & lyons vpō the remnaunt of the lan-de, & on them that are escaped from Moab.

¶ The.xvi.Chapter.

¶ The destruccyon of Moab.

SEnde þ Lord of the world a lā be, frō the rocke þ lyeth towarde þ deserte, vnto þ hil of the daughter Syō. For as for the daughters of Moab, they shalbe as a trēblyng byrde, þ is put out of heruest, for they shal carye them vnto Arnon: gather your coūcel, come toge ther in iudgemēt, couer vs wt your shadowe in the myddaye, as the nyght doth hyde the chased, and be wraye not them that are fled let my persecuted people dwell amōge you ☞ Moab, be thou their refuge against the destroyer: for the aduersary is brought to naught, þ robber is vndone, the tyraunt is wasted out of the land. And in mercy shall the seate be prepared, and he shal syt vpō it in the trueth, i the tabernacle of Dauid iud gyng and seekyng iudgemēt, & making hast vnto ryghteousnes. We haue heard of the pryde of Moab, he is very proude, presumpteous, arrogant, and full of indignacyon, & vayne are hys lyes. Therfore shal Moab make lamentaciō because of the Moabites (that shalbe slayne) yee they shal wayle all together. Because of the ☞ foundacyōs of the citye that is made of brick, shal ye complayne: euē ☞ ye lame people that are left onely behinde.

For ☞ the vynes of Hesbon are cut do-wne: As for the vyne of Sibma, the Lor-des of the heithen haue broken downe hyr principall braūches: they are come euen vn to Jazer, they wēt on wādering vnto þ wil dernesse. Hyr goodly braunches were thro-wen downe, as they wēt ouer the see. Therfore will I mourne for Jazer, & for the vy-ne of Sibma. I will poure my teares vpon the, O Hesbō and Eleale, for the crie of thy ne enemyes is fallen vpon thy sommer fru-tes, and vpon thyne haruest. The Myrth and chere is taken awaye out of the plentifull felde, and in the vyneyardes there shal be no ioye ner gladnesse.

The treader shall treade out no wyne in the presses, þ song of theyr mery chere haue I layde downe. Wherfore, my bowels shal romble lyke an harpe for Moabs sake, and myne inwarde partes for the citys sake þ is made of bryck. And it shal come to passe, that whā it is sene that Moab shalbe made wery of hys hyll chapels, ☞ he shall come to his tēple to praye, but he shal not be able So then, thys is the sayēg þ the Lord hath spoken concernyng, Moab sens that tyme.
But now the Lord hath spoken sayeng. In thre yeares which shalbe as ☞ the yeares of an hyred seruaunt: shall the glorye of Moab be turned into cōfusion, thorow out al his multitude, which is very great. And that whych remayneth, shalbe very small and feble.

¶ The.xvii.Chapter.

¶ A prophecie agaynst Damascus.

THys is the heuy burthen vpon
Damascus: Beholde, Damascꝰ is taken awaye, to be nomore a citye, but shalbe an heape of bro ken stones. The waste citys of Aroer shalbe foldes for catel which shall lye
there, and there shalbe none to fraye them awaye ☞ Ephraim also shall nomore be strong,

strong, & Damascꝰ shall nomore be a kyng dome, & the remnaunt of Syria shalbe as þ glorye of þ childrē of Israel, sayeth þ Lord of hoostes. And in þ daye it shal come to pas se þ Jacob shalbe made very poore, & þ fatnesse of hys flesche shall ware leane. And be shalbe as one þ gathereth vp corne in haruest, euē lyke him whose arme reapeth þ ea-res of corne. He shalbe also lyke hym þ ga-thereth eares of corne in the valley of Re-phaim. Some gathering in dede shal there be left in it, euē as in the shakyng of an olyue tre there remayne two or thre berryes in the toppe of the vppermost bowe, & foure or fyue in þ brode frutefull braunches therof, sayeth the Lorde God of Israel.

In Then shall mā turne agayne to his maker, & his eyes shall haue respecte to þ holy one of Israel. As for the altares which are his awne handy worke, he shal not regarde them, & the thynges þ his fyngers haue ma de (as groues & ymages) those shall he not cast his eye vnto. In þ daye shal their strōg cities be as the forsaken shrubbes & braunches, which ☞ they left because of the children of Israel, & the lande shalbe desolate.
Because thou hast forgotten God thy sal-uacion, and hast not bene myndefull of thy ☞ strong rock, ☞ therfore shalt thou set plea saunt plantes, & shalt graffe the braūche of ¶ The prophecie agaynst Egypte.

THe heuy burthen of Egypte: Beto Egypte, & the ydols of Egypte shall tremble at the presence of hym, & the agaynst another, so that one brother shall it selfe, & the deuyce that they take, wyll I destroye, so that they shall seke councell at ydols & at sorcerers, at wozkers with spry-

I geue ouer into the hande of a marueloꝰ cruell Lorde, & a myghtie kynge shall haue dominion ouer them, sayeth the Lord God of hoostes. The waters of the see shal fayle, & the ryuer shall decreace and be dryed vp.
The waters shalbe drawen out: the ryuers of Egypte shalbe emptyed & dryed vp, the redes and flagges shalbe cut downe.

The grasse in the ryuer & by the ryuers B banck, & all that groweth by the ryuer shal wither awaye, and be brought to naught.
The fyshers also shal mourne and all they that cast angle into the water, shal make la nett beside þ waters, shalbe roted out. Mo rouer, they þ wozke in flaxe, and make fyne wozkes, shall be confounded, and so shall wozkes shalbe euen destroyed, and all they that make pondes and stewes foz fish shall come to naught.

But ye foolish pzynces of zoan, ye wyse counceloures of Pharao, whose wit is turned to foolyshnes, how saye ye vnto Pharao: I am come of wyse men & of auncient kynges? Wher ar they? where are (I saye) thy wyse men? Let them tell it (yf they can) what the lozd of hooستes hath deuysed vpon Egypte.

¶ The pzynces of zoan are become fooles, the pzynces of Noph are disceaued, they haue disceaued Egypte, euen they that were taken foz the chefe kynred therof. In the myddes of it hath the lozd powred the spzete of wyckednes, and they haue disceaued Egypte in euery wozke therof, euen as a dzonckē man stacketh in his vompte. And Egipt shalbe afrayed of the land of Juda: so that euery one which maketh mencyon of it, shalbe afrayed therat, because of the councell of the Lozd of hooستes which he deuyseth foz it.

In that daye shall fyue cities in the land of Egypte speake the language of Canaā, & sweare by the Lozd of hooستes: ☞ the citye of destruccyon shalbe called one of them. In that daye shall ☞ the altare of the Lozd be in the myddes of the land of Egypt, & thys title besyde it: VNTO THE LORDE. Foz they shall crye vnto the Lozde because of such as trouble them, & he shall send them a Sauiour & a great man to delyuer them.

D And the Lozd shalbe knowne in Egipte, and the Egyptians shall knowe the Lozd in that daye, and do sacrifice and oblatiō: yee they shall vowe a vowe vnto the Lozd, and perfourme it. The lozd also shal smyte Egypte sore, & heale them agayne, & they shalbe conuerted vnto the Lozd, and he shalbe intreated of them, & shall heale them. In that daye shall there be a comē waye out of Egypte into Assyria, and Assyria shall come in to Egypte, & Egypte in to Assyria, so that the Egyptiās and the Assyriās shall serue the Lozde together. In that daye shal the nacyō of Israel be the thyrde wyth Egypte & Assyria, and they shalbe blessed in the myddes of the lande, which lāde the Lozd of hooستes hath blessed, sayeng: blessed is my people of Egypte, Assur also is the wozke of myne handes, and Israel is myne inheritaunce.

Euen so shall the kynge of Assyria take a-

¶A prophecy of the comming of Christ, and destruccion of ydolatrye.

IN that daye, the Lorde with his sore, great and myghtye swearde shall visit ☞ * Leuiathan the fugityue
* i.Cor.xv.c. Apo.xij.c serpent, euē Leuiathan that croked serpent, and he shall slaye the dragon that is in the see. In that daye, se ye the syng of the congregatiō which is the vyneiard, that bringeth forth the best wyne. Euē I the Lorde do kepe it. In due seasons shall I water it, & lest the enemye do it any harme, I will both nyght and daye preserue it. There is no displeasure in me, else (when the vyneiarde bringeth me forth breers & thornes) I wold go thorow it vp warre, & burne it vp together. Let it take holde of my strength, and it shalbe at one with me, euen at one shall it be with me.

The dayes are cōmyng, that Jacob shall take rote. Israel shalbe grene & flourysshe, and the worlde shalbe fylled with frute. Hath he smytten him as sore, as he did the other that smote him? Or is he slain with so sore a slaughter as they that slew hym? In measure doth he smyte him, whyle he sēdeth vnto him soch thinges, wherby he commeth to hys mynde agayne. For in the daye that the east wynde bloweth sore, it taketh awaye the frutes. Thus therfore shall the iniquytie of Jacob be reconcyled, and here is all the frute of the takynge awaye of his synne, yf he make all the stones of the aultars of ydolles, as chalke stones that are beaten in sunder, that theyr groues and ymages ryse not vp agayne.

¶ Els, shall the stronge cytye be desolate, & the habitation forsaken & left lyke a wildernes. There shall the calfe fede, & ther shall he lye, & eate vp the graffes therof. ☞ When the braūches of it are drie, they are broken of, &

And in that daye shall the Lorde make a threshing from the middes of the riuer Euphrates vnto the riuer of Egipt: and ye childrē of Israel shalbe gathered together one to another. In that daye shall ☞ the great trōpe be blowne, so that they which were lost in the lāde of Assiria: & they that were banished into the lande of Egipt, shall come and worshyp the Lorde in the holy mount at Jerusalem:

¶The.xxviij.Chapter.

¶Against the pryde of Ephraim, & against false prestes and preachers.

WO be vnto the crowne of pryde, euē * to the dronken people of Ephraim whose great pōpe is as a flour that fadeth awaye) ☞ vpon the head of the valleye of such as be in welth, and are ouerladen with wyne. Beholde, * ther commeth a vehemēt and sore daye frō the Lorde lyke an vnmeasurable hayle and perelous tempest, euen lyke the force of myghtye and horrible waters, that violētlye beareth downe all thinges. The crowne of the pryde of the dronken Ephraemites shalbe troden vnder fote: * so that the floure of hys fayrenes and bewty, which is in the head of ☞ the valley of fatnes, shall fade awaye, as doth an vntimely rype fygg afore hervest. Which whā a man spyeth, he loketh vpon it: and whyle it is yet in his hande, he eateth it vp.

In that daye shall the Lorde of hoostes be the crowne of glory, & diademe of bewtye vnto the residue of his people. He wilbe also a spirite of perfyte knowledge to him that sitteth in iudgement, & strength vnto them that turne awaye the battell to the gate of the enemies. But they are out of the waye by reason of wyne: yee, farre out of that waye are they thorowe strong drynke. ☞ * The preste also & the prophet are gone astraye by the meanes of strong drincke, they are dronkē with wyne, they go amisse thorowe strong drincke: they fayle in ꝓphecying & stōble in iudgmēt. For tables are so full of vomyte and fylthines, that no place is cleane. Who then shall such one teach knowledge? And whom shall he make to vnderstōde the thing that he heareth? For they are as ignorantes as yong childrē, that are taken frō the mylke and are weened.

For they that be such must haue ☞ after one lesson, another lesson: * after one cōmaūdement, another commaundemēt, after one rule another rule, after one instruccion another instruccyon, there a lytle and there a lytle. For he that speaketh vnto this people is euen as one that vseth rudenes of speche, and a straunge language. Yf any man saye vnto them: lo, this is the rest wherwith ye maye ease hym that is weerye, thys is the refreshinge, they wyll not herken. * Therfore, the worde of the Lorde (lesson vpō lesson, commaundement vpon commaundement, rule vpon rule, instruccyon vpon instruccion, there a lytle and there a lytle) shall be vnto them an occasyon of stombling that they maye go on, and fall backward, be bruised, tangled and snared.

Wherfore, heare the worde of the Lorde ye mockers, ye that haue rule of this people which is at Jerusalē. Because ye haue sayd:

☞ We

☞ ☞ we haue made a couenaunt with death, & with hell are we at agrement. And though there go forth a sore plage, it shall nott come vnto vs. For we haue made falshode our refuge, and vnder vanitie are we hid. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, I laye in Sion for a foūdation a stone, euē a tryed stone, a precio⁹ corner stone, a sure foūdatiō: ☞ ☞ Whoso beleueth, let hym not be to hastye. Iudgment also will I laye to the rule, and righteousnes to the balaūce: so that ☞ the hayle shall take awaye your vayne confidēce as a broome, and the preuy place of youre refuge shall the waters renne ouer:

And thus the couenaunt that ye made with death, shalbe disanulled: and your agrement that ye made with hell, shall not stand. Yee, when the sore plage goeth forth, ye shalbe troden downe vnder it. Frō the tyme that it goeth forth, it shall take you awaye. For early in the mornynge euery daye: yee, both daye & nyght shall it go thorowe: & when the noyse therof is perceaued, it shall gendre vexation. For ☞ the bed is narow, and nott large: & the couering so small that a man can
*Esa.xxviii.c. not wynde him selfe vnder it. * For ☞ the Lorde ‡ii.Reg.v.b.b. shall stonde as ☞ in mount ‡ Perazim, and

ii.Par.xiij.b. he maie do his worke, ☞ his straūg worke ☞ & bring to passe his acte, his straunge acte.

Now therfore se ye be no mockers, lest your punyshment increase: for I haue heard of the Lorde of hoostes, that there shall come a short ende vpon the whole earth. Heare ye then, & herken vnto my voyce, consider & pōder my speech. Doth not the husbandmā plowe all the daie, and openeth & breaketh the clottes of his grounde, that he maye sowe? Whā he hath made it playn, will he not spred abrode the fitches, and sowe comyn, & cast in whete by measure, & the appoynted barlye and rye in their place? God will instructe hym to haue discretion, euen his God wyll teach hym. For fitches shall not be treshed with an harowe: nether shall a carte whele be brought thorowe the comyn: but the fitches are beatē out with a staffe, and comyn with a rodd. But the seede that bread is made of, is treshed, though it be not alwaye a threshing. And the carte whele must be brought ouer it, lest he grynde it with his teth. This also commeth of the Lorde of hoostes, which worcketh wonderfull wysdome, and bringeth excellēt workes to passe.

I wyll besege the round about, and fight against the thorowe a bulwarke: and wyll reare vp diches against the. Thou shalt be brought downe, & shalt speake out of the grounde, and thy spech shall go lowe out of the duste. Thy voyce also shall come out of the grounde lyke the voyce of a witch: and thy talkyng shall whysper out of the dust. Moreouer, the noyse of thy straūge enemyes shalbe lyke thynne dust, & the multitude of tyrauntes shalbe * as dyse strawe, that cannot tary: euen sodenly and in hayste shall theyr blast go. * Psal.l.b

Thou shalt be visited of the Lorde of hostes wt thōder, erthquake, and wt a great noise: with storme and tempest and wt the flame of a cōsuming fyer. And the multitude of all nations that fyght against Ariel, shalbe as a dreame sene by night: * euē so shall all they be that make warre against it, and stronge holdes to ouercome it, and that laie eny sege vnto it. In conclusion, it shalbe euē as when an hongry man dreameth that he is eating, and when he awaketh, hys soule is emptye. Or as when a thurstye man dreameth that he is drincking: and when he awaketh, he is yet faynt: and his soule lacketh the appetite. Euen so shalbe the multitude of all nations that fyght against Syon. * Psal.lxxxviij.c

Ponder these thynges once in your mynd, & wonder. * Blinded are they them selues and the blind guides of other. They are dronken: but not with wyne: they are vnstable, but not thorowe strong drincke. For the Lorde hath couered you with a slomberinge spyrite, and hath closed your eyes. Your prophetes also & rulers that shuld se, thē hath he couered. * And the vysyon of all the prophetes is become vnto you, as the wordes of a boke that is sealed vp, which men deliuer to one that is learned, saying: Reade thou in it. And he sayth: I cannot, for it is sealed. And the boke is geuen vnto him that is not learned, saying: Reade thou in it, and he sayth: I am not learned. Therfore thus hath the Lorde sayde: * For so moche as this people when they be in trouble, do honour me with their mouth & wt their lippes: but their hert is far fro me, & the feare which they haue vnto me, proceadeth of a cōmaūdment that is taught of men. Therfore wyll I do maruayls amonge this people, euē maruelous thinges (I saye) & a wonder. * For the wysdome of their wise men shall perysh, & the vnderstanding of their wittye men shall hyd it selfe. * Esa.lxiij.c. Matth.xv.b. * Abdi.i.c i.Cor.i.c

Wo vnto thē that kepe secrete their thoughtes, to hyde their councell frō the Lorde, and do their workes in darknesse, sayinge: * who seeth vs? & who knoweth vs? Doutles, your destruccion is (in my handes) in reputacyon as the potters claye. And doth the wozcke saye of hym that made it, he made not me? And doth an earthen vessell saye of him that kaschyoned it, he had no vnderstandinge? Is it not hard at hande, that Lybanus shalbe turned into a lowe felde, and that the lowe felde shalbe take as the wodde? And in that daye shall deaffe men heare the wozdes of the boke, and the eyes of ỹ blinde shall se euen out of the cloud and out of darcknes. The meke spzeted also shalbe mery in the Lozde, and the pooze amonge them that be lowly, shall reioyce in the holy one of Israel. Foz he that dyd violence, is brought to naught, and the scoznefull man is consumed: and they roted out that were haltie so soone to vnrygh teousnes, & make a man to synne in the wozde, and that take hym in a snare which repzoued them in the open place: and they that haue turned the cause of the ryghteous to naught. Therfoze thus sayth the Lozde vnto the house of Jacob, euē thus sayeth he that redemed Abzaham: * Jacob shall not nowe be cōfoūded, ner his face pale. But when he seeth hys chyldzen the wozcke of my hādes in the middes of him, they shall sanctifie my name, and pzayse the holy Lozd of Jacob, and feare the God of Israel. C Jerusalem is assieged by Sennaherib, in the tyme of kynge Hezekias.

A IN * the.xiiij. yere of king Hezekias came Sennaherib kyng of the Assirians downe, to laye seage vnto * iiii. Regū. xviii. c all the stronge cityes of Juda, to conquer thē. And the kyng of Assirpans sent Rabsakeh frō Lachis towarde Jerusalem, agaynst king Hezekias, wt an exceading hoste, which set him by the condyte of the ouerpole in the waye ỹ goeth thorow the fullers lāde. And so ther came forth vnto him Eliakim Helkias sonne the president * Sobna ỹ scribe, and Joah Asaphs sonne ỹ secretary. * Esa. xxii. a

And Rabsakeh sayde vnto them: Tell Hezekias, that the greate kynge of Assiria sayth thus vnto him: What presumption is thys, that thou trustest vnto? I sayde, Surely thou trustest in thy lyplabour, when councell & strength are necessary to battayl:

oꝛ elles wher to truſteſt ỹ, that ỹ caſteſt thy ſelfe of frome: *lo, thou putteſt thy truſt in a broke̅ ſtaf of rede (I meane Egipt) which be ỹ leaneth vpõ, it goeth into his hãde & ſhutteth hym thoꝛowe. Euen ſo is Pharao the kynge of Egipte, vnto all them that truſt in hym. But yf ỹ woldeſt ſaye to me: we truſte in ỹ Lozd our God. A goodly God in deed: whoſe hye places and aultars Hezekia toke downe, and cõmaunded Juda and Jeruſalẽ to woꝛſhyp onely beꝛoze the aultare. Nowe therfoꝛe delyuer hoſtages that thou rebelle nomoꝛe agaynſt my Lozde the kynge of Aſſirians. And I wyll geue the two thouſande hoꝛſes: yf thou be able to ſet men vpon them: How dareſt thou reſiſt the power of ỹ ſmalleſt pꝛynce, ỹ my Lozd hath: how dareſt thou truſt in the charettes and hoꝛſe men of Egipt: Moꝛeouer, thinckeſt thou ỹ I am come downe hyther to deſtroye this lãd wout ỹ Lozdes will? The Lozd ſayde vnto me: go downe into ỹ lãde, that ỹ mayeſt deſtroie it. Then ſayd Eliakim, Sobna and Joah vnto Rabſaketh: Speake to vs thy ſeruaũtes (we pꝛaye the) in the Syryãs language: foꝛ we vnderſtãde it wel. And ſpeake not to vs in the Jewes tong, leſt ỹ folcke heare which lyeth vpõ the wall. Then anſwered Rabſakeh: Thincke ye, ỹ the kyng ſent me to ſpeake this only vnto ỹ Lozd and ỹ? hath he not ſent me to them alſo, that lye vpõ the wall? that they maye be cõpelled to eate their awne donge, & dꝛynck their awne ſtale wyne?

C And Rabſakeh ſtode ſtil, and cryed with a loude voyce in the Jewes tong, and ſaide: Nowe take hede, howe the great king of the Aſſyriãs geueth you warning. Thus ſayth the king: Let not Hezekias diſceaue you: foꝛ he ſhall not be able to delyuer you. Moꝛeouer let not Hezekias confoꝛte you in the Lozde, when he ſayth: The Lozd wout doubt ſhall defende vs, and ſhal not geue ouer this citye into the handes of the kyng of the Aſſyriãs, beleue hym not. But thus ſayth the kyng of Aſſyria: opteyne my fauoure, enclyne to me: ſo maye euery man eniope hys vyneyardes and fygg trees, and dꝛynke the water of his cyſterne: vnto the tyme that I come my ſelf, and bꝛinge you into a lãde that is lyke your awne: wherin is wheate and wyne, which is both ſowen with ſeede, and planted with vyneyardes. Let not Hezekia diſceaue you, when he ſayth vnto you: the Lozde ſhall delyuer vs: *Right the Goddes of the Gentils kepe euery mans lande, from the power of the kynge of the Aſſirians: Where is the God of Hemath and Arphad? Oꝛ which of all the Goddes of theſe lãdes hath delyuered theyꝛ countrey out of my power? is the Lozde in dede able to delyuer Jeruſalem fro my hande? Unto this Hezekias meſſaungers helde theyꝛ tonges, and anſwered not one wozde: foꝛ the king had charged thẽ, that they ſhulde geue hym none anſwere.

So came Eliakim Helkias ſonne the pꝛeſident, Sobna the ſcribe, and Joah Aſaphs ſõne the ſecretary, vnto Hezekias with rent clothes, and tolde hym the wozdes of Rabſaketh.

And truly all the worke masters of them ar men, they shall all be gathered to gyther, they shall stande, trēble, and be confoūded one with a nother. The smith maketh an axe, and tempereth it with hoate coales, and fashyoneth it with hāmers, and worketh wt it with all the strength of hys armes: yee, sometyme he is faynt for very hunger, and so thurstye, that he hath no more power. ¶ Moreouer, he goeth oute to hewe downe Cedre trees. He bryngeth home Elmes and Okes: and takynge a bolde corage, he seketh out the best tymbre of the wodde. He him selfe hath planted a pyne tree, which the rayne hath swelled, which wood serueth for men to burne. Of this he taketh and warmeth hym selfe withall: he maketh a fyre of it to bake breade. And afterwarde maketh a God there of, to honoure it: & an Idole to knele before it. One pece he burneth in ỹ fyre, with another he rosteth flesh, that he maye eate roste his bely full: with the thyrde he warmeth him selfe, and sayeth: Aha, I am well warmed, I haue sene at the fyre. And of the residue he maketh hi a God, & an Idole for him selfe. He kneleth before it, he worshippeth it, he prayeth vnto it, & sayeth: delyuer me, for thou art my God.

* Yet men nether cōsydre ner vnderstande, because theyr eyes are stopped, that they cannot se: and their hertes, that they cannot perceaue. They poudre not in theyr myndes, for they haue nether knowledge ner vnderstandynge, to thincke thus. I haue brent one pece in the fyre. For he dyd growe before the Lorde lyke as a braūnche, & as a rote in a drye groūde, * he hath * Esa.lii.a. nether beutye nor fauoure. When we shall loke vpon hym, there shalbe no fayrnesse: we shall haue no lust vnto him. * He is despised * Deu.x.a. & abhorred of men, he is soch a mans as is full of sorowe & as hath good experience of infirmyties. We haue reknoned hym so vyle, that we hyd oure faces from hym, ye he was despysed & therfore we regarded him not. Howbeit *he only hath taken on hym oure infyrmitie, & borne our paynes. Yet we dyd iudge hym, as though he were plaged & cast downe of God: and punished * where as he (not wythstandynge) was wounded for oure offences, and smytten for oure wyckednes. For ý chastysement of oure peace was layde vpon him, and wyth hys strypes are we healed.

* All we, we haue gone all astraye (like shepe) euery one hath turned his awne way. But the Lorde hath heaped together vpon him the iniquitie of vs all. He suffred violence and was euell intreated, & dyd not yet open his mouth. * He shalbe led as a shepe to be slayne, yet shall he be as styll as a lābe before the shearer, and not open hys mouth. He was had awaye from preson hys cause not herde, and wythout eny iudgement: Whose generacyon yet who maye nombre? he was cut of from the grounde of the lyuynge: Wherby punyshment dyd go vpon hym, for the transgressyon of my people, whych in deade had deserued that punyshment, * hys graue was geuē hym wyth the condemned, and wyth the ryche man at hys deeth. * Where as he dyd neuer violence ner vnryght, nether hath there bene eny disceatfulnelle in hys mouth.

Yet hath it pleased the Lorde thus to bruise hym wyth plages, and to smyte hym wyth infyrmite, that when he had made his soule an offeryng for synne, he myght se longe lastynge sede. And thys deuyce of the Lorde shall prospere in hys hande. With trauayle & labour of hys soule, shall he optayne frute, and he shall be satisfyed * by the knowledge of hym whych is my ryghteous seruaunt he shall iustifye the multitude, for he shall beare awaye theyr synnes. Therfore wyll I geue hym the multitude for hys parte, and he shall deuyde the spoyle wyth the stronge: because he geueth ouer hys soule to death, * and is reckened amonge the transgressours, whych neuertheles hath take awaye the synnes of the multitude, and made intercessyon for the mysdoers.

¶The.liiij.Chapter.

¶Of the greate dominion of Chryst. The indignacyon of God endureth but a short space, but hys mercy is euerlastynge.

Be glad now, * thou barē that bearest not, reioyce, synge and be mery thou that art not wyth chylde: For ý desolate hath moo chyldrē, then the maryed wyfe, sayeth ý Lorde. Make thy tētes wyder, and spreade out the hāgynges of thyne habitaciō: spare not, laye forth thy coardes, and make fast thy stakes: for ý shalt be multiplied on the ryght syde & on the left, and thy sede shall haue the Gentyles in possessyon and dwell in the desolate cyties. Feare not, for thou shalt not be confounded: Be not ashamed, for thou shalt not come to confusyon. Yee & thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth, & shalt not remembre the dishonoure of thy wedowhead. For he ý made the, shalbe thy Lorde & husbande (whose name is * the Lorde of hoostes) and thy redemer shalbe euen the holy one of Israel, the Lorde of the whole worlde. For the Lord hath called the, beynge as a desolate sorowfull woman, & as a younge wyfe that hath broken her wedlocke: sayeth thy God.

* A lytle whyle haue I forsake the, but wt greate mercyfulnes shall I take the vp vnto me. Whē I was angry, I hydde my face frō ý for a lytle season, but thorow euerlastinge mercye haue I pardoned the, sayth the Lord thyne auenger. * And this is vnto me as the water of Noe: for lyke as I haue swore ý I wyll not bringe the water of Noe eny more vpon the worlde: * so haue I swore that I wyll neuer be angry with the, ner reproue ý: The mountaynes shall remoue, and the hylles shall fall downe: but my louynge kyndnesse shall not moue, and the bonde of my peace shall not fall downe from the, sayeth the Lorde thy mercyfull louer. Beholde ý poore, ouerwhelmed with tēpest & * wythout cōforte. I will make thy walles of precyous stones, & thy foundacyō of Saphyres, thy wyndowes of Chrystal, thy gates of fyne cleare stone, & all thy borders of pleasaunt stones. * Thy childzen shall all be taught of God, & I wyll geue thē plēteousnes of peace. In ryghteousnes shalt thou be grounded, & be farre from oppressyō: for the whych thou nedest not be afraped, nether for hynderaūce, for it shall not come nye the. Beholde, the aleaunt that was farre from me, shall dwell with ý: & he that ioyneth batayle agenst the shall perishe. Beholde, I make the smith that blowyth the coales in the fyre, & he maketh a weapen after hys hādy worcke. I make also the waster to destroye: but all the weapens that are made agaynst the, shall not prospere. * And as for all tūges, ý shall resyste ý in iudgement, thou shalt ouercome them, & cōdēne them. Thys is the heritage of the Lordes seruaūtes, and their ryghteousnes commeth of me, sayeth the Lorde.

¶A consolacyon and comforte to the people. The fruite and profet of the worde of God.

* Come to the waters all ye, ý be thursty, and ye that haue no money. Come, bye, ý ye maye haue to eate. Come, bye wyne and mylck, wythout any money, or money worth. Wherfore do ye laye out out youre money, for the thynge that fedeth not, & spende youre labour aboute ý thynge that satisfyeth you not. But herken herken rather vnto me, & ye shall eate of ý best, and youre soule shall haue her pleasure in plenteousnes. Enclyne your eares, and come vnto me, take hede (I saye) & your soule shall lyue. * For I will make an euerlastynge couenaunt wyth you, euē ý sure mercyes of Dauid.

Beholde, I gaue him for a wytnesse amōg the folke, for a Prynce and captayne vnto the people. Lo, thou shalt call an vnknowne people: & a people that had not knowledge of the, shall runne vnto the: because of the Lord thy God, and the holy one of Israel, whych glorifyeth ý. Seke the Lorde, whyle he may be founde, and call vpon hym whyle he is nye. * Let ý vngodly man forsake his owne wayes, & the vnryghtuous hys owne ymagynacyons, and turne agayne vnto the Lorde: so shall he be mercyfull vnto hym: and to oure God, * for he is very ready to forgeue. For thus sayeth the Lorde: my thoughtes are not youre thoughtes, and youre wayes are not my wayes, but as farre as the heauens are hyer then the earth, so farre do my wayes exceade yours, and my thoughtes yours. * And lyke as the rayne & snowe cōmeth downe from heauē, and returneth not thyther agayne, but watereth ý earth, maketh it frutefull and grene, that it maye geue corne vnto the sower, and breade to hym that eateth. So the worde also that cōmeth out of my mouth shall not turne againe voyde vnto me, but shall accōplyche my wyll ād prospere in ý thynge wherto I sende it. And so shall ye goo forth wt ioye, & be led wt peace. The mountaynes & hylles shall synge wyth you for ioye, & all the trees of the felde shall clappe theyr hādes. For thornes, there shall growe fyrre trees, & the Myrre tre in the stede of brcers. And thys shall be done to ý prayse of the Lorde, and for an euerlastynge token, that shall not be taken awaye.

¶The.lvj.Chapter.

¶An exhortacyon to iudgement and ryghteousnes, & to the spyrytuall keppynge of the Sabboth. Against Shepherdes that deuoure theyr flock.

Thus sayeth the Lorde. * Kepe equite, and do ryght, for my sauyng healthe shall come shortly, & my ryghteousnes shalbe opened. Blessed is ý mā that doth thys, and the mans chylde whych kepeth the same. * He that taketh hede, that he vnhalowe not the Sabboth (that is) he that kepeth hym selfe that he do no euel. Then shall not the straūger, which cleaueth to ý Lorde, saye: * Alas, the Lorde hath shut me cleane out frō hys people. Nether shall the * gelded mā saye: lo, I am a dry tre. For thus sayeth the Lorde, vnto the gelded that kepeth my Sabboth: Namely, that holdeth greatly of the thynge that pleaseth me, and kepeth my couenaunt: Vnto them wyll I geue in my houlholde and wythin my walles, a better heritage & name, then yf they had bene called sonnes & daughters. * I will gene thē an euerlastinge name, ý shall not perish. Agayne the straūgers that stycke to the Lorde, to serue hym, and to loue hys name: * and to be hys seruauntes. And all they, whych kepe thē selues, that they vnhalowe not the Sabboth, namely, that they fulfyll my couenaunt: Them wyll I bringe to my holy moūtayne, and make them ioyfull in my house of prayer. Their burnt offrynges and sacrifyces shalbe accepted vpon myne aulter. * For my house shalbe called an house of prayer for all people.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God whych gathereth together the scatred of Israel: I will bringe yet another congregacyon to hym. Come all ye beastes of the felde, that ye may deuoure, all ý beastes of ý wodd. * For hys watchmē are all blynde, they haue all together no vnderstandynge, they are all domme dogges, not beynge able to barcke, they are slepy: slogych are they, and lye snoztynge: they are shamelesse dogges, that be neuer satisfyed. The shepherdes also in lyke maner haue no vnderstandynge, * but euery man turneth his awne waye, euery one after his awne couetousnes wityall hys power. * Come (saye they) I wyll fetch wyne, so shall we fyll oure selues, that we maye be dronken. And do to morowe, lyke as to daye, yee and moche more.

Shulde that be called kastynge, or a daye that pleaseth the Lorde? # ¶ The boke of the prophete Jeremye.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

¶ The stocke of Jeremye, and in what tyme he prophecyed. He excuseth hym selfe & wolde refuse the office of a prophete, because he is younge and vnexpert. He is taught of the Lorde, & beyngneth boldly. God openeth vnto hym, that the destruccyon of the Jewes, by the Babylonyans, is at hande. Jeremye is commaunded to speake the worde of God vnto the Jewes, without feare.

A THese are the Sermõs of Jeremy the sonne of Helkiah the Preste, one of them that dwelt at *Anathoth in the lande of Ben Jamin: when the Lorde had fyrst spoken with him, in the tyme of Josiah the sonne of Amon kynge of Juda, in the.xiij. yeare of his regne: and so durynge vnto the tyme of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, *and vntyll the.xi. yeare of Zedekiah ỹ sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda were ended: when Jerusalem was taken, euen in the fyfth Moneth. The worde of ỹ Lorde spake thus vnto me: * Before I fashioned ỹ in thy mothers wombe, I dyd knowe the. And or euer thou wast borne, I sanctifyed ỹ, and ordeyned ỹ, to be a prophete vnto ỹ people. Then sayde I: * Oh Lorde God, I canne not speake, for I am yet but younge. And the Lorde answered me thus: Saye not so, I am to younge: * for thou shalt goo to all that I shall sende the vnto, * and whatsoeuer I commaunde the, that shalt thou speake. Be not afrayed of their faces, for I am with the, to delyuer the, sayeth the Lorde.

* And with that, the Lorde stretched oute his hande, and touched my mouth, & ỹ same Lorde sayde vnto me. Behold, I put my wordes in thy mouth, and beholde thys daye do I set the ouer the people & kyngdomes: that thou mayest rote out, breake of, destroye, & make waste: and ỹ thou mayest buylde vp & plante. After this, the Lorde spake vnto me sayinge: Jeremy, what seyst ỹ? And I sayde: I se a rodde of an almond tree. Then sayde ỹ Lorde vnto me: thou hast sene right, for I wyll make haste spedelye vpon my worde, to perfourme it.

It happened afterwarde, that the Lorde spake to me agayne, and sayde: What seest thou? And I sayde: I do se a seething pot, lokynge from out of the north.

Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: * Out of the north shall come a plage vpõ all ỹ dwellers of the lande. It for lo * I wyll call all the kinredes of ỹ kyngdomes of ỹ north (sayeth the Lorde.) And they shall come, & euery one shall sett his seate in the gates of Jerusalem, and in all their walles rounde aboute & in all cyties of Juda. And thorowe thẽ shall I declare my iudgemẽt, vpõ all the wyckednesse of those men ỹ haue forsaken me: that haue burnt incense vnto straunge goddes, & worshypped the workes of their awne handes.

* And therfore gyrde vp thy loynes, aryse, and tell thẽ all, that I geue the in cõmaundement. Feare them not, lest I destroye the before thẽ. * For beholde, this daye do I make the a stroge kensed towne, an yron pyler, and a brasen wall agaynst the whole lande, agaynst the kynges and myghtye men of Juda, agaynst the prestes and people of the lande. They shall fyght agaynst the: but they shall not be able to ouercõme the for I am with the, to delyuer the, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ The ij. Chapter.

¶ God rehearseth his benefytes done vnto the Jewes. Agaynst Prestes & Prophetes or preachers ỹ contemne & defyle God. The Jewes are withdrawen because they forsoke God, & because they ranne a whore huntynge after Idols.

MOreouer, the worde of ỹ Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Go thy waye, crye in the eares of Jerusalẽ, & saye: Thus sayeth the Lord: I remẽbre ỹ, for the kyndenesse of thy youth, and because of thy stedfast loue: at the tyme of thy despousynge, in that thou folowdest me thorowe ỹ wyldernesse, in an vntylled lãde. Israel was an halowed thynge vnto the Lorde, and so was his fyrst frutes. * All they ỹ deuoure Israel shall offende: myscheftune shall fall vpon thẽ, sayeth the Lorde. Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde, O thou house of Jacob, and all the generacyõs of the house of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde.

What vnfaythfulnesse founde youre fathers in me, that they wente so farre a waye from me, fallynge to lightnesse, and beynge so vayne? They thought not in their hertes. Where haue we lest the Lorde, that brought vs oute of the lande of Egypte * that led vs thorowe the wildernesse, thorowe a deserte & rough lande, thorowe a drye and a deedly lande, yee, a lãde that no man had gone thorowe, and wherin no man had dwelt. * And when I had brought you into a pleasaunt welbuylded lande, that ye myght enioye the frutes and all the commodyties of the same: ye wẽt forth and defyled my lãde, & brought myne herytage to abhominacyon.

The Prestes thẽ selues sayde not: Where is the Lorde? They that had ỹ lawe in theyr handes, knewe me not: & The shepherdes offended agaynst me. The prophetes dyd seruice vnto Baal, & folowed soch thynges as shall brynge them no profyt.

Wherfore, I am constrayned (sayeth the Lord) to make my cõplaynte vpõ you, & vpõ youre children children: Go in to ỹ Iles of Cethim, and loke well: sende vnto Cedar, take diligent hede: and se, whether soch thynges be done there, whether the Gẽtils thẽ selues deale so fally and vntruly wt their goddes, (which yet are no goddes in dede) But my people hath geuẽ ouer their hye honoure, for a thynge that maye not helpe them.

Be astonyshed (O ye heauens) be afrayde, & abashed at soch a thinge, sayeth the Lorde. For my people hath done two euels. They haue forsaken me the well of the * water of lyfe, and dygged them pyttes, yee vyle and broken pyttes, that can holde no water. Is Israel a bonde seruaunt, or one of the housholde? Why then is he so spoyled? Why do they roare and crye then vpõ him, as a lyon? They haue made his lande waste, * hys cyties are so brent vp, ỹ there is no man dwellynge in them. Yee, the chyldrẽ of Noph and Taphnes haue defyled thy neck.

* Cõmeth not this vnto the, because thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God, euer sence he led the by the waye? And what hast thou now to do in the strete of Egypte? to drincke the water of Nilus? Ether, what makest ỹ in the waye of Assyria? To drynche water of the floude? * Thyne awne wickednesse shall reproue the, & thy turnynge a waye shall cõdemne the: ỹ thou mayest knowe & vnderstãde: howe euell and hurtfull a thynge it is, ỹ thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God, & not feared him, sayeth the Lorde God of hoostes.

* I haue euer broke thy yocke of olde, & burste thy bondes: yet sayest ỹ, * I wyll nomore offend, but (lyke an harlot) ỹ runnest about vpon all hye hilles, & amõge all grene trees, where as I planted the as a noble vyne, & a good rote whose seed is all faithfull. * How art ỹ turned then in to a bytter, vnfrutefull, & straũge grape? Yee, & that so sore: ỹ though thou washe the wt Nitrus & make thy selfe to sauoure with that swete smellinge herbe of Borith: yet in my syght ỹ art stayned wyth thy wickednesse, sayeth the Lorde thy God.

Saye not nowe: I am not vnclene, and I haue not folowed Baal. * Loke vpon thyne awne wayes in ỹ woddes, valleys and dennes: so shalt thou knowe, what ỹ hast done. Thou art lyke a swyft Dromedary, ỹ goeth easely his waye: and thy wãtonnes is lyke a wylde Asse, that vseth the wyldernesse, and that snoffeth and bloweth at his wyll. Who can tame the? All they that seke the shall not fayle, but fynde the in thyne awne vnclẽnes. Kepe thou thy fote from nakednes, and thy throte frõ thyrste, and without shame thou answerest, No, for I haue loued straũgers and them will I folowe.

Lyke as a theefe that is taken with ỹ dede commeth to shame, euen so is the house of Israel come to cõfusion: the comen people, their kynges and rulers, their prestes & prophetes. * For they saye to a stocke, thou art my father, and to a stone: ỹ hast begotten me * yee, they haue turned their backe vpon me, & not their face. * But in the tyme of their trouble, when they saye, Stande vp, and helpe vs, I shall answere thẽ: Where are nowe thy goddes, ỹ thou hast made the? let thẽ stãde vp, & helpe the in the tyme of neede? yf they be able. * For loke howe many cyties thou hast (O Juda) so many goddes hast thou also.

Wherfore then will ye goo to lawe with me, seynge yee all are synners agaynst me, sayeth the Lorde? It is but lost labour, that I smyte youre chyldren, for they receaue not my correccyõ. * Youre awne sworde destroyeth youre prophetes, lyke a deuouringe lyon. O ye people, loke vpõ the worde of ỹ Lorde. Am I then become a wyldernesse vnto the people of Israel? or a lande ỹ hath no lyght? Wherfore sayeth my people thẽ: we are Lordes, we will come no more vnto the? Doth a mayden forget her rayment, or a bryde her stomacher? But as for my people they haue forget me, dayes innumerable. Why boastest thou thy wayes so fylie (to optayne fauoure there thorowe) when thou hast yet stayned thẽ with blasphempes? and teachest thyne awne wayes.

* Upon thy wynges is foũde the bloude of poore and innocent people, & ỹ not in corners & holes only, but openly in all these places. Yet darest ỹ saye: I am * (without synne &) gyltlesse. Truly, his wrath can not come vpõ me. Beholde, I condempne the in iudgemẽt, because thou darest saye: I haue not offended. And why runnest thou so often to and fro, to chaunge thy wayes? For thou shalt be confounded, as well of Egypte, as of the Assyrians: yee, thou shalt go thy waye from them, and smyte thyne handes together vpõ thy head. Because the Lorde doth abhorre ỹ confydence and hope of thyne, and thou shalt not prospere with all.

¶ The iij. Chapter.

God beynge mercyfull calleth vnto repentaunce his people, which he had forsaken for their whordome with Idoles. He exhorteth Israel vnto repentaunce, promysynge them shepherdes that shulde haue the true knowledge of God. Their returne of Israel vnto God, confessynge their offence.

COmonly, * when a man putteth awaye his wyfe, and she goeth frõ him & marieth with another, then the question is: shulde he resorte vnto her eny more after that? Is not this selde then defyled and vnclene? * But as for the, thou hast played the harlot with many louers, yet turne agayne to me, sayeth the Lorde. Lyft vp thyne eyes vnto ỹ hilaulters & loke, yf thou be not defyled with whordome. Thou hast wayted for thẽ in the stretes, and as a murtherer in the wyldernesse. Thorowe thy whordome & shamefull blasphempes, is the lande defyled.

* This is ỹ cause, ỹ the rayne & euenynge dewe hath ceased. Thou hast gotten the an whores forehead, and wilt not be ashamed.

Els woldest thou saye vnto me: O my father, thou art he that hast brought me vp, & led me fro my youth: Wylt thou then put me awaye, & cast me of for euer? Or wilt thou withdraw the thy selfe cleane fro me? Neuertheles, thou speakest soch wordes, but thou art euer doinge worse and worse.

C *The Lorde sayde also vnto me: in the tyme of Iosiah the kynge: hast þ sene what that rebellyon Israel hath done? howe she hath runne vp vpō all the hylles, and amōge all thick trees, and there played the harlot. hast þ sene also (when she had done all thys) howe I sayde vnto her: that she shulde turne agayne vnto me, & yet she is not returned? * Iuda that vnfaythfull syster of hers also sawe thys: Namely, þ after I had well sene the aduoutrye of the chrystenkyng harlot Israel, * I put her awaye, and gaue her a bill of deuorcement.

For all this, her vnfaythfull syster Iuda was not ashamed, but went backe & played the whore also: Yee, and þ noyse of her whordome hath defyled the whole lande. For she hath commytted fornycacyon wyth stones and stockes.

Neuertheles, her vnfaythfull syster Iuda is not * turned vnto me agayne wyth her whole herte, but faynedly, sayeth the Lorde. And þ Lorde sayde vnto me: * The backslyder Israell is more ryghtuous, then the vnfaythfull Iuda: & therfore go preache these wordes towarde the north, and saye: Thou disobedient Israell, turne agayne (sayeth þ Lorde) & I wyll not let my wrathe fall vpō you, for I am mercyfull (sayeth the Lorde) & I wyll not alwaye * beare displeasure agaynst þ: but this I will, that thou knowe thy greate blasphemy: Namely, þ thou hast vnfaythfully forsaken þ Lorde thy God, & hast made thy selfe partaker of straunge Goddes * vnder all grene trees, but hast had no wyll to heare my voyce, sayeth the Lorde.

E * O ye disobedient chyldren, turne agayne sayeth the Lorde: & I wyll be maryed wyth you. For I wyll take one out of the cytie, & two out of one generacyon, frō amōge you, and brynge you in to Syon: and wyll geue you herdmē after myne awne mynde, which shall fede you with learnynge ād wysdome. Moreouer, when ye be increased and multiplyed in the lande, then (sayeth the Lorde) there shall no more boast be made of þ arcke of the Lordes testamēt: No mā shall thinke vpon it, nether shall any man make mēcyon of it: for from thence forth it shall nether be vysyted, ner honoured with gyftes.

* Then shal' Ierusalē be called þ Lordes seate, & all Heathen shalbe gathered vnto it, for þ name of the Lordes sake, which shalbe set vp at Ierusalem. And from þ tyme forth, they shall folowe no more the ymaginacyon of their awne frowarde herte.

Then those þ be of þ house of Iuda, shall F go vnto þ house of Israell: & they shall come * Mich.ii.iii. together out of the North, into þ same lande þ I haue geuen your fathers. But lyke as a woman vnfaythfully fayleth her husbande, so are ye vnfaythfull vnto me (O ye house of Israel) sayeth the Lorde. * And therfore the voyce of the chyldren of * Iere.xxxi. Israel was herde on hye, wepinge and waylinge: for they haue defyled their waye, and forgotten God their Lorde.

IIsrael, yf þ wylt turne the, then A turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. And yf þ wylt put awaye thyne abhominacyons out of my syght, þ shalt not be moued: * And shalt * Iere.v.ii. sweare: The Lord lyueth: in trueth, in equyte and ryghteousnesse: and all people shall be fortunable & ioyfull in him. For thus sayeth þ Lorde, to all Iuda & Ierusalē: plowe your lande, and sowe not amonge the thornes.

* Be circūcysed in þ Lorde, and cut awaye * Iere.iv.b. the foreskynne of youre hertes, all yee of Iu- c.ix.a. Coll.ii.b. da, and all the indwellers of Ierusalē: * that * Iere.xxi. my indignacyō breake not out lyke fyre and kyndle, so þ no man maye quench it, because of the wyckednes of youre ymaginacyons.

* Preach in Iuda and Ierusalē, crye out B and speake: blowe the trōpettes in the lande, Esa.lviii.a. crye þ euery mā maye heare gather together, & saye: Gather you together, and we will go in to stroge cyties. Set vp þ token in Syō, flyede you, and make no tariege: * for I wyll * Iere.i.b. bringe a greate plage, and a greate destruccyon from the north. For the spoyler of the Gentyles is broken vp from his place, as a lyō out of his denne, that he maye make thy lande lande waste, and destroy the cyties, so that no man maye dwel therin. Wherfore, gyrd your selues aboute with sacke clothe, mourne, and wepe, for the fearful wrath of the Lord is not withdrawen from vs.

C At the same tyme (sayth the Lorde) the herte of the kynge and of the princes shall be gone, the preastes shalbe astonished, and the Prophetes shalbe sore afrayed. Then sayd I: O Lorde God, hast thou then disceyued this people and Ierusalem, saying: * ye shal haue peace, and nowe the swearde goeth thorowe theyr lynes: Then shall it be sayde to the people & Ierusalē: * a stronge wynde in the hye places of the wyldernesse cōmeth thorow the waye of my people, but neyther to fan, nor to cleanse.

D After that, shall there come vnto me a stronge wynde from those places, and then wyll I also geue sentence vpon them. For lo, he commeth downe lyke as a cloude, and his charrettes are lyke a stormye wynde: * his horsemen are swyfter then þ Egle. Woo vnto vs, for we are destroyed. O Ierusalem, & wash thyne hert frō wickednesse, that thou mayest be helped. How long shal thy noysom thoughtes remayne with the?

For a voyce from Dan and from the hyl of Ephraim speaketh out, and telleth of a destruction. Remēbre þ Heythen, and geue Ierusalē warnyng, and preache vnto her, that watchers ouer her are cōmyng from far cōtreyes. They haue cryed out agaynst þ cities of Iuda. And they haue belet her aboute in euery place lyke as the watchmen in the feld: * for they haue prouoked me to wrath, sayth the Lorde.

E * Thy wayes and thy thoughtes, haue brought the vnto this, suche is thyne owne wyckednesse and disobedyence: and because it is a bytter thing, it hath strikē the to þ hert. Ah my bely, ah my bely, (shalt thou cry) how is my hert so sore, my hert pāteth within me: I cannot be styll, for I haue herde the crying of the trompettes, and peales of warre.

They crye: murther vpon murther, the hole lande shal perish. Immediatlye, my tentes were destroyed, and my hangynges in the twynkelynge of an eye. How longe shall I se the tokens of warre, and heare the noyse of the trompettes?

F Neuertheless, this shall come vpon them, * Esay.v.b. Baruc.iii.b * because my people is become foolysshe, and hath not knowen me. * They are the chyldren Osee.xiii.b. of foolysshnesse, and without any discretion. To doo euyll, they haue wyt ynoughe: but to doo well, they haue no wysdome. I haue loked vpon the erth, and lo: it was waste and voyde. I loked towarde heauen, and it had no shyne.

I behelde the mountaynes, and lo, they trembled, and all the hylles were in a feare. I loked aboute me, and there was no bodye, and all the byrdes of the ayre were awaye. I marked wel, and the plowed felde was become waste: yea, all theyr cyties were broken downe at the presence of the Lorde, and indignacion of his wrath.

G For thus hath the Lorde sayd: The whole lande shalbe desolate, yet wil I not then haue done. And therfore, shall the earth mourne, & the heauen be sory aboue: for the thynge that I haue spokē to the Prophetes purposed and taken vpon me to do, shall not repent me, and I will not go frō it. The hole lande shall flye, for the noyse of the horsemen and bowemen: they shal runne into tentes, into woddes, and clyme vp the stonye rockes. All þ cyties shall be voyde, and noman dwellyng therin.

What wylt thou now do, thou beynge destroyed? * For though thou clothest thy selfe * Iere.xl.c. with scarlet, & deckest the wt golde: * though * iiii.reg.ix.f thou paintest thy face with colours now, yet shalt thou trym thy selfe in vayne.

For those that hytherto haue bene thy greate fauourers, shall abhorre the, and goo about to slaye the. For I heare a noyse, lyke as it were of a woman trauaylynge, or one labourynge of her fyrst chylde: Euē the voyce of the doughter Syō, that casteth out her armes, and swowneth, saying: Ah woo is me, how sore vered and faint is my hert, for feare of the murtherers?

C The.v. Chapter.

C In Iewry is there no ryghteous or faythfull man founde, eyther amongest the people or the rulers, for whos sake þ Lorde shulde spare the cytie. Wherfore Iewry is destroyed of the Assyrians.

LOoke thorowe Ierusalem, beholde and se: Seke thorowe her stretes also within, yf ye can fynde one mā that doeth equall and ryght, or seketh for the truthe, and I shall spare that cytie (sayeth the Lorde) * For though they can * Ie.xiii.a.c.c saye: the Lorde lyueth, yet they sweare to dissceyue. Where as thou (O Lord) lokest onely vpon fayth and truthe.

Thou hast scourged them, but they toke no repentaunce: thou hast corrected them for amendement, but they refused thy correction. They made theyr faces harder then a stone, and wolde not amende.

Therfore I thought in my selfe: peraduenture they are so symple and foolysshe, that they vnderstand nothing of the Lordes way, and iudgementes of our God. * Therfore, * Deu.xxvi.d wyll I go vnto theyr heedes & rulers, & talke with them: yf they knowe the waye of þ Lord and the iudgementes of oure God. But these (in lyke maner) haue broken the yocke, and burst the bondes in sondre.

* Wherfore, a Lyon out of the woodde * deut.xxii.d hath hurte them, and a wolfe in the euenynge shall destroye them. The Leoparde doth lye lurkynge by theyr cytyes, to teare in peces all them all them that come thereout. For theyr offences are multyplyed, and theyr departynge awaye is encreased. Shulde I then for al this haue mercy vpon the? Thy chyldren haue forsaken me, and *swozne by them that are no goddes. And albeit that I fed them to the ful yet they fall to aduoutrye, and haunt harlottes houses.

Shulde I not be auenged of euery people, that is lyke vnto this? Clyme vp vpon theyr walles, beate them downe, but destroye them not vtterly, take away theyr forcetrelles, bycause they are not the Lordes: For vnfaythfully hath the house of Israel and Juda forsaken me, sayth the Lorde. *They haue denyed the Lorde, and sayde: it is not he that loketh vpō vs: *Tush, there shal no misfortune come vpon vs: we shall see nether swerde ner hunger. * As for the warnynge of the Prophetes they take it but for wynde, yea, there is none of these whiche wyll tell them, that such thinges shall happen vnto them.

Theyr arowes are lodayne death: yea, they them selues be verye gyauntes. This people shal eate vp thy frute & thy meate, yea, they shall deuoure thy sōnes & thy doughters, thy shepe & thy bulockes.

They shall eate vp thy grapes, & fygges. *Neuertheless, your mysdedes haue turned these from you, and your synnes haue robbed you hereof. For amonge my people are founde wicked persones, that prouily lay snares & wayte for men, to take them & destroye them. And lyke as a net is full of byrdes, so are theyr houses ful of that whiche they haue gotten with falsched and disceyte. Herof commeth theyr great substaunce and richesse, herof are they fat and welthy, and are more mischeuous then any other. *They mynistre not the lawe, they make no ende of the fatherlesse cause, yea, and they prosper: yet they iudge not the poore accordynge to equyte.

The.vi.Chapter.

The synnes for which Jerusalem is afflicted. Vnexpert enmepled peces. Conetousnesse. Disceyte. The Lorde refuseth the sacrifyces of the Jewes. The commynge of the Babylonyans is prophecyed agayne.

Come out of Jerusalē, ye stronge chyldren of Benjamin: blowe vp the trōpettes ye *Tecuytes, set vp a token vnto Bethcaran, for a plage and a greate mysery appeareth out from the North.

*Ii.xx.xxiii.d

I wyll lyken the doughter Sion to a fayre and tender woman, and to her shall come the shepherdes with theyr flockes. Theyr tentes shall they pytche rounde about her, and euery one shall fede them that are vnder his hande. Make battayle agaynst her (shall they saye) Aryse, let vs go vp, whyle it is yet daye.

Alas, the daye goeth away, and the night shadowes fall downe: Aryse: let vs go vp by nyght, & destroye her stronge holdes, for thus hath the Lorde of hoostes commaunded.

Hewe downe her trees, and set vp bulwarkes agaynst Jerusalem, for the tyme is come that this cytie must be punysshed: for in her is all malicyousnesse. Lyke as a cōdyte spouteth oute waters, so she spouteth out her wickednesse. Robberye & vnrighteousnesse is herde in her sorowe and woundes are euer there in my syght. Amend the (O Jerusalem) lest I with drawe my hert frō the, & make the desolate: & thy lād also, that noman dwel in it. For thus saith the Lorde of hoostes: The residue of Israel shalbe gathered, as the remnaunt of grapes.

And therfore turne thyne hande agayne into the basket, lyke the grape gatherer. But vnto vnto whom shall I speake, whom shall I warne that he maye take hede? * Their eares are so vncircumcised, that they maye not heare.

*Jere.vi.b. *Jere.v.b. vi.b.

Beholde, * they take the worde of God but for a scorne, & haue no lust therto. And therfore, I am so full of thyne indignacyon, (O Lord) that I maye suffre no longer. But shede it out vpon that chyldren that are without, and vpon all yonge men. Yee, the man must be taken preseuer with the wyfe, & the aged with the crepel. Theyr houses with theyr landes & wyues shall be turned vnto straungers, when I stretch out myne hande vpon the inhabitatours of this land, sayeth the Lorde. * For from the leest vnto the most, they hange all vpon couetousnesse, & from the prophete vnto the preest, they go all aboute with falsched and lyes.

*Esa.lbi.c. Jere.biii.b.

*And beside that, they heale the hurt of my people with swete wordes, sayeng: peace, peace, whē there is no peace at all. Were they ashamed when they hadd committed abhompnacyon? Trulye nay they be past shame. *And therfore they shall fall amōge that slayne, & in the houre when I shall vyset them, they shall be brought downe, sayeth the Lorde.

*Esa.lbi.c. Jere.biii.b. Eze.xiii.b.

Thus sayeth the Lord: go into the streates, consyder & make inquisicyon for that olde waye: and yf it be that good and ryght waye, then go therin, that ye maye fynde rest for youre soules. But they saye: we wyll not walcke therin, and I wyll sett wacthymen E ouer you, & therfore take hede vnto that voyce of that trōpett. But they saye: we wyll not take hede. Heare therfore ye Gētyles, & thou cōgregacyon shalt knowe, what I haue deuysed for them. Heare that earth also: behold, *I will cause a plage to come vpō this people, euen that frute of their awne imaginatiōs.

*Esa.i.b. Jer.bii.a.

And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: behold, I wyll make this people fall, and there shall fall from among them the father vō the chyldren, one neyghboure shall perysshe wyth another.

Thus sayeth the Lord, * Beholde, there shal come a people from that North, & a great people shal aryse from that endes of the earth, with bowes and with dartes shall they be weapened. It is a rough & fearce people, & an vnmercyfull people, theyr voyce roareth lyke that see, they ryde vpon horses well apointed to that battaill agaynst thy, O daughter Sion. Wherfore, gyrde a sack cloth aboute the (O thou daughter of my people) sprynkle thy selfe wā alshes, * mourne & wepe bitterly as vpon thy only beloued sonne. For the destroyer shal sodenly fall vpō vs. The haue I set for a stroōge tower (o thou prophete) & a well kenled wall amonge my people, to seke out and to trye theyr wayes. * For they are all stubberne apostates and fallen awaye, walkinge disceitfully, they are cleane brasse & yron, for they hurt & destroye euery man. Jeremy is commaunded to shewe vnto the people the worde of God, whych trusteth in the outwarde seruice of the temple. The euelles that shall happen to the Jewes for the despysynge of theyr prophetes. Sacrifyces doth not the Lorde chefely require of the Jewes, but that they shuld obey hys word.

These are the wordes that God spake vnto Jeremye: sayēge. * Stāde vnder the gate of the Lordes house, and crye out these wordes there vō a loude voyce, and saye. Heare that worde of the Lord all ye of Juda, that go in at this doore, to worshyppe the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lord of Hostes the God of Israell. * Amēde youre wayes & your councels, and I wyll let you dwell in this place. Let vs gather oure selues together, and go into ꝑ stróge cytie, there shall we be in rest. Foz ꝑ Lozde oure God hath put vs to sylẽce, & geuen vs water mixte wt gall, to dzynke: because we haue synned agaynst hym.

The noyse of his hozsses is heard from Dan, ꝑ whole lãde is afrayed at ꝑ neyenge of his stronge hozsses: foz they are come in, & haue deuoured ꝑ lãde, wt all ꝑ is in it: ꝑ cyties, and those ꝑ dwell therin. * Moreouer, I wyll sende Cockatrices & serpẽtes amonge you (which wyll not be charmed) & they shall byte you, sayeth the Lozde.

Is not the Lozde in Syon? Is not ꝑ kyng in her? Wherfoze then haue they greued me (shall the Lozde saye) wt theyr ymages & foolysh straunge fashyons of a forayne god? The haruest is gone, the Sõmer hath an ende, & we are not helped. I am soze vexed, because of ꝑ hurte of my people. I am heuy & abashed, is ther no triacle at Gilead? Is ther no physycyon ther? Why then is not the helthe of my people recouered?

¶ The.ix. Chapter.

¶ The complaynte and bewaylyng of the pzophete, the malyce of the people. In the knowledge of God ought we onely to reioyce. The vncyrcumcysyon of the hert.

WHo * wyll geue my head water A pnough, and a wel of teares foz myne eyes: ꝑ I maye wepe night and daye: foz ꝑ slaughter of my people? Wolde God, that I had a cotage some where farre from folcke, ꝑ I myght leaue my people, and goo frõ thẽ: foz they be all aduoutrers & a thzyn chynge sozte. They bẽde theyr tunges lyke bowes, to shote out lyes. They wax stróge vpon erthe. As foz ꝑ trueth, they maye no thynge awaye with all in the wozlde. Foz they go from one wyckednes to another, and wyll not knowe me, sayeth the Lozde.

* Jere.xvii.a.

B * Yee, one must kepe hym selfe from another, no mã may safely trust his awne bzother: foz * one bzother vndermyndeth another, one neyghboure begileth another. Yee one dissembleth wt another, and they deale wt no trueth. * They haue pzactysed theyr tũges to lye, & taken great paynes to do mischefe. Thou syttest i ꝑ myddes of a dysceatfull people, which foz very dissemblyng falshede, wyll not knowe me, sayeth the Lozd.

‡ Mat.v.c. & Mich.vii.a. * Psal.xxviii a.

Therfoze, thus sayeth the Lozde of hoostes: beholde, I wyll melte them, and trye them, foz what shuld I els do to my people.

* Theyr tunges are lyke sharpe arowes, to speake dysceate. Wyth theyr mouth they speake peaceably to theyr neyghboure, but pzeuely they laye wayte foz hym. * Shulde I not punysh thẽ foz these thynges, sayeth ꝑ Lozde? Oz shulde I not be auẽged of any soche people as thys? Upon ꝑ mountaines will I take vp a lamentacion & a sozowful crie, & a mournige vpõ ꝑ fayze playnes of ꝑ wildernesse. Namely, how they are so brẽte vp, ꝑ no man goeth there any moze. Yee, a man shall not heare one beaste crye there.

*Hose.xiii.a. Psal.xviii.a. * Jere.b.b.

D Byrdes & catell are all gone from thẽce * I will make Jerusalẽ also an heape of stones, & a denne of venymous wormes. And I will make ꝑ cyties of Juda so waste, that no man shall dwell therin. What man is so wyse, as to vndestande thys? Oz to whom hath ꝑ Lozd spoken by mouth, that he may shewe this, & saye. O ꝑ lande, why perishest thou so? Wherfoze art ꝑ so brent vp, & lyke a wyldernes, ꝑ no man goeth thozow? Yee, the Lozde hym selfe tolde ꝑ same vnto thẽ, that forsoke hys lawe, & kepte not ꝑ thynge ꝑ he gaue them in cõmaundemẽt, nether lyued therafter: * but folowed the wickednes of theyr awne hertes, & serued straunge Goddes, as theyr fathers taught them.

*Psal.lxxiii. Micah.iii.c. * deu.xxix.b. Iosu.xxiiii.c.

Therfore, thus sayeth ỹ Lorde of hoostes, the God of Israel. Beholde, ☞ I wyll fede this people wt wormwod, & geue them gall to dryncke, * I wyll scatre thẽ also among the heathen, whom nether they ner theyr fathers haue knowne: * & I will sẽde a sweарde amõge them, to persecute them, vntill I bryng them to naught. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lord of hoostes. Beware of ỹ vengeaunce that hangeth ouer you: and cal for mourning wyues, & sende for wyse wemen: that they come shortly, and synge a mournynge songe of you: that ỹ teares may fall out of oure eyes, and ỹ our eye lyddes maye gushe out of water.

For there is a lamentable noyse hearde of Sion. O how are we so sore destroyed? O how are we so pyteously cõfounded? We must forsake our awne naturall countre, & we are shut out of oure awne lodgynges. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde (O ye wemen) & let youre eares regarde the wordes of his mouth: ỹ ye may lerne youre daughters to mourne, & that euery one may teach her neyghboures se, to make lamentacyon. Namely thus: Death is clymynge vp in at oure wyndowes, he is come into oure houses, to destroye the chylde before ỹ doore, and the ponge man in the strete.

But tell thou playnely, thus sayeth the Lorde. * The deed bodyes of men shall lye vpon the grounde, as ỹ donge vpon ỹ felde, & as the heye after ỹ mower, & ther shalbe no man to take them vp. Thus sayeth the Lorde. Let not the wyse man reioyse in his wysdome, ner ỹ strong man in his strength, nether the ryche man in his rychesse: * But who so will reioyse, let hym reioyse in this, that he vnderstandeth, & knoweth me: for I am ỹ Lorde, which do mercy, equyte and ryghteousnesse vpon ỹ earth. * Therfore, haue I pleasure in soch thynges, sayeth the Lorde. Beholde, the tyme cõmeth (sayeth the Lorde) ỹ I wyll vyset all them, whose fore skynne is vncircumcysed. The Egyptians, the Iewes, the Edomytes, the Ammonytes, the Moabites. * and the shauen Madianytes, that dwell in the wyldernes. For all the Gentiles are vncircumcysed in the flesh, but all the house of Israell are vncircumcysed in the herte.

¶The.x.Chapter.

¶ The constellacyõs of the starres are not to be feared. Of the weakenes of Idols, and of the power of God. Of euell curates.

Heare the worde of the Lorde that he speaketh vnto the, O ỹ house of Israel. Thus sayeth ỹ Lorde. * Ye shall not lerne after ỹ maner of ỹ heathen, & ye shall not be afrayed for ỹ tokẽs of heauen: for ỹ heathen are afrayed of soch: yee, al ỹ customes and lawes of the Gẽtyles are nothynge, but vanyte. * They hewe downe a tree in ỹ wod with ỹ handes of ỹ worckeman, and fashyon it wt the axe: they couer it ouer with golde or syluer, they fasten it with nayles & hãmers, that it mone not. It standeth as styf as ỹ palme tree, it cãnether speake ner go one fote, but must be borne. * Be not ye afrayed of soch, for they can donether good ner euell. But there is none lyke vnto ỹ, O Lorde, * & great is the name of thy power. Who wolde not feare the, O kyng of the Gentils for thyne is the domynion.

For amonge all ỹ wyse men of the Gentyles, and in all theyr kyngdomes, there is none ỹ maye be lykened vnto ỹ. They are all together vnlerned & vnwyse in this one thynge. All theyr commynge is but vanyte: namely, wod, syluer, which is brought out of Tharsis, & beaten to plates: and golde from * Ophir, a worcke ỹ is made with the hãde of ỹ craftesman & the casker, clothed wt yelow sylck & scarlet: euen so is the worcke of theyr wyse men all together. But ỹ Lorde is a true God, a lyuynge God, & an euerlastynge kynge. * If he be wroth, the earth shaketh: all the Gentyles maye not abyde his indygnacyon.

As for theyr goddes thus shall you saye to them: they are goddes, that made nether heauen ner earth therfore shall they perysh from the earth, and from all thynges vnder heauen. But (as for oure God) * he made ỹ earth wt his power, and with his wysdome doth he order ỹ whole cõpasse of ỹ worlde, with his discrecyon hath he spred out ỹ heauens. At his voyce ỹ waters gather togethe in ỹ ayre, * he draweth vp ỹ cloudes frõ the vttemost partes of ỹ earth: he turneth lyghtenyng to rayne, & bryngeth forth the wyndes out of their treasures. His wysdome maketh all men fooles. And cõfounded be all casters of ymages, for ỹ they cast, is but a vayne thynge, & hath no lyfe. * The vayne crafte smen wt their worckes, ỹ they in their vanyte haue made, shall perysh one wt another in ỹ tyme of visitacyõ. Neuertheles, Iacobs porcyon is no soch: but it is he, ỹ hath made all thynges, & Israel is ỹ rodd of his inherytaũce. The Lorde of hoostes is his name. Gather vp thy wares out of the land, ỹ that art in ỹ stroge place. For thus sayeth ỹ Lord. Behold, I wyll now throwe as wt a stone slynge ỹ inhabitours of this lãde: at this once, and I wyll bryng trouble vpon them, that they shall proue trewe the wordes ỹ I haue spoken by the prophetes.

Alas, how am I hurt? Alas how paynefull are my scourges vnto me? For I consydre this sorow by my self, and I must sufre it. My tabernacle is destroyed, and all my my cordes are broken. My chyldren are gone fro me, & can no where be founde. Now haue I none to spreade out my tent, or to set vp my hãgynges. For ☞ ỹ herdmen haue done folyshly, that they haue not sought ỹ Lord. Therfore, haue they dealt vnwysely with theyr catell, & all are scatred abrode. Beholde, ỹ noyse is harde at hand, & great sedicyon out of ỹ north: to make the cyties of Juda a wyldernes, & a dwellynge place for Dragons. * Now I knowe (O Lorde) ỹ it is not in mãs power to ordre hys awne wayes, or to rule his awne steppes & goynges. Therfore, chasten thou vs, o Lord, but with fauoure * & not in thy wrath, bryng vs not vtterly to naught. * Poure out thyne indygnacyon rather vpon the Gentiles, that knowe ỹ not, & vpon the people ỹ call not on thy name. * And that because they haue consumed, deuoured and destroyed Iacob, and haue made his habytacyon waist.

¶The.xi.Chapter.

¶ A cursse of them that obey not the worde of Goddes promesse. The people of Juda folowyng the steppes of theyr fathers, worshypped straunge Goddes. The Lorde sayeth that he wyll not heare the Iewes, and forbydeth also Jeremy to praye for them.

Hys is another Sermon, whych the Lorde cõmaũded Jeremy for to preach, saying: Heare the wordes ☞ of the couenaunt, & speake vnto ỹ men of Juda, & to all thẽ that dwell at Jerusalem. And saye thou vnto them. Thus sayeth ỹ Lord God of Israell: * Cursed be euery one ỹ is not obediẽt vnto ỹ wordes of this couenaunt: whych I cõmaũded vnto youre fathers, what tyme as I brought hym out of Egipt, from ỹ yron fornace, saying: * Be obedient vnto my voyce, & do accordynge to all ỹ I cõmaunde you: so shall ye be my people, & I wilbe youre God, and wyll kepe my promyse, * that I haue sworne vnto youre fathers. Namely, that I wolde geue them a lande which floweth wt mylck & hony: as ye se, it is come to passe vnto this day. Then answered I, and sayd: Amen. ☞ Let it be euen so Lorde, as thou sayest.

Then the Lorde sayde vnto me agayne: Preache this in the cyties of Juda & rounde aboute Jerusalem, & saye. Heare ỹ wordes of this couenaũt, that ye maye kepe them. For I haue diligẽtly exhorted your fathers, euer sence ỹ tyme that I brought them out of ỹ land of Egypt, vnto this daye. I gaue them warnyng by tymes, saying: herken vnto my voyce. * Neuertheles, they wolde not obeye me, nor encline theyr eares vnto me, but folowed the wicked ymaginacions of theyr awne hertes. And therfore, I haue accused thẽ as transgressours of all ỹ wordes of this couenaunt, that I gaue them to kepe which they (notwithstandinge) haue not kepte.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me. It is found out, that whole Israel and all these citezins of Jerusalem are gone backe. They haue turned them selues to the blasphemyes of theyr forefathers, which had no lust to heare my worde. Euen lykewyse haue these also folowed straunge goddes, and worshypped them. The house of Israell & Juda haue broken my couenaũt, which I made with theyr fathers.

Therfore, thus sayeth ỹ Lord. Behold, I wyll sende a plage vpon thẽ, which they shall not be able to escape: & thoughe they crye vnto me, I wyl not heare thẽ. * Then shall the townes of Juda & the citezins of Jerusalem go, & call vpon † theyr goddes vnto whom they made theyr oblacyõs: but they shall not be able to helpe them in tyme of theyr trouble. * For as many cyties as ỹ hast, O Juda, so many goddes hast ỹ had also. And loke how many stretes there be in ỹ, (O Jerusalem) so many shamefull aulters haue ye set vp, aulters I saye to offre vpon thẽ vnto Baal. * Therfore, praye not ỹ for this people, byd nether prayse ner prayer for thẽ, for though they crie vnto me in theyr trouble, yet will I not heare them.

What parte hath my beloued in my house, seinge he hathe wrought abominacion seruynge many goddes? * The holy fleash offringes in the tẽple are goone frõ the O Juda, and thou when thou hast done euell makest thy boast of ytt. * The Lorde called ỹ a grene olyue tre, a fayre one, a frutefull one, a goodly one: but with greate clamor hath the enemy sett fyre vppon it and the brãches of yt are destroyed. For the Lorde of hoostes that planted the, hath deuysed a plage for the (O thou house of Israell and Juda) for ỹ euell that ye haue done to prouoke hym to wrath, in that ye dyd seruyce vnto Baal.

This (O Lord) haue I lerned of the, and vnderstãdit, for thou hast shewed me theyr ymaginacyõs. * But I am (as a meke lam be an oxe) that is caryed awaye to be slayne, not knowynge, ỹ they had deuysed soch a councell agaynst me, sayeng: * We wyll destroye his meate with wodd, & dryue him out of ỹ land, of ỹ lyuyng: ỹ his name shall neuer be thought vpon. Therfore, * I will beseche the now (O Lord of hoostes) thou ryghteous iudge, thou that tryest ỹ reynes & the hertes: lett me se the auẽged of them, for vnto ỹ haue I cõmitted my cause. The Lorde therfore spake thus of the cytezins of Anathoth, that sought to slaye me, sayẽge: * Preache not vnto vs in the name of ỹ Lord, or els ỹ shalt dye of our hãdes. Thus (I saye) spake ỹ Lorde of hoostes. Behold,

I wyll vyset you. Youre younge men shall perysh with ỳ swearde, your sonnes & your daughters shall vtterly dye of honger, so ỳ none shall remayne. For vpon the eyteȝins of Anathoth will I bryng a plage, euen the yeare of theyr vysytacyon.

¶The.xii.Chapter.

¶The prophete marueyleth greatly at the prosperitye of the wycked, although he confesse God to be ryghteous. The Jewes are forsaken of the Lorde. He speaketh agaynst Curates and preachers that seduce the people. The Lorde threateneth destruccyon vnto the nacyons that bordered vpon Jewȝye, whych troubled and vexed it.

A O Lorde, thou art more ryghteous, then ỳ I shulde dispute w̄ the. Neuertheles, lett me talke with the in thynges reasonable. * How happeneth it, that the waye of the vngodly is so prosperous: & that it goeth so well with them, whych (wythout any shame) offende & lyue in wickednes: Thou plantest them, they take rote, they growe, & bryngе forth frute. They boast moch of ỳ, yet art ỳ farre from ther reynes. But ỳ Lorde (to whom I am well knowne) thou ỳ hast sene, & proued my herte, * take them awaye, lyke as a flock is caryed to the slaughter house, and apointe them for the daye of slaughter.

Myne heritage is vnto me, as a speckled byrde, a byrde of dyuerse coloures is vpon it. Come, & gather ye to geather al ỳ beastes of the felde. Come that ye maye eate it vp.

*Esa.xix.c.

They haue layed it waste: & now ỳ it is waste, it sigheth vnto me. Yee, the whole land lyeth waste, & no man regardeth it. And yf they (namely that trouble my people) wyll lerne ỳ wayes of them, to sweare by my name. The Lorde lyueth (lyke as they learned my people to sweare by Baal) then shal they be reckened amōg my people. * But yf they wyll not obeye, then wyll I rote out the same folke, & destroye them, sayth the Lorde.

¶The.xiii.Chapter.

¶The destruccyon of the Jewes is prefigured, and their sparynge abyde, why Israel was receaued to be the people of God, and why they were forsaken.

A Thus sayth ỳ Lorde vnto me: go thy waye, & get me a lynnen breche, & gyrde it aboute thy loynes, & let it not be wet. Then I got me a breche, accordynge to the cōmaundemēt of the Lorde, and put it aboute my loynes. After this ỳ seconde tyme, the Lorde spake vnto me agayne. Take ỳ breche ỳ thou hast prepared & put about the, & get ỳ vp, & go vnto Euphrates & hyde it in a hole of ỳ rock. So went I, & hydd it at Euphrates, as the Lorde cōmaūded me. And it happened longe after this, ỳ the Lorde spake vnto me. Vp, & get ỳ to Euphrates, and fet ỳ breche from thēce, which I cōmaunded ỳ to hyde there. Then went I to Euphrates, & dygged vp, & toke ỳ breche from the place where I had hyd it: & beholde, the breche was corrupt, so that it was profitable for nothynge.

B Then sayde the Lorde vnto me. Thus sayeth the Lorde. Euen so wyll I corrupte ỳ pryde of Juda, & the hye mynde of Jerusalem. This people is a wicked people, * they wyll not heare my worde, they folowe the wicked ymaginacyōs of their awne herte, & hange vpon straunge Goddes, them they serue & worshyppe: & therfore they shalbe as this breche, that serueth for nothynge. For as straytely as a breche lyeth vpon a mans loynes, so straytely dyd I bynde the whole house of Israel, and the whole house of Juda vnto me, sayeth ỳ Lorde: * ỳ they myght be my people: that they myght haue a glorious name: that they myght be in honour: but thei wold not obeye me. Then shalt ỳ saye vnto them. Thus sayeth ỳ Lord: Behold, I shall fyll all ỳ inhabitours of thys lande w̄ dronckennes, the kynges that syt vpon Dauids stole, ỳ prestes & prophetes, w̄ all that dwell at Jerusalem. And I wyll sett them one agaynst another, ye, the fathers agaynst the sonnes, sayeth the Lorde.

C I wyll not pardon them, I wyll not spare them, ner haue pytie vpon them: but destroye them. Be obedient, geue eare, take not disdayne at it, for it is ỳ Lord him selfe that speaketh. Honoure ỳ Lord your God here in, or he take hys lyght from you, & or euer youre fete stomble in darcknesse at the hyll: lest when ye loke for the lyght, he turne it into ỳ shadowe & darcknesse of death. But yf ye wyll not heare me, that geue you secrete warnyng, I wyll mourne from my whole hert for youre stubburnes. * Pyteously wyll I wepe, & ỳ teares shall gussche out of myne eyes. For ỳ Lordes flocke shall be caryed awaye captyue. Tell the kynge & the quene: Humble youre selues, sett you downe lowe: for your dignytye shall be throwne downe & the crowne of your glory shall fall from youre head. The cyties to warde ỳ south shalbe shut vp, & no mā shall open them. All Juda shallbe caryed awaye captyue, so that none shall remayne.

* Jer.xxi.c. Thren.i.a.

D Lyft vp your eyes, & beholde the, ỳ come from the North. Wher is ỳ flocke (o ỳ lāde) ỳ was gyuen ỳ. And wher are thy fatte ryche cheape. To whom wylt ỳ make thy mone, when ỳ ennemy shall come vpon the: for ỳ hast taught them thy selfe, & made thē maysters ouer ỳ. Shall not sorowe come vpō ỳ, as on a woman trauaylyng w̄ child? And yf ỳ woldest saye thē in thyne herte. Wherfore come these thynges vpō me? * Euē for ỳ multytude of thy blasphemyes, shal thy hynder partes & thyfete be discouered. ¶Of the dearth that shulde come in Jewȝye. The prayer of the people askyng mercy of the Lorde. The vnfaithfull people are not heard. Of prayer, fastyng, & of false prophetes that seduce the people.

A The worde of ỳ Lorde shewed vnto Jeremy, cōcernynge ỳ derth of ỳ frutes. Juda hath mourned, his gates are desolate: they are brought to heuynesse euen vnto ỳ groūde, & the crye of Jerusalē goeth vp. The lordes sent theyr seruaūtes to fetch water, & whē they came to ỳ welles, they dyd fynde no water, but caried their vessels home emptie. They be ashamed & cōfounded, & couer theyr heades. * For the grounde is dryed vp, because there cōmeth no rayne vpon it. The plowmen also be ashamed, & couer theyr heades. ## The.xvi. chapter.

The prophecyeth the mysery of the Jewes. He sheweth, that ꝓ worshyppyng of Idols: & the contempt of Gods lawe, is the cause of theyr mysery. He prophecyeth the captiuite of Babylon, & theyr delyuerāce from thence agayne, ꝓ callyng of ꝓ gentiles.

A Thus sayde the Lord vnto me. Thou lyueth, that brought the chyldren of Israell from the North, and from all landes where he had scatred them. For I wyl bryngе thē full blasphemies and synnes, because they haue defyled my lande: Namely with theyr haue cleaued vnto lyes, their Idols are but vayne & vnprofitable. How can a mā make those his goddes, whyche are not able to be goddes? And therfore I will once teach thē, sayeth the Lorde, I wyll shewe them my hande & my power, that they maye knowe, that my name is the Lorde.

The.xvii. Chapter.

The frowardnesse of the Jewes. Cursed be those that put their confydence in man, & those blessed ꝓ trust to God. Mannes herte is wycked. God is the searcher of ꝓ hert. The liuing waters are forsaken. The halowyng of the Sabboth is commaunded.

A Oure synne (O ye of the tribe of Ju da) is writtē in the table of your her-tes, and grauen so vpon the edges of your aulters with a penne of yrō and wyth an adamāt clawe: ꝓ as the fathers thynche vpon their chyldrē so thynche you also vpō your aulters, woddes, thicke trees, hye hylles, mountaynes & feldes. * Wherfore, I wil * Jere.xv.a and.xx.b make my mounte ꝓ standeth in the felde all your substaūce & treasure be spoyled, for the great synne ꝓ ye haue done vpon youre hye places thorowe out all the coostes of youre lāde. Ye shall be cast out also frō ꝓ heritage, that I gaue you. And I wil subdue you vnder the heuy bondage of your enemies, in a lande that ye knowe not. For ye haue ministred fyre to my indignacio, which shal burne euermore. Thus sayth the Lord. * Cur- B sed be the man that putteth his trust in mā, * Israel.xliv.c Jerem.xli.c Jere.xlvii.a and.xlviii.a Ezech.xxix.a and that taketh flesh for his arme: and he, whose herte departeth from the Lorde: He shall be lyke the heath, that groweth in the wyldernes. As for ꝓ good thyng that is for to come, he shall not se it: but dwel in a drye place of the wyldernes, in a salt and vnfrui-full lande. * O blessed is the man, that putteth his trust in the Lorde, and whose hope is the Lorde him selfe. † For he shalbe as a tre, that is planted by the water syde: why-che spredeth out the rote vnto moystnesse, whom the heate cannot harme, when it cometh, but his leafe shalbe grene. And though there growe but lytle frute because of drouth, yet is he not carefull, but he neuer leaueth of to bringe forth frute. Amonge all thynges, man hath the most disceatfull and stubberne herte.

¶ Who shall then knowe it? * Euen I the Lorde searche out the grounde of the herte, and trye the reynes, * & rewarde euery man accordynge to his wayes, and accordynge to the frute of his workes.

☞ * The partriche maketh a nest of eg-ges, whych she layde not. He cometh by ryches, but not rychteously. In the myddest of his lyfe must he leaue them behynde him, and at the last be founde a very foole. But thou (O Lorde) whose trone is most glorious, excellent and of most antyquite, which dwellest in the place of our holy rest: Thou art the comforte of Israell. All they that forsake the, shalbe confounded: al they that departe from the, ☞ shalbe wrytten in earth * for they haue forsaken the Lorde the very condyte of the waters of lyfe.

Heale me, O Lorde, and I shall be whole:
saue thou me, and I shalbe saued, for thou art my prayse. Beholde, these mē saye vnto me: Where is ꝑ worde of the Lorde? Lett it come now. Where as I neuertheles obediently folowed the as a shepherde, and haue not vncalled taken this office vpō me, this knowest thou well. My wordes also were right before the. Be not now terrible vnto me, O Lorde * for thou art he in whome I hope, when I am in perell. Let my persecuters be confounded, but not me: let them be afrayed, and not me. Thou shalt bryng vpō them the tyme of their plage, and shalt de-stroye them right sore.

Thus hath ꝑ Lorde sayde vnto me: * Go and stande vnder the gate, where thorowe
the people and the kynges of Juda go out and in, yee vnder all the gates of Jerusalē, and saye vnto them. Heare the worde of the Lorde, ye kynges of Juda, and all thou people of Juda, and all ye cytezyns of Jerusalem, that go thorowe thys gate. Thus the Lorde cōmaundeth. * Take hede for youre lyues, that ye carye no burthen vpō you in the Sabboth, to bringe it thorowe ꝑ gates of Jerusalem: ye shall beare no burthē also out of youre houses in ꝑ Sabboth. Ye shall do no laboure therin, but ☞ halowe the Sabboth, * as I commaunded youre fathers. Howbeit, they obeyed me not, neither herkened they vnto me: but were obstynate and stubburne, & nether obeyed me: nor re-ceaued my correccio. Neuertheles, yf ye will heare me (sayeth ꝑ Lord) and beare no burthen into the cytie thorowe this gate vpon the Sabboth: yf ye will halowe the Sab-both, so ꝑ ye do no worcke therin: then shal there go thorowe the gates of thys cytie, kynges and prynces, that shall syt vpō the throne of Dauid: They shall be caryed vpō charettes, & ryde vpon horses, both they ād their prynces. Yee, whole Juda & all the cy-tezyns of Jerusalem shall good here thorow, and this cytie shal euer be the more and more inhabited. There shall come men also frō the cyties of Juda, from about Jerusalem, and from the lande of Beniamin, from the playne feldes, from the mountaynes & from the wyldernes: which shall bringe burnt-of-ferynges, sacrifices, oblacions, and incense, and offre vp thāckesgeuyng in the house of the Lorde. But yf ye will not be obedient vnto me, to halowe ꝑ Sabboth, so that ye will beare your burthens thorow the gates of Jerusalē vpon the Sabboth. Then shall I set fyre vpon the gates of Jerusalem, and it shall burne vp the houses of Jerusalem, and no man shall be able to quenche it.

¶ The .xviii. Chapter.

¶ God sheweth, by the example of a potter, that it is in hys power to destroye the despysers of hys worde and to helpe them agayne when they amend. The con-spiracye of the Jewes agaynst Jeremy. His prayer agaynst hys aduersaryes.

This is another communicacion, that God had with Jeremy, saying: Arise, and goo downe into the Potters house, and there shall I tell the more of my mynde. Now when I cam to the Potters house, I founde hym makynge his worcke vpon a whele. The vessell that the Potter made of claye, brake amōge his handes: So he began a new, and made another vessel accordynge to his mynde. Then sayde the Lorde thus vnto me. * Maye not I do with you, as this Potter doth, O ye house of Israel, sayeth the Lorde? Beholde, ye house of Israel: ye are in my hande, cuē as the claye in the Potters hande.

* When I take in hande to rote out, to destroye, or to waste awaye eny people or kyngdome * yf that people (agaynst whom I haue thus deuysed) conuerte from theyr wyckednes: I repēte of the plage, that I deuysed to bringe vpon them. * Agayne, whē I take in hande, to buylde, or to plante a people or a kyngdom: yf the same people do euell before me, and heare not my voyce: I repente of the good, ꝑ I deuise to do for thē.

Speake now therfore vnto whole Juda: and to them that dwell at Jerusalē. Thus sayeth sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I am deuisyng a plage for you, and am takynge a thyng in hande agaynst you.

* Therfore let euery man turne from his euell waye, take vpon you ꝑ thynge that is good, and do right. But they sayde. No more of this * we will folowe our awne ymaginacions, and do euery man accordynge to the wylfulnesse of his awne mynde.

¶ Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde. Aske amonge the heathen, yf eny man hath herde soch horyble thynges, as the daughter of Sion hath done. Shall not the snowe (that melteth vpon the stony rockes of Libanus) moysten the feldes? Or maye the sprynges of waters be so drauē awaye, that they rūne nomore, geue moystnesse, ner make frute full? But my people hath so forgotten me, that they haue made sacrifyce vnto vayne Goddes. And theyr prophetes make them fal in theyr wayes frō the auncyēt pathes, ād to go into a fote waye not vsed to betro-den of iust men. Where thorowe they haue brought their lāde into an euerlastyng wil-dernesse & scorne. * So ꝑ wholsoeuer trauay-leth therby, shalbe abashed, & wagge theyr heades. With an East wynde will I scatre thē, before their enemie. And when their de-struccion commeth, I will turne my backe vpon thē, but not my face. Then sayde they * come, let vs ymagen somthynge agaynst this Jeremye. For ☞ the prestes shall not be destitute of ꝑ lawe, nether shall the wyse-men be destitute of councel, ner ꝑ prophetes destitute of the worde of God. Come, and ☞ let vs smyte him with the tong, and let vs marke all his wordes. Consydre me, O Lord, and heare the voyce of myne enemies * shall they recompence euell for good? for they haue digged a pit for my soule. † Remē bre, howe that I stode before the, to speake good for them, & to turne awaye thy wrath from them.

* Therfore let their childzen dye of hun-ger, ād let them be oppressed wyth the swe-arde. Let their wiues be robbed of their chil dzen, and become wyddowes: let their hus-bandes be slayne, let their ponge mē be kyl-led with the swearde in the felde. Lett the noyse be herde out of their houses, when the murtherer commeth sodenly vpon them. † For they haue dygged a pyt to take me, & layed snares for my fete. Yet Lorde, ꝑ know-west all their councell, that they haue deui-sed, to slaye me. Forgeue not their wycked-nes, and let not their sinne be put out of thy syght: but let them be iudged before the as the gyltie: This shalt thou do vnto them in the tyme of thy indignacion.

¶ The .xix. chapter.

¶ The prophecyeth the destruccion of Jerusalem, for the contempt and despysynge of the worde of God.

Thus sayde the Lorde: Go thy waye and bye the an earthen pytcher, and bryng forth the Senatours ād che-fe prestes into the valley of the chyldzen of Hennom, which lieth before the doze that is made of brycke, and shewe them there the wordes, that I shall tell the, and saye thus vnto thē. Heare the worde of the Lorde, ye kynges of Juda, and ye cytezyns of Jerusa-lem. * Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: * Beholde I will bring so the a plage vpon this place, that the eares of all that heare it shal glowe. And that be-cause they haue forsaken me, and vnhalo-wed this place, & haue offred in it vnto stran-unge goddes: whome nether they, theyr fa-thers, ner ꝑ kynges of Juda haue knowne. They haue fylled thys place also with the bloude of innocentes * for they haue sett vp an aulter vnto Baal, to burne their childzē for a burntoffering vnto Baal, which Ie-ther commaunded, ner charged thē, nether thought once there vpon.

Beholde therfore † the tyme cōmeth (saye-eth the Lorde) that this place shall nomore be called Topheth, ner the valley of ꝑ chyl-dzen of Hennō, but the valley of slaughter: For in this place will I slaye ꝑ Senatours of Juda & Jerusalem, and kyll them downe with the swearde in the syght of theyr ene-mies, ād of them that seke their lyues. And their deed carcales will I geue to be meate for the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the felde. And I will make this citie so desolate and despysed: * that who so goeth ther by, shall be abashed and iesse vpon her, because of all her plages.

† I will fede thē also with the flesh of their sonnes ād their daughters. * Yee, euery one shall eate vp another in the besegynge and straytnesse, wherwith their enemyes (that seke their lyues) shal kepe them in. And the pitcher shalt thou breake in the sight of the men, that shalbe with the, & saye vnto the: Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hoostes: * Euen so will I destroye this people and cytie: as a man breaketh an earthen vessell, that cā not be made whole agayne.

† In Topheth shal they be buried, for they shall haue none other place. Thus will I do vnto this place also, sayeth the Lord, ād to them that dwel therin: yee, I wil do to this citie as vnto Topheth (for ꝑ houses of Je-rusalē and the houses of the kynges of Ju-da shalbe defyled, lyke as Topheth) becau-se of all the houses, in whose parlers they dyd sacrifyce vnto all the hoost of heauen and powred drinke offeringes vnto straun-ge goddes. And so Jeremy cam from To-pheth, where the Lorde had sent him to pro-phecie, and stode in the court of the house of the Lorde, ād spake to all the people: Thus

saieth the Lorde of hostes ꝑ God of Israel: Beholde, I wyl bryngе vpon this citie and vpon euery towne aboute it, all the plages

¶The.xx.Chapter.

¶ Jeremye is smytten and cast into prison, for preachyng of the worde of God. He prophecyeth the captyuitie of Babylon. He complaynyth ꝑ he is a mockynge stocke for the worde of God. He is compelled by the spyrite to preache the worde.

¶The.xxi.Chapter.

¶ He prophecyeth that zedekiah shall be taken, and the cytie burned.

A THese are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy * what tyme as *Jer.xxxviii.b kyng zedekiah sent vnto hi Phashur the sonne of Melchias, and Sophonias the sonne of Maalias prēste, sayinge. * Aske *xxxvii.c.xxxviii. ii.par.xxiii. Then spake Jeremy. Geue zedekias this answere. Thus sayeth ꝑ Lorde God of Israel: beholde, I wil turne backe the weapēs that ye haue in youre handes, wherwith ye fyght agaynst the kynge of Babylon & the Caldees, which besege you round aboute ꝑ walles, and I will bringe thē together into the myddest of this cytie, & I my selfe wyll fyght against you, with an outstretched hāde, & with a myghtie arme, in great displeasure and terrible wrath: & wyll smyte thē, that dwel in this citie: yee, both men ād catell shall dye of a great pestilence.

*And after this (sayeth the Lorde) I shal B deliuer zedekias the kinge of Juda, and his *Jer.xxxix.a seruauntes, his people (and soch as are escaped in the citie, from the pestilence, swearde and honger) into the power of Nabuchodonosor

C And vnto this people ꝑ shalt saye. Thus

But who so goeth out to holde on the Chaldees parte, that besege it, he shall saue hys lyfe & shall wynne his soule for a praye. * For I haue set my face agaynst this cytie (sayeth the Lorde) to plage it, and to do it no good. It must be geuen into the hande of the kyng of Babylon, and be brent with fyre.

¶The.xxii.Chapter.

¶ He exhorteth the kynge of Juda to iudgement and ryghteousnesse, why Jerusalem is brought into captyuyte. The death of Selum the sonne of Josua is prophecyed.

A THus sayde the Lorde, Go downe in to the house of the kynge of Juda, & speake there these wordes, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lorde, thou kyng of Juda that syttest in the kyngly seat of Dauid: thou and thy seruaūtes and thy people that go in and out at this gate. Thus the

Shall I not make ꝑ so walke (& thy cyties also) that no man shall dwell therin? I wil prepare a destroyer with his weapēs for ꝑ, to hewe downe thy speciall Cedre trees, ād to cast them in the fyre.

And all the people that go by this cytie, C shal speak one to another. *Wherfore hath *Deut.xxix.d xii.Reg.xx.b the Lorde done thus vnto this noble cytie? Then shall it be answered: ‡ because they ‡Deu.xxix.d xii.Reg.xx.b xiii.Reg.xi.b haue broken the couenaūt of ꝑ Lorde their God, and haue worshypped & serued straūge goddes. *Mourne not ouer the deed, ād be not wo for thē, but be sory for hym that departeth awaye: for he cōmeth not agayne, and seeth his natiue countre no more. Thynckest thou to raygne, now ꝑ thou prouokest me to wrath with the Cedre trees?

Dyd not thy father eate and drincke, and prospere well, as longe as he dealt wt equite and righteousnesse? Yee, when he helped the oppressed and poore to their right, thē prospered he well.

From whence came thys, but onely be-cause he had me before hys eyes, sayeth the Lorde? Neuertheles, as for thyne eyes and thyne herte, they loke vpon couetеousnesse, to shed innocent bloude, to do wronge & violence. *And therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde E *xxii.Reg. xxiii.c and.xxiv.b Jere.xxxvi.c agaynst Jehoakim, ꝑ sonne of Josias kyng of Juda. They shall not mourne for him (as they vse to do) alas brother, alas syster. Ne-ther shal they saye vnto him: Alas syr, alas for that noble prince. But as an Asse shal he be buryed, corrupte and be cast without the gates of Jerusalem.

Clyme vp the hyll of Libanus (O thou daughter Sion) lyft vp thy voyce vpō Basan, crye from all partes: for all thy louers are destroyed. I gaue the warnynge, whyle thou wast yet in prosperyte. But thou sayd-est: I wyll not heare. And this maner hast thou vsed frō thy youth, that thou woldest neuer heare my voyce. ‡ As truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde:) Though Conanias the soune of Iehoakim kynge of Juda were the sygnet of my right hande, yet will I plucke him of. And I will geue the into the power of them that seke to slaye the, and into the power of them that thou fearest: into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, and into the power of the Caldees. Moreouer, I wyll sende the, ād thy mother that bare the into a straunge lande, where ye were not borne, and there shall ye dye. But as for the lande that ye wyll desyre to returne vnto, ye shal neuer come at it agayne. This man Conanias shall be lyke an ymage robbed & torne in peces, which pleaseth no man, for all hys apparell. ‡ Jere. xxiii.

Myne herte breaketh in my body because of the false prophetes, al my bones shake: I am become lyke a droncken man (that by ꝓ reason of wyne can take no rest) for verye fe e of the Lorde, and of his holy wordes: Because the lande is full of aduouterers & thorowe swering it mourneth * & the pleasaunt pastures of the deserte are dryed vp. Yee, the waye that men take, is wicked, and theyr gouernaunce is nothinge lyke the holy worde of the Lorde. For prophetes and ꝓ prestes them selues are polluted ypocrites, and theyr wyckednes haue I founde in my house, saieth ꝓ Lorde. Wherfore, their way shall be slyppery in the darcknesse, where in they maye stacker & fall. For I wyll bryng a plage vpon them, euen the yeare of theyr visitaciō saieth the Lorde. I haue sene folly amonge the Prophetes of Samaria, that they preached for Baall, and disceaued my people of Israell.

I haue sene also amonge the Prophetes of Jerusalem foule aduoutry, ād presumpteous lyes. They take the most shamefull men by the hande, flattringe them, so ꝓ they cannot returne from theyr wyckednes. All these vnto their cytesyns are vntome, as Sodome, and as the inhabitours of Gomorre.

Therfore thus sayeth ꝓ Lorde of Hostes concernynge the prophetes: * Behold, I will fede them with wormwod, and make thē drincke the water of gall. For from the prophetes of Jerusalem is ypocrisye come into all the lande.

For who hath sytten in the councell of the Lorde, ꝓ he hath herde & vnderstande, what he is aboute to do: Who hath marcked hys deuyce, and herde it? * Behold, the storme wether of ꝓ Lorde (that is, his indignaciō) shall go forth, and a vyolent whirlwynde shall fal downe vpon ꝓ heade of ꝓ vngodly.

For what hath chaffe and wheate to do together? sayeth ꝓ Lorde. Is not my worde lyke a fyre, sayeth the Lorde, and lyke an hammer, ꝓ breaketh the harde stone. ## ¶The.xxv.Chapter.

¶Jeremye prophecyeth that they shall be in captyuytye.lxx. yeres, because they contemned and dyspysed the worde of God. He sheweth that after.lxx. yeares the Babylonias shulde be destroyed. The destruccyon of all nacions is prophecyed. He moueth the wrathes of the nacions to wayllynge.

A Sermon that was geuen vnto Jeremy, vpon all the people of Juda. In the fourth yeare of Jehoakim the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda that was in the fyrst yeare of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon. Which sermon, Jeremy the prophet made vnto all the people of Juda, and to all the inhabitours of Jerusalem, on this maner.

From the thyrtene yeare of Josias the sonne of Amon kynge of Juda, vnto thys present daye (that is euen. xxiii. yeare) the worde of the Lorde hath bene cõmitted vnto me. * And so I haue spoken to you, I haue rysen vpearly, I haue geuen you warnynge in season, but ye wolde not heare me. ‡ Though the Lorde hath sent hys seruauntes, all the prophetes vnto you in seasõ. Yet wolde ye not obeye, ye wolde not enclyne youre eares to heare.

He sayde * turne agayne euery man from his euell waye, and from your wicked ymaginacyõs, and so shall ye dwell for euer in ỹ lande, that the Lorde promised you & youre forefathers. And go not after straũge goddes, serue them not, worshyp them not, and angre me not wyth the worckes of your hãdes: then wyl not I punish you. Neuertheles ye wolde not heare me (sayth the Lord:) but haue defied me with ỹ worckes of your handes, to your awne greate harme.

B Wherfore thus sayeth ỹ Lorde of Hostes: * Because ye haue not herkened vnto my worde, lo, I wyll sende out, & call for all the people, that dwell in the North, sayeth the Lorde, and will prepayre Nabuchodonosor the kynge of ‡ Babylon my seruaunt, and will brynge thẽ vpon this lande, and vpon all that dwell therin, and vpon all the people that are aboute them, and wyll vtterly rote them oute. I will make of thẽ a wildernesse, a mockage, and a continuall deserte.

C * Moreouer, I wyll take from them the voyce of gladnesse and solace, the voyce of the bryde grome and the bryde, the voyce of the anoynted, with the creshettes: and thys whole lande shall become a wyldernes, and these nacions shall serue the kynge of Babylon, threscore yeares and ten. ‡ When the lxx. yeares are expired, I wyll vyset also ỹ wyckednesse of the kynge of Babylon and his people sayeth the Lorde: yee, and the lande of the Caldees, and wyll make it a perpetuall wylderne, and wyll fulfyll all my wordes vpon that lande, which I haue deuised agaynst it: yee, all that is writte in this boke, which Jeremy hathe prophecyed of all people: so that they also shall be subdued vnto diuers nacions & great kynges * for I wyll recompense them, accordynge to theyr dedes and worckes of theyr awne handes.

D For thus hath ỹ Lorde God of Israel spoken vnto me: Take this ‡ wyne cuppe of indignacion fro my hande, that thou mayest cause all the people, to whom I send the, for to dryncke of it: that when they haue dronken therof, they maye be mad, & out of their wyttes, when the swearde commeth, that I wyll sende amonge them. Then toke I the cuppe from the Lordes hande, and made all people to dryncke therof, vnto whome the Lorde had sent me.

But fyrst the cytie of Jerusalem, & all the cyties of Juda, their kynges ãd prynces, to make them desolate, wast, despysed, ãd hyssed at, and cursed, accordynge as it is come to passe this daye. Yee, and Pharao ỹ kinge of Egypte, his seruauntes, his princes and his people all together one wyth another & all kynges of the lande of Hus, all kynges of the Philistines lande, Ascalon, Azah, Accaron and ỹ remnaunt of Asdod, ỹ Edomites, the Moabites and the Ammonites al ỹ kynges of Tirus & Sidõ: the kinges of the Iles that are beyonde the see: Dedan, Thema, Buz & all thẽ ỹ dwell in the vttermost partes of ỹ worlde: all the kinges of Araby and (generally) all the kynges that dwel in the deserte: al the kinges of Zamri, al ỹ kynges of Elam, all the kinges of the Medees, all kynges towarde ỹ North, whether they be farre or nye, euery one agaynst his neygbours: Yee, and all the kyngdomes that are vpon ỹ whole earth. The kynge of Sezach sayde he shall dryncke with them also.

Therfore saye thou vnto them: Thys is the commaundemẽt of the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: Dryncke and be dronckẽ, spewe and fall, that ye neuer ryse, and that thorowe the swearde, whych I wyll sende amonge you. But yf they will not receaue the cuppe of thy hande, and dryncke it, then tell them: Thus doth the Lorde of Hostes threaten you: dryncke it ye shall, and that shortely. For lo, * I begynne to plage ỹ cytye, that my name is geuẽ vnto: thincke ye then that I wyll leaue you vnpunished: Ye shal not go quyte, for why, I call for a swearde vpon all the inhabitours of the earth, sayeth the Lorde of Hostes.

Therfore tell them all these wordes and saye vnto them. * The Lorde shall crye fro aboue, and let his voyce be herde from hys holy habytacion. With a great noyse shall he crye hecrye from hys courte regall. He shall geue a great voyce, lyke the grape gatherers, and the sounde therof shalbe hearde vnto the endes of the worlde. For the Lorde hath a iudgement to geue vpon all people, & will holde his court of iustice with all flesh, and punish the vngodly, sayeth the Lorde.

B For thus sayth the Lord of hostes: * Beholde, a miserable plage shall goo from one people to another, and a greate stormy water shall aryse frõ all the endes of the earth. And the same daye shall the Lorde him selfe sleye them, from one ende of the earth to another. There shall no mone be made for eny of them, none gathered vp, none buryed: but shall lye as dunge vpon the grounde.

Mourne, O ye shepherdes, and crye: sprinkle youre selues with asches, O ye rammes of the flocke: for the tyme of youre slaughter is fulfylled, that ye shall sleye one another, and you shalbe scatred, and ye shall fall lyke vessels connyngly made.

* The shepherdes shall haue no waye to fle, and the rammes of the flocke shall not escape. Then shall the shepherdes crye horryly, and the rammes of the flocke shall mourne: for the Lorde hath consumed their pasture, and theyr best feldes lye deed because of ỹ horryble wrath of the Lord. They haue forsaken theyr foldes lyke as a lyon. For theyr lande is waste, because of his furiouse cruelte, and of his fearfull indignatyon.

¶The.xxvj.Chapter.

¶Jeremy moueth the people to amendement. He is take of the prophetes and priestes, and brought to iudgment. Uriah the prophete is kylled of Joachim, contrary to the wyll of God.

A In the begynninge of the raygne of Jehoakim the sõne of Josiah kyng of Juda, came thys worde frõ the Lorde, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde: * Stande in the court of the Lordes house, and speake vnto all them which (oute of the cyties of Juda) come to do worshyp in the Lordes house, all the wordes that I cõmaunde the to saye. * Loke that thou kepe not one worde backe, yf peraduenture they wyll herken, and turne euery man from hys wycked waye: * that I maye also repente of the plage, which I haue determyned to brynge vpon them, because of theyr wicked inuencyons.

B And after thys maner shalt thou speake vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde: yf ye will not obey me, to walke in my lawes, which I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruauntes the prophetes, whõ I sent vnto you, rysynge vp tymely, and styll sendynge. If ye wyll not folowe them (I saye) then I wyll do to thys house * as I dyd vnto Silo, and wyll make thys cytye to be abhorred of all the people of the earth. And the preastes, the prophetes and all the people heearde Jeremy preache these wordes, in the house of the Lorde.

Nowe when he had spoken out all the wordes that the Lorde commaunded him to preach vnto the people, then the prestes, the prophetes and all the people toke holde vpõ him, and sayde: thou shalt dye. Howe darest thou be so bolde, as to saye in the name of ỹ Lorde, it shall happẽ to thys house as it dyd vnto Silo: and thys cytye shalbe so waste, that no man shall dwell therin.

C And when all the people were gathered about Jeremy in the house of the Lorde, the princes of Juda hearde of this rumour, and they came soone oute of the kynges palace, into the house of the Lord: and sat thẽ downe before the * newe dore of the Lorde. Then spake the prestes and the prophetes vnto the rulers and to all the people, these wordes: D * Thys man is worthy to dye, for he hath preached agaynst thys cytye, as ye youre selues haue heard with your eares.

Then sayde Jeremy vnto the rulers and to all the people: The Lorde hath sent me to preache agaynst this house and agaynst this cytie all the wordes ỹ ye haue heard. Therfore amende youre wayes, and youre adupsementes, and be obedient vnto the voyce of the Lorde youre God: so shall the Lorde repente of the plage, that he hath deuised agaynst you. Nowe as for me: I am in your hãdes, do with me, as ye thynke expedient and good. But this shall ye knowe: yf ye put me to death, * ye shall make youre selues, thys cytye and all the inhabytours therof, guyltye of innocent bloude. For thys is of a trueth that ỹ Lorde hath sent me vnto you, to speake all these wordes in youre eares.

Then sayde the rulers and the people vnto the prestes and prophetes: This mã maye not be condẽpned to death, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the Lorde oure God. The elders also of the lande stode vp, and talde thus vnto all the people: Michah the Morasthite, * which was a prophet vnder Ezechiah kynge of Juda, spake to all the people of Juda. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * Syon shalbe plowed lyke a felde, Jerusalẽ shalbe an heape of stones, and the hyll of the Lordes house shalbe turned to an hye wod. Dyd Ezechiah the kynge of Juda, and the people of Juda put hym to death for this? No verely: * but rather feared ỹ Lord, and made theyr prayer vnto hym. For the which cause also the Lorde repented of the plage, that he had deuysed agaynst them. Shulde we then do soch a shamefull dede agaynst oure soules? There was a prophete also, that preached styffly in the name of the Lorde, called Uriah the sonne of Semeiah of Cariathiarim: this man preached also agaynst this cytye and agaynst this lande, ac-

Then Jehoakim the kinge sent seruauntes into the lande of Egypt, namely Elnathan the sonne of Achboz, and certayne men with hym into Egipt, which fetched Uriah out of Egipt, and brought him vnto kynge Jehoakim, that sle we him with the sweard, and cast hys deed bodye into the comen peoples graue. But Ahikam the sonne of Saphan helped Jeremye, that he came not into the handes of the people to be slayne.

¶ The false prophecye of Hananiah the prophete. Jeremye sheweth that the prophecye of Hananiah is false, by example of the other prophetes. He beynge inspyred of the Lozde, reproueth Hananiah, prophecyinge hys death.

But

A BUt in the.iiij. yeare of the raygne of zedekiah kinge of Juda, in the v. moneth, it happened ỹ Hananiah the sonne of Allur ỹ prophet of Gibeō, spake to me in the house of the Lozde, in the presence of the prestes, & of all the people, and sayde: Thus sayth the Lozde of hoostes the God of Israel: I haue

C And Hananiah the prophet toke ỹ chayne from the prophete Jeremyes necke, and Thus hath the Lozde spoken: Euen so will I breake ỹ pock of Nabuchodonoloz king of Babilon, from the neck of all nacions: yee, and that within this two yeare: And so the prophet Jeremye went his waye. Nowe after that Hananiah the prophete had taken the chayne from the prophete Jeremyes necke, and brokē it. The wozde of the Lozde came vnto the prophete Jeremy, saieng: Go, and tell Hananiah thes wozdes. Thus sayth the Lozde. Thou hast broken the chayne of wodd: but in steade of wodd thou shalt make cheynes of yzon. Foz thus sayth the Lozd of hoostes the God of Israel: I wyll put a pock of yzon vpō the neck of all this people, that they maye serue Nabuchodonoloz the king of Babilon: yee, and so shall they do. ## ¶ The.xxix. Chapter.

¶ The pistle of Jeremy, sent vnto them that were in captiuite in Babylon. He prophecyeth theyr returne from captyuite after.lxx. yeares. He prophecyeth the destruccyon of the kynge and of the people that remayned in Jerusalem. He threatneth two prophetes that seduced the people. The death of Semeiah the Nehelamite is prophecyed.

THese are the wozdes of the boke, A that Jeremy the prophet sent frō Jerusalem vnto the presoners, ỹ senatoures, prestes, prophetes, & all the people, whō Nabuchodonoloz had led vnto Babilon: after that time that king Jechoniah and his quene, his chāberlaynes, the princes of Juda and Jerusalem, the wozkemasters of Jerusalem were departed thyther. I will delyuer them vp to be vexed of all kingdomes, to be cursed, abhorred, laughed to scorne, and put to confusyō of all the people, amonge whom I haue scatered thē: and that because they haue not bene obedient vnto my commaundementes, sayth the Lorde, which I sente vnto them by my seruauntes the prophetes. * I rose vp early, and sent vnto them: but they wolde not heare, sayeth the Lorde. Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde, all ye preſoners, whom I sente from Jerusalem vnto Babilon. Thus hath the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spoken of Ahab the sonne of Colaiah, and of Zedekiah the sonne of Maasiah, which prophecye lyes vnto you in my name. Beholde, I wyll deliuer them into the hande of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon, that he maye slaye them before youre eyes. And all the preſoners of Juda, that are in Babilon shall take vpon them this terme of cursynge, and saye: Lowe God do vnto the, as he dyd vnto Zedekiah and Ahab, whom the kinge of Babilon rosted in the fyer, because they synned shamefully in Israel.

* Jere. xxix. a and. xxxiii. a

For they haue not onely defiled their neyghbours wyues, but also preached lyinge wordes in my name, which I haue not commaunded them. This I testifye, and assure, sayth the Lorde. But as for Semeiah the Nehelamite thou shalt speake vnto hym.

Thus sayth ỹ Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Because thou hast sealed letters vnder thy name vnto all ỹ people that is at Jerusalem, and to Sophoniah the sōne of Maasiah the preste: yee, & sent them to all the prestes: wherein thou wryteſt thus vnto hym: The Lorde hath ordeyned the to be preste in the stead of * Jehoiada the preste: that thou shuldeſt be the chefe in the house of the Lord aboue all prophetes, and preachers, and ỹ ỹ mightest set them vpon the pillery, or in the stockes. G

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy, sayinge: Sende worde to all them that be in captiuyte, on thys maner: Thus hath the Lorde spoken concerning Semeiah the Nehelamite: * Because that Semeiah hath prophecyed vnto you without my cōmyssiō, & brought you into a fals hope, therfore thus the Lorde dothe certifye you: Beholde, I will viset Semeiah the Nehelamite, and his seede: so that none of hys shall remayne amonge this people, and none of thē shall se the good, that I will do for this people, sayth the Lorde. And they shall come, & reioyce vpon the hyll of Sion, and shall haue plentcousnes of goodes, which the Lorde shall geue thē. Namely, wheate, wyne, oyle, yōge shepe & calues. And theyr cōsciēce shalbe as a well watred garden, for they shall nomore be hongrye.

Then shall the mayde reioyce in the daūce, yee, both yonge and olde folkes. For I wyll turne their sorowe into gladnesse, and wyll conforte them from theyr sorowes and make them ioyfull. I wyll powre plēteousnesse vpon the hertes of the prestes, and my people shalbe satisfyed with my goodnesse, sayth the Lorde.

Thus sayth the Lorde: * The voyce of heynes, weping and lamentatiō was heard on hye: euen of Rachel mournyng for her childzen, and wolde not be conforted, because they were awaye. * Iere.xlv.c Mayth.ij.c

But nowe, sayth the Lorde, leaue of frō weppynge and crienge, witholde thyne eyes from teares, for thy labour shalbe rewarded, sayth the Lorde. And they shall come agayne out of the lande of their enemies: Yee, euen thy posterite shall haue consolation in this, sayth the Lorde, ỹ thy childzen shall come agayne into their awne lande.

Wore ouer, I heard Ephzaim, that was led awaye captiue, cōplayne on this maner: * Ose.xx.c. * O Lorde, thou hast correct me, & thy chastenynge haue I receaued, as an vntamed calfe. † Conuerte thou me, and I shalbe conuerted: for thou art my Lorde God: Yee, assone as thou turnest me, I shall rekourme my selfe: and when I vnderstande, I shall smyte vpon my thyghe. For verely I haue commytted shamefull thinges. For I haue borne the reprofe and cōfusion of my youth. † Dreno.v.c. Zacha.i.a

Upon this complaynte, I thought thus by my selfe: * is not Ephzaim my deare sonne? Is he not the childe, with whom I haue had all myrth and pastyme? For sens the time ỹ I first cōmened with hym, I haue him euer in remēbraunce: therfore, my very hert drycueth me vnto him, gladly and louyngly wyll I haue mercy vpon him, sayth ỹ Lord. Set the watchmen, prouyde teachers for ỹ, set thyne hert vpon the ryght waye, ỹ thou shuldest walke, and turne agayn, O ỹ daughter of Israel, turne agayne to these cityes of thyne. Howe longe wilt thou go astraye, O thou thzynking daughter? For the Lord wyll worke a newe thing vpō earth. A woman shall compasse a man. * Ge.xlviij.d

For thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: It wyll come therto, ỹ when I haue brought Juda out of captiuite, these wordes shalbe heard in the lande and in hys cityes. The Lorde, which is the fayre * bzydegrome of ryghteousnes, make ỹ frutefull, O thou holy hyll. And there shall dwell Juda, and all her cityes, ỹ shepherdes, and husbandemen. For * I shall fede the hongrye soule, and refresh all faynte hertes. When I heard thys, I came agayne to my selfe, I mused, lyke as I had bene waked oute of a swete slepe. * Esa.xlii.a. * Mayth.v.a. and v.ij.c

Beholde, sayth the Lorde, the dayes come, that I wyll sowe the house of Israel, & the house of Juda, with men and with catell. * Yee, it shall come therto, that lyke as I haue gone about in tymes past to rote thē out, to scatre them, to bzeake them downe, to destroye them, and chasten them. Euen so wyll I also go diligently aboute, to buylde them vp agayne, & to plante them, sayth the Lorde. * Then shall it nomore be sayde: the fathers haue eatē a sower grape, and the chyldzens teeth are set on edge: for euery one shall dye for hys awne myssdede, so ỹ whoso eateth a sowre grape, hys teeth shalbe set on edge. * Beholde, the dayes come, sayth the Lorde, that I wyll make & a newe couenaunt wt the house of Israel, and wt the house of Juda: not after the couenaūt that I made wt their fathers, when I toke thē by ỹ hande: and led thē out of the lande of Egypt: which couenaunt they bzacke: yee, euen when I as an husbande had rule ouer them, sayeth the Lorde. * But this shalbe the couenaūt that I wyll make with the house of Israel after those dayes, sayth the Lorde. * I will plante my lawe in the inward partes of them, and wzyte it in their hertes, † & wilbe their God, and they shalbe my people. * Eye.xxxvi.a * Ebr.viij.a * Ebr.v.b. * Eze.xi.b. † Iere.xxxij.a and.xxx.d

And from thens forth, shall no mā teach his neyghbour or his brother, & saye: knowe the Lorde. But they shall all knowe me frō the lowest vnto the hyest, sayth ỹ Lorde. For I will forgeue their myssdedes, and will neuer remēbre their synnes eny more. Thus sayth the Lorde, which gaue the * sunne to be a lyght for the daye, and the moone and starres to shyne in the night: which moueth the see, so that the floudes therof waxe fearce: his name is the Lorde of hoostes. Like as this ordinaunce shall neuer be taken oute of my syght, sayth the Lorde. So shall the sede of Israel neuer ceasse, but all waye be a people before me. * Gene.i.b

Wore ouer, thus sayth the Lorde: lyke as the heauen aboue cannot be measured, & as the foundaciōs of the earth beneth maye not be sought out. * So wyll I also not cast out the whole seede of Israel, for that they haue commytted, sayeth the Lorde. Beholde, the dayes come, sayth the Lord, that the citye of the Lorde shalbe enlarged from the * towre of Hananeel, vnto the gate of ỹ corner wall: From thens shall the ryght measure be take before her vnto the hyll toppe of * Gareb, & shal come about Gaath, and the whole valley of the deed karkases, and of the ashes, and all the feldes vnto the broke of Cedzon: and vnto the corner of the horsgate towarde the east, where as the sanctuary of the Lorde also shalbe set. And when it is nowe buylded, and set vp of thys fashyon, it shall neuer be be broken, nor cast downe any more. * Ieremy.xxxi.d * Zacha.xiiij.b * Iere.xlvi.b

The.xxxij. Chapter.

Ieremy is cast into prison, because he prophecyed that the citye shulde be taken of the kynge of Babylon. By the felde that Jeremy bought at the comaundement of the Lorde, is signifyed, that the people shulde come agayne to theyr awne possessyon. The people of God are hys seruauntes, and he is theyr Lorde. To feare God, is Goddes gyfte, to the entent that synnes maye be eschued.

These

A These wordes spake the Lorde vnto Jeremy, in the.x. yeare of zedekiah king of Juda: which was the xviij. yeare of Nabuchodonosor, what tyme as the kyng of Babylons hoost layed seage vnto Jerusalē. But Jeremy the prophet laye bounde in the courte of the prison, which was in the kinge of Judas house: where zedekiah the kyng of Juda caused hym to be layed, because he had prophecyed of this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde: * Beholde, I wyll delyuer this citye into the hādes of the kyng of Babilō, which shall take it. As for zedekiah the kynge of Juda: he shall not be able to escape the Chaldees: but surely he shall come into the handes of the kyng of Babylon: which shall speake wt him mouth to mouth: and one of thē shall loke another in ỹ face. And zedekiah shalbe caryed vnto Babylon, and there shall he be, vntyll the tyme that I viset hym, sayth the Lorde. But yf ỹ take est in hande to fyght agaynst ỹ Chaldees, thou shalt not prosper. * Ier.xxxiij.a and xxxvij.a

B And Jeremy sayde: thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto me: Behold, Hanamel the sonne of Selum thyne vncles sonne, shall come vnto the, and requyre the to redeme the lāde that lyeth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe: * for by reason of kynred it is thy right to redeme it, and to bye it out. * Leui.xxv.d Nu.xxxvi.a and.xxxvi.a. Ruth.iiij.a.

And Hananeel myne vncles sonne came to me in the court of the prison, accordynge to the worde of the Lorde, and sayde vnto me: Bye my lande, I praye the, that lieth in Anathoth in the contrey of Beniamin: for by heritage thou haste ryght to loose it oute for thy selfe, therfore redeme it. Then I perceaued that thys was the commaundement of the Lorde, and so I bought the lāde from Hananeel of Anathoth, myne vncles sonne, and weied him there the money: euen seuen syckles and ten syluer pence.

I caused hym also to make me a writing and to seale it: and called recorde therby, and weyed hym there the money vpon the wayghtes. So I toke the euidence with the copye, when it was orderlye sealed and redde ouer, and I gaue the euidence vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah the sonne of Maasiah in the syght of Hanamel my cosyne, and in the presence of the witnesses, that be named in the euidence: and before all the Jewes that were therby in the courte of the prison:

I charged Baruch also before them sayinge: The Lord of hostes the God of Israel commaundeth the, to take thys sealed euydence with the copie: and to laye it in an earthen vessell, that it maye longe continue.

For the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel hath determyned that houses, feldes, and vyneyardes shalbe possessed agayne in this lande.

Now when I had deliuered the euidence vnto Baruch ỹ sonne of Neriah, I besought the Lorde, saying: O Lord God, * it is thou that hast made heauen and earth with thy greate power and hie arme, and there is nothyng hyd from the. * Thou shewest mercy vpon thousandes, thou recōpencest the wickednes of the fathers, into the bosome of the childzen that come after them. * Gene.i.a Iere.x.b. D * Exo.xxxiiij a.

Thou art the greate and mightye God, whose name is the Lorde of hoostes: greate in councell, and excellent in worcke. Thyne eyes loke vpon all the wayes of mens childzen, * to reward euery one after his waye: & accozding to the frutes of his inuencions. * Roma.ij.a

* Thou haste done greate tokens and wonders in the lande of Egypte, as we se thys daye, vpō the people of Israel and vpō thole men: to make thy name greate, as it is come to passe thys daye. Thou hast brought thy people of Israel oute of ỹ land of Egipt, with tokens, with wonders, with a myghtye hande, with a stretched out arme and wt greate terriblenes: and hast geuen them this lande, lyke as thou haddest promysed vnto their fathers. Namely, that thou woldest geue them a lande, that floweth with mylke and honye. * Exo.vij.b. viij.b. ix.b. xij.b. xiij.b. xiiij.b. Deut.vi.b. xxvi.b. Nehe.ix.b. Psal.cxxxv.b. cxxxvi.b. Dani.ix.b. Baruc.ij.a. * Dra.viij vnto the.xij. chapter.

* Nowe when they came therin, and possessed it, they folowed nott thy voyce, and walcked not in thy lawe, * but all that thou commaundedest them to do, that haue they not done, and therfore come all these plages vpon them. * Judic.ij.c iij.b. iiij. * Deut.v.b.

Beholde, there are bullworckes made now agaynst the citye, to take it: and it that be wōne of the Chaldees that besege it, with swearde, with honger and death, and looke what thou hast spokē, that same shall come vpon them.

For lo, all thynges are present vnto the. E Yet (saist thou vnto me, O Lorde God) and commaundest me, that I shall loose a pece of lande vnto my selfe, and take witnesses therto: and yet in the meane season the citye is delyuered into the power of the Chaldees.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Beholde, I am the Lorde God of all flesshe, is there eny thynge then to hard for me? Therfore thus saith the Lorde: * beholde, I shall delyuer thys citye into the power of the Chaldees, and into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, they shall take it in. For the Chaldees shall come, and wynne thys citye, and sett fyer vpon it, and burne it: with the gorgeous houses, in whose parlers they haue made sacrifyce vnto Baal, and powred drynckoffe rynges vnto straunge Goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath. * Iere.xxb.b xxxix.b

For seyng the childzen of Israel, and the childzen of Juda haue wrought wickednes before me euer frō theyr youth vp, what haue they els done, but prouoked me wt ȳ workes of their awne handes: sayth the Lorde.

Or, what hath this cītye bene elles but a prouoking of my wrath, euer sence the daye that they buylded it, vnto thys houre wherin I cast it out of my sight, because of the great blasphemyes of the childzen of Israel & Juda, which they haue done to prouoke me: yee, they, their kynges, their prynces, their prestes, their prophetes, the men of Juda, and the cytesyns of Jerusalem.

F
*Jere.v.d
*When I stode vp early, and taught thē and instructed them, they turned their backes to me, and not theyr faces. They wolde i Jere.vii.d not heare, to be reformed and correct: but set their ydols in ȳ house, that is halowed vnto my name, to defyle it. They haue buylded hye places for Baal in the valley of the chyldzen of Hennom, to make theyr sonnes and daughters vnto Moloch: which I neuer commaunded them: nether came it euer in my thoughte, to make Juda synne with soch abhominatyon.

And nowe therfore, thus hath the Lorde God of Israel spoken, concernynge this cytie, which (as ye youre selues confesse) shalbe delyuered into the hande of the kynge of *Deut.xxv.a Babylon, when it is wonne with the swearde, with hōger and with pestilence. *Behold, I will gather them together from all landes, wherin I haue scatered them in my wrath in my fearfull and great displeasure: and wyll bring them agayne vnto thys place, where they shall dwell safely. And they shalbe my people, and I wilbe their God.

*deu.xxxix.b Jere.xxxi.c from me. *Yee, I will haue a lust and pleasure to do thē good, and faythfully plāte them in this lande with my whole hert and with all my soule.

For thus sayth the Lorde: lyke as I haue brought all this great plage vpon this people, euen so wyll I also bring vpon them all ȳ good, that I haue promised thē. And men shall haue their possessiōs in this lāde, whereof ye saye nowe, that it shall nether be inhabited of people ner of catell: but be deliuered into the handes of the Chaldees. Yee, lande shalbe bought for money, & euidēces made therupon, and sealed before witnesses in the countrey of Beniamin, and rounde aboute Jerusalem, in the cities of Juda, in the cities that are vpon the mountaynes, and in them that lye beneth: yee, and in ȳ cityes that are in the south. For I wyll bringe their prisoners hither agayne, sayth the Lorde.

The .xxxiij. Chapter.

The prophete is manyshed of the Lorde, to praye for the deliueraunce of the people, which the Lorde promyseth. God forgeueth synnes, and doth graciously to the people, for hys awne renowne. Of the byrth of Christ. The kyngdome of Christ in ȳ church shall neuer be ended.

*Jerre.xx.a and.xxxvi.a.
Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy on thys maner, * when he was yet bounde in the court of ȳ prison. Thus sayth the Lorde, which fulfilleth the thing that he speaketh: the Lorde which performeth the thing that he taketh in hand: euen he, whose name is the Lorde: *crye vnto me, & I wyll answere, and shewe the great and hye thinges, which were vnknowen vnto the:
*Ero.xiiii.b i.Reg.viii.b

Thus (I saye) spake the Lorde God of Israel, concernynge the houses of thys cītye, and the houses of the kinges of Juda, ȳ they are broken thorowe the ordinaunce and the sweard. Because the enhabitours of this cītie haue come to fight against the Chaldees: and they are fylled with the deed karcases of men, whom I haue sleyne in my wrath and displeasure: when I turned my face frō thys cītye, because of all her wickednes. Behold, sayth the Lorde, I wyll repayre & heale their woundes, and make thē whole: I will open them the large treasure of peace and trueth.

And I will returne the captiuytie of Juda and Israel: and wyll set them vp agayne as they were afore. * From all mysdedes, * Esa.xliij.a wherin they haue offended agēst me, I will clense thē. And all their blasphemyes which they haue done agaynst me, whē they regarded me not, I will forgeue them.

And thys shall get me a name, a prayse, & honoure among all the people of the earth, which shall heare all the good, that I wyll shewe vnto them: yee, they shall be afrayed and astonyed at all the good dedes and benefytes that I wyll do for them. Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde: * In this place, where-
*Jere.bij.a of ye saye that it shalbe a wyldernes, wherin nether people ner catell shall dwell: in like maner in the cityes of Juda & without Jerusalem (which also shalbe so voyde, that nether people ner catell shall dwell there) shall ȳ voyce of gladnes be heard agayne, the voyce of the brydegrome & of the bryde, the voyce of them that shall singe: *Prayse *psa.cxbiij.c i.esdrae.iij.b the Lorde of hoostes, for he is louynge and hys mercy endureth for euer: and the voyce of them that shall offer vp giftes in the house of the Lorde. For I will restore the captiuitie of this lande, as it was afore, sayth the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: It shall come yet therto, that in thys lande, which is voyde from men and catell, and in all the cityes of the lande, there shalbe set vp shepherdes cotages: in the cityes vpon the mountaynes: and in the cyties that lye vpon the playne, and in the cyties of the southe.

In the lande of Ben Jamin, in the feldes of Jerusalem, and in the cyties of Juda shall the shepe be nombred agayne, vnder ȳ hande of hym, that telleth them, sayeth the Lorde.

*Jer.xxiii.a
*Beholde, the tyme cōmeth, sayeth the Lorde, that I will performe that good thynge, which I haue promised vnto the house of Israel and to the house of Juda. In those dayes and at ȳ same tyme, I wyll bring forth vnto Dauid, the braunche of ryghteousnes, & he shall do equytie & righteousnesse in the lande.
*Esa.xxviii.c In those dayes shall Juda be helped * and Jerusalem shall dwell safe, and he that shall *i.Reg.ii.g. house of Israel: * nether shall the prestes and Leuites wāt one to offre allwaye before me burntofferinges, to kyndle the meatofferynges, and to prepare the sacrifyces.

And the worde of the Lord came vnto Jeremy after this maner. Thus sayeth ȳ Lord:
*Gen.viii.d maye the couenaūt * which I haue made wt daye and nyght be broken, that there shulde not be daye and nyght in due season: Then maye my couenaūt also be broken, which I made wt Dauid my seruaūte, and so he not to
*i.Pet.ii.a. haue a sonne to reygne in hys throne. * so shall also ȳ prestes & Leuites neuer fayle, but
*Gene.xv.b and.xxij.c. serue me. * For lyke as ȳ starres of heauen maye not be nōbred, nether the sande of ȳ see measured: so wyll I multiplye ȳ sede of Dauid my seruaūt, & the Leuites my ministers.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came to Jeremy, saying: Cōsyderest thou not what this people speaketh? Two kynredes (saye they) had the Lorde chosen, & those same two hath he cast awaye. For so they haue despised my people & they reputed thē as though they were no people. Therfore thus saieth ȳ Lorde: If I haue made no couenaūt with daye & nyght, & genē no statute vnto heauē & earth: thē will I also cast awaye the sede of Jacob & Dauid my seruaūt: so ȳ I will take no prince out of his sede, to rule ȳ posteritie of Abrahā, Isaac & Jacob. But yet I wil turne agayne their captiuitie, & be mercyfull vnto them.

The .xxxiiij. Chapter.

The threateneth that the cytie, and the kynge Zedekiah also, shalbe geuen into the handes of the kynge of Babylon. He rebuketh them that broughte soche of theyr brethren into captiuitie, as were pardoned to go at theyr libertye.

*Jer.xxxiv.a
These are thē wordes which ȳ Lord spake vnto Jeremy * what tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, & all his hostes (out of all the kingdomes ȳ were vnder his power) & all hys people, fought agaynst Jerusalem and all the cyties therof. Thus sayeth ȳ Lorde God of Israel: Goo, & speake to Zedekiah the kynge of Juda, and tell hym. The Lorde sendeth the thys worde: Beholde, * I wyll
* iiii. Regū. xxb.a. Jer. xxxii. a. and. xxxiv.a. delyuer thys cytie into the hande of the kyng of Babylon, he shall burne it, and thou shalt not escape hys hādes, but shalt be led awaye presoner, ād deliuered into his power. Thou shalt loke the kynge of Babylon in the face, and he shal speake with the, mouth to mouth and then shalt thou goo to Babilon. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde, O Zedekiah thou kynge of Juda: Thus sayeth the Lorde vnto the. Thou shalt not be slayne with ȳ sweard, but shalt dye in peace. * Lyke as thy
*i.reg.xxxi.e fore fathers the kynges, thy progenitours, were brente: so shalt thou be brēt also, and in thy mourninge they shall saye: oh Lord. For thus haue I determyned, sayeth the Lorde.

Then spake Jeremy the prophet all these wordes vnto Zedekiah kynge of Juda in Jerusalem: what tyme as the kynge of Babylons hooste beseged Jerusalem, and the rēnaūt of the cyties. Namely, Lachis and Azecach, which yet remayned of ȳ * stronge de-*ii.par.xi.a. fensed cyties of Juda.

These are the wordes that the Lord spake vnto Jeremy the prophete, when Zedekiah was agreed with all the people at Jerusalē, that there shulde be proclamed * a libertie: so
* Ero.xxi.a. Leui.xxv.f Deute.xv.b. that euery mā shuld let his seruaunt & handmayde go fre, hebrue and hebruelle, and no Jewe to holde hys brother as a bonde man. Nowe as they had consented, all the princes and all the people which had gathered vnto this agremēt that euery mā shulde set at lybertie his bōde seruaunte and bonde woman and no longer to holde them bonde euen so they were obediēt, & let them go free. But afterwarde they repented, and tokē agayne the seruauntes and handmaydens, whom they had lett go free, and so made thē bōde againe.

For the which cause the worde of ȳ Lorde came vnto Jeremye frō the Lorde hym selfe, sayinge: Thus sayeth ȳ Lord God of Israel:
*Deu.xv.a. Exod. xxi.a *I made a couenaunt with youre fathers, whē I brought thē out of Egypt, (that they shulde no more be bondmen) sayinge. When seuē yeares are oute, euery man shall let hys bought seruaūte an Hebrue go fre, yf he haue serued hym syxe yeares. But youre fathers obeyed me not & herkened not vnto me. As for you, ye were nowe turned, & did right before me, in that ye proclamed, euery mā to let his neighboure go free, and in that ye made a couenaūt before me, in the tēple that beareth my name. But yet ye haue turned youre selues agayne, and blasphemed my name. In this, ȳ euery man hath requyred his seruaūt & hādmaydē agayne, whō ye had let go quyte and fre, & cōpelled thē to serue you agayne, and to be youre bōde men, and bondwemen. And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to proclame fredome vnto his brother & neyghbour: wherfore, ☞ I wyll call you vnto a fredome, sayeth the Lord: euen vnto the swearde, to the pestilence, & to honger, & will make you to be plaged in all the kyngdomes of the earth.

Yee, those men that haue broken my couenaũt,
*Gene.xv.b. & not kepte the wordes of the appoyntemẽt,
☞ which they made before me: * & ☞ whẽ they hewed the calfe in two, & when there went thorowe the two halfes therof: The Princes of Juda, the Princes of Jerusalem, the gelded men, the Priestes and all the people of the lande, which went thorowe the two sydes of the calfe. Those men wyll I geue into the power of their enemies, & into the handes of them that folowe vpon their lyues.

*Isa.lxvi.c. Jere.vii.d. * And their deed bodies shalbe meate for the foules of the ayre, & beastes of the felde.

As for zedekiah the kynge of Juda and hys Princes, I wyll delyuer thẽ into the power of their enemyes, and of them that desyre to slaye them, and into the hande of the kynge
*Je.xxxviii.c ☞ of Babylons hoste * ☞ which nowe is departed from you: But thorow my commaũdement (sayeth the Lorde) they shal come agayne before thys cytye, they shall fyght agaynst it, wynne it, and burne it: Moreouer, I wyll laye the cyties of Juda so waste, that no man shall dwell therin.

¶ The .xxxv. Chapter.

¶ The propoundeth the obedience of the Rechabites, and therby confoundeth the pryde of the Jewes. The commaundemẽt of Jonadab, the father of the Rechabites. He threateneth punyshment vnto the rebellious Jewes. He promyseth prosperite vnto the Rechabites, for their obedience vnto their father.

A The wordes whyche the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy, in ỹ raygne of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda, are these: Go vnto the house of
* iiii.Re.x.c. * the Rechabites, & call them out, and bringe them to the house of the Lorde into some commodyous place, and geue them wyne to dryncke.

Then toke I Jazaniah the sonne of Jeremy the sonne of Habaziniah, and his brethren, & all his sonnes, and the whole housholde of ỹ Rechabytes: and brought them to the house of the Lorde into the closet of the chyldren of Hanan the sonne of Jegedaliah the man of God: which was by the closet of the Princes
B that is aboue the closet of Maaliah the sõne of Selum, which is ỹ treasurer: And before the sonnes of the kynred of the Rechabytes, I set pottes full of wyne, and cuppes, & sayde vnto them: Drincke wyne. But they sayde: we wyll drynck no wyne for Jonadab the sonne of Rechab oure father commaunded vs, saying: ye and youre sonnes shall neuer drynck wyne * buylde no houses, sowe
* Jer.xxxv.b no sede, plante no vynes, yee, ye shal haue no vineyardes: but for all youre tyme ye shall dwell in tentes, that ye maye lyue longe in ỹ lande wherin ye be straungers.

Thus haue we obeyed the cõmaundemẽt of Jonadab the sonne of Rechab oure father in all that he hath charged vs, & so we drynke no wyne all oure lyke longe: we, nor oure wyues, our sonnes and oure daughters. Nether builde we any house to dwell therin, we haue also amonge vs nether vineyardes, ner cornelande to sowe: but we dwell in tentes, we obeye, and do accordynge vnto all, that Jonadab oure father commaunded vs.

But now that Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon came vp into ỹ lande, we sayde, come, lett vs go to Jerusalem, that we maye escape the hoost of the Caldees and the Assyrians: and so we dwell now at Jerusalem. C
Then came ỹ worde of ỹ Lorde vnto Jeremy saying. Thus sayeth the Lord of hoostes the God of Israel: Go and tell ỹ mẽ of Juda and ỹ inhabitours of Jerusalẽ: Will ye not be reformed, to obey my wordes saieth ỹ Lorde? The wordes which Jonadab the sonne of Rechab cõmaunded his sonnes, ỹ they shulde drynke no wyne, are fast and surely kept: for vnto thys daye they drynck no wyne, but obeye their fathers cõmaundement. But as
* Je.xxxv. and.xxv.a for me, * I haue stand vp early, I haue spokẽ vnto you, & geuen you earnest warnynge: & yet haue ye not bene obedient vnto me. Yee, I haue sent my seruauntes, all the prophetes vnto you, I rose vp early, & sent you worde, saynge: O turne you, nowe euery mã frõ his wycked waye: amende youre lyues, and go not after straũge goddes, to worshyppe thẽ: that ye maye continue in the lande, which I haue geuen vnto you & youre fathers, but ye wolde nether heare me, ner folowe me.

The chyldren of Jonadab Rechabs sonne D
haue stedfastly kepte their fathers commaũdement, ỹ he gaue thẽ, but this people is not obedient vnto me. And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will bringe vpon Juda & vpõ euery one that dwelleth in Jerusalẽ, all the trouble ỹ I haue deuysed agaynst thẽ. * For I haue * Jerem.xi.b. & xxv.b. Ezay.lxv. Jerem.xxxvi. spokẽ vnto them, but they wold not folowe. I haue called vnto them, neuertheles they wold geue me no answere. Jeremy also spake vnto the housholde of the Rechabites: Thus sayeth the Lord of Hoostes the God of Israell: For so moche as ye haue obeyed the commaundement of Jonadab youre father, and kepte all hys preceptes, and done accordyng vnto all that he hath byddẽ you: Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes, ỹ God of Israel: * Jonadab the sonne of Rechab * Je.xxxvi. shall not fayle, but haue one out of his stocke to stande alwaye before me.

¶ The .xxxvi. Chapter.

¶ Baruch writeth (as Jeremy endyteth) the boke of the curses agaynst Juda & Israel. He is sent with ỹ boke vnto the people, and readeth it before them all. He is called before the rulars, & readeth it before thẽ also. The rulars shewe vnto the kynge the wordes of the boke. Jehudi taketh the boke, and readeth a peteell of it, and after casteth it in the fyre. There is another writen, at the commaundement of the Lorde.

In the

A In the fourth yeare of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, came the worde of the Lord vnto Je-
*Jere.xxx.a. remy, sayinge. * Take a boke, and wryte therin all the wordes, that I haue spoken to the, agaynst Israel agaynst Juda, and agaynst all the people, from the tyme ỹ I beganne for to speake vnto the (in the raygne of Josiah) vnto thys daye. That when *Jer.xxxiii.a ỹ house of Juda heareth of the plage, which I haue deuysed for them, they maye peraduenture * turne, euery man frõ hys wycked waye, that I maye forgeue theyr offences and synnes.

Then dyd Jeremy call Baruch the sonne
*Jere.xlv.a. of Neriah, * and Baruch wrote in the boke at the mouth of Jeremy, all the wordes of ỹ Lorde, which he had spoken vnto hym. And Jeremy cõmaunded Baruch, saynge: I am in prison, so that I maye not come into the house of the Lorde: therfore go thou thyther,
B and reade the boke, that thou hast wryten at my mouth: Namely, the wordes of the Lord and rede them in the Lordes house vpon the fastynge daye, that the people, whole Juda, and all they that come out of the cities, maye heare. Peraduenture they wyll praye meekely before the face of the Lorde, & turne euery one from hys wycked waye. For greate is the wrath and displeasure, that ỹ Lorde hath taken agaynst this people:

So Baruch the sonne of Neriah dyd, accordinge vnto all that Jeremy the Prophete cõmaunded him, readinge the wordes of the Lorde out of the boke in the Lordes house.
And this was done in ỹ fyft yeare of Jehoa-
*Jone.iii.a, kim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, in ỹ ix. moneth * when it was commaũded, that all the people of Jerusalem shulde fast before the Lord, and they also that were come from the cyties of Juda vnto Jerusalem.

C Thẽ redde Baruch the wordes of Jeremy out of the boke with in the house of the Lord out of the treasury of Gamariah the sonne of Saphã the Scribe, which is beside the hyer
*Jer.xxxvi.a lofte of the * ne we doze of the Lordes house: that all the people myght heare. Nowe whẽ Michaeah ỹ sonne of Gamariah the sonne of Saphan had heard all the wordes of ỹ Lorde out of the boke, he wẽte downe to the kynges palace into the Scrybes chambres, for there all the Princes were set. Elysama the Scribe, Dalaiah the sonne of Semei, Elnathan the sonne of Achbor, Gamariah the sõne of Saphan, zedekiah the sonne of Hananiah, with all the Princes. And Michaeah tolde thẽ all the wordes, that he heard Baruch reade out of the boke before the people.

D Then all the princes sent Jehudi the sonne of Nathaniah, the sonne of Selamiah, the sonne of Chusi, vnto Baruch, saying. Take in thyne hande the boke, wherout thou hast red before all the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah toke the boke in his hande, & came vnto thẽ. And they sayd vnto him. Syt downe, & rede the boke ỹ we maye heare also. So Baruch redd that they might here. Nowe whẽ they had hearde all ỹ wordes, they were abashed one vpon another, ãd sayde vnto Baruch. We wyll certifye ỹ kinge of all these wordes. And they examyned Baruch, saynge: tell vs, howe dydest ỹ write all these wordes out of hys mouth? Then E
Baruch answered them: He spake all these wordes vnto me with his mouth, & I wrote them in the boke.

Then sayde ỹ princes vnto Baruch: Go thy waye, & hyde ỹ with Jeremy, so that no mã knowe where ye be. And they went into the kyng to the courte. But they kept ỹ boke in the chambre of Elisama the Scribe, & tolde the kyng all the wordes ỹ he myght heare. So the kyng sent Jehudi to fetch him ỹ boke which he brought out of Elysama the Scribes chambre. And Jehudi red in it, that the kynge and all ỹ prynces, which were aboute him, myght heare. Nowe the kynge sat in the wynter house, for it was in the .ix. moneth & there was a fyre before him. And when Jehudi had redde thre or foure leaues therof, he cut the boke in peces with a penne knyfe, and
* caste it into the fyre vpõ the harth, vntyll ỹ *i.Reg.xii.c. boke was all brẽte in the fyre vpõ the harth.

Yet no man was abashed therof, or rente F

Neuertheles Elnathã, Dalaiah, & Gamariah besought the kynge, ỹ he wolde not burne the boke: not withstandynge the kynge wolde not hearre them, but commaunded Jerahmael the sonne of Amalech, Saraiah ỹ sonne of Ezriel & Selamiah ỹ sonne of Abdiel, to laye handes vpon Baruch the Scrybe, and vpõ Jeremy the Prophete: but the Lorde kepte thẽ out of syght. After nowe that the kynge had brent the boke, & the sermons which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremy: The worde of the Lord came vnto Jeremye, sayinge. Take another boke, and ☞ wryte in it all ỹ forsayde sermons: that ☞ were wrytẽ in the fyrst boke, which Jehoakim the kynge of Juda hath brente.

And tell Jehoakim ỹ kynge of Juda: thus G sayeth the Lorde: thou hast brẽte the boke, & thoughtest within thy selfe. Why hast thou wryten therin, that the kynge of Babylon shall come, and make thys lande waste: so ỹ he shall make both people ãd catell to be out of it? Therfore thus the Lorde sayeth of Jewyckednes of hym, of his sede, & of hys seruauntes, Moreouer, all the euell that I haue promysed them (though they herde me not) wyll I bringe vpon them, vpon the inhabitoures of Ierusalē, and vpō all Juda. Then toke Jeremy another boke, and gaue it Baruch the Scribe the sonne of Neriah, whiche wrote therin out of the mouth of Jeremy: all the sermōs that were in the fyrst boke, which Jehoakim the kyng of Juda dyd burne. And there were added vnto them many mo sermons, then before.

¶ The.xxxvii. Chapter.

Czedekiah succedeth Cononiah. He sendeth vnto Jeremye to praye for hym. Jeremy goinge into the lande of Ben Jamin, is taken. He is beaten, and put in prison. He is delyuered by kynge zedekiah.

* 4 Reg. xxiiii.d.

ZEdekiah the sonne of Josiah * which was made kynge thorowe Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, reigned in the lāde of Juda, in the steade of Cononiah the sonne of Jehoakim. But nether he, ner hys seruauntes, ner the people in the lande wolde obeye the wordes of the Lorde, which he spake by the Prophet Jeremy. * Neuertheles, zedekiah the kyng sent * Jere. xxi.a. and. xlii.a
Jehucal the sonne of Selemiah & Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah the Prest to the Prophet Jeremy, saying: O praye thou vnto the Lorde oure God for vs Nowe Jeremy walked frea monge the people at that tyme, and * Eze. xvii.b
was not put in prison as yet. * Pharaos hoste also was come out of Egypte: which whē the Caldees that beseged Jerusalem perceaued, they departed from thence.

B Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy the Prophet, saying: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel, thys answere shall ye geue to the kynge of Juda, that sent you
* Jer. xlvi.a vnto me for councell: * Beholde, Pharaos hoste which is come forth to helpe you, shall returne to Egypte into his awne lande: but the Caldees shall come agayne, and fyght agaynst thys cytie, wynne it, and sett fyre vpon it. For thus sayeth the Lorde, disceaue not youre awne myndes, thynckinge on this maner: tush, the Caldees go now their waye from vs. No, they shall not go theyr waye. For though ye had slayne the whole hoste of the Caldees, that besege you, and euery one of the slayne laye in his tente, yet shulde they stande vp, and set fyre vpon thys cyte. Now when the hoste of the Caldees was broken vp from Jerusalem, for feare of the Egyptyans armye, Jeremye went out of Jerusalem towarde the lande of Ben Jamin, to get hym from amonge the people. And when he came vnder Ben Jamyns porte, there was a C porter, called Jeriah, the sonne of Selemiah
* Jere. xxxviii.b the sonne of * Hananiah, which fell vpon him, and toke him sayinge: thy mynde is to runne to the Caldees. Then sayde Jeremy: It is not so, I go not to the Caldees. Neuertheles, Jeriah wolde not beleue hym, but brought Jeremy bounde before the Princes. Wherfore the princes were angrye with Jeremy, and smote him, and layed hym in prison in the house of Jonathas the scribe. For he was the rular of the prison. Thus was Jeremy put into the dongeō and prison, and so laye there a longe tyme. * Then zedekiah * Jere. xxxvii. c.
the kyng sent for him, and called him, and asked hym quyetly in his awne house, sayinge: D thynkest thou this bus'nes (that now is in hande) commeth of the Lorde? Jeremy answered: yee, that it doth: and thou (sayed he) shalt be delyuered into the kynge of Babylons power.

Moreouer, Jeremy sayde vnto kynge zedekiah. What haue I offended agaynst the, against thy seruātes, or agaynst thys people, that ye haue put me in prison? * Where * Jere. xxxvii. c. are youre prophetes which haue prophecyed vnto you, & sayde, that the kynge of Babylon shulde not come agaynst you & this lāde? And therfore heare nowe, O my Lorde the kynge: let my prayer be accepte before the, and sende me no more into the house of Jonathas the Scrybe, that I dye not there. Then zedekias the kynge commaunded to put Jeremy in ỹ fore entrye of the prison, and dayly to be geuen hym a cake of bread out of the bakers streate vntyll all the bread in the cytie was eatē vp. Thus Jeremy remayned in the fore entry in the prison.

¶ The.xxxviii. Chapter.

¶ By the mocyon of the rulers Jeremy is put into a dongeon. At the request of Abedmelech the Chamberlayne, the kyng cōmaundeth Jeremy to be brought forth of the dongeon. Jeremye sheweth the kynge howe he myght escape death.

SAphatiah the sonne of Mathan, Godoliah the sonne of Phasphur, Jucal the sonne of Semeliah, and Phashur ỹ sonne of Melchiah perceaued the wordes, that Jeremy had spoken vnto all the people, namely on thys maner: Thus sayeth the Lord: * Who so remayneth * Jere. xxi. and. xxvii.a.
in thys cytie, shal perish, ether with the sweard, with honger or with the pestylence. But who so falleth vnto the Caldees, shall escape winnynge his soule for a praye, & shall lyue. * For thus sayeth the Lorde: Thys * Jere. xxi.
cytie (no doute) must be delyuered into the power of the kynge of Babylon, and he also shall wynne it. Then sayde the prynces vnto the kynge: Syr, we beseche you let thys mā be put to death. For thus he discouageth the handes of the soudiers that be in thys cytie, and the handes of all the people, when he speaketh soche wordes vnto them. This mā verely laboureth not for peace of the people, but myschefe. zedekiah the kynge answered B & sayde: lo, he is in youre handes, for the kyng maye denye you nothinge. Then toke they Jeremy, and cast hym into the dongeon of Melchiah

Melchiah the sonne of Hamelech, that dwelt in the fore entrie of the prison. And they lett downe Jeremy with coardes into a dongeō, where there was no water, but myre. So Jeremy stack fast in ỹ myre. Now when Abedmelech the Mozian beynge a chamberlayne in the kynges courte, vnderstode, that they had cast Jeremy into the dongeon: he went out of the kynges house, and spake to ỹ kynge, (which then sat vnder the porte of Ben Jamin) these wordes: My Lorde ỹ kynge, C where as these men medle with Jeremye the prophet, they do hym wronge: Namely, in that they haue put him in prison, there to dye of honger, for there is no more bread in the cytie. Then the kynge commaunded Abedmelech the Mozian and sayde: Take from hence. xxx. mē whom thou wylt, & drawe vp Jeremy the prophet out of the dongeon, before he dye. So Abedmelech toke the men wt him, and went to the house of the kynge, and there vnder ỹ treasurie he gatt olde ragges & worne cloutes, and lett them downe by a coarde, into the dongeon to Jeremy.

cloutes vnder thyne arme holes, betwyxte them and the coardes: & Jeremy dyd so. So they drewe vp Jeremy with coardes & toke him out of the dongeō, & he remayned in the
* Je. xxxviii.c fore entrye of the prison. Then * zedekiah the kynge sent & caused Jeremy the prophete to be called vnto him, into the thyrde entrye, that is in the house of the Lord. And the kynge sayd vnto Jeremy: I will aske the somewhat but hyde nothynge from me. Then Jeremy answerde zedekiah: Yf I be playne vnto the, thou wilt cause me to suffre death: If I geue the councell, thou wylt not folowe me. So the king swore an ooth secretly vnto Jeremy, sayinge. As truly as the Lorde lyueth that made vs these soules, I wyll not slaye the, ner geue the into the handes of them that seke after thy lyfe.

E Thē sayde Jeremy vnto zedekiah. Thus sayeth the Lord of hoostes the God of Israel
* Je. xxxviii.c * If case be, that thou wylt go forth vnto the kynge of Babylons prynces, thou shalt saue thy lyfe, and thys cytie shalt not be brēt yee, both thou and thy housholde shall escape with youre lyues. But yf thou wylt not go forth to the kynge of Babylons prynces, thē shall thys cytie be delyuered into the handes of the Caldees, which shall set fyre vpon it, and thou shalt not be able to escape thē. And zedekiah sayde vnto Jeremy. I am afrayde for the Jewes, that are fled vnto ỹ Caldees, lest I come in theyr hādes, and so they to haue me in derisyon.

F But Jeremy answerde: No, they shall not betraye the: O herken vnto the voyce of the Lord (I beseche the) which I speake vnto ỹ, so shalt thou be well, and saue thy lyfe. But yf thou wilt not go forth, ỹ Lorde hath tolde me this playnely: Beholde, all the wemen ỹ are left in the kynge of Judaes house, shalbe led forth out to the kynge of Babilons prynces. And they shal saye, ỹ thou art disceaued: and that they who thou didest put thy trust, haue gotten the vnder, & sett thy fete fast in the myre, and gone their waye frō the. Therfore all thy wyues with their chyldren shall they leade forth vnto the Caldees, and thou shalt not escape their handes, but shalt be the kyng of Babilons prisoner, & this cytie shalt thou cause to be brent. Then sayde zedekiah vnto Jeremye: loke that no body knowe of G these wordes, and thou shalt not dye. But yf the princes perceaue, ỹ I haue talked with ỹ, and come vnto the, saying: O speake, what sayde the king to the: hyde it not frō vs, & we wyll not put the to death. Tell vs (we praye the) what sayde the kynge to the? Se thou geue them thys answere: I haue humbly besought the kynge, that he wyll lett me lye no more in Jehonathans house, that I dye not there. Then came all the princes vnto Jeremy, and asked hym. And he tolde them, after the maner as the kynge bad him. Then they helde theyr peace, and let hym alone for they perceaued nothinge. * So Jeremy abode * Je. xxxix.c styll in the fore entrie of the prison, vntyll the daye that Jerusalem was wonne.

¶ The.xxxix. Chapter.

¶ Nabuchodonosor besegeth Jerusalem. zedekiah fleeth. He hys taken of ỹ Chaldees. Hys sonnes are slayne. His eyes are thrust oute. Jeremy is preserued for. Abedmelech is delyuered from captiuitie, because of the confydence that he hath in God.

NOwe * when the cytie of Jerusalem was taken (for in the. ix. yeare of zedekiah kynge of Juda in the tenth Moneth, came Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon & all his hoste, and beseged Jerusalem & foughte agenst it. And in the. xi. yeare of zedekiah in the fourth Moneth ỹ. ix. daye of the Moneth, he brake into the cytie.) Thē all the prynces of the king of Babylon, came in, & sat them downe vnder the porte: Neregel, Sarezer, Samgarnebo, Sarsachim, Rabsaris, Neregel, Sarezer, Rabmag, wt all the other prynces of the kynge of Babylon. * And when zedekiah the kynge of Juda with hys soudiers sawe them, they fled, * Je. xxxix.a and departed out of the cytie by nyght thorowe the kynges garden, & thorowe the porte that is betwene ỹ two walles, and so they wente towarde the wylderneſſe.

But the Caldees hoste folowed faste after them, and toke zedekiah in the felde of Jericho, and brought hym prisoner to Nabuchodonosor ỹ kynge of Babylon vnto Reblath, that lyeth in the land of Hemath where he gaue iudgement vpon him. So ỹ kyng of Babylon caused the chyldrē of zedekiah and all the

all the nobles of Juda be slayne, before hys face at Reblath. And made zedekias eyes to be put out, and bounde him with two chaynes, and sent him to Babylon.

C * Moreouer, the Caldees brent vp the kynges palace, with the other houses of the people, and brake downe the walles of Jerusalem. As for the remnaunt of the people ꝑ were in the cytie, and soch as were come to helpe thē (what soeuer was left of ꝑ comē sorte) Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne caryed thē to Babylon. But Nabuzaradā the chefe captayne let the rascall people (& those that had nothinge) dwell styll in the lande of Juda, and gaue them vineyardes & corne feldes at the same tyme. Nabuchodonosor also the kynge of Babylon gaue Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne a charge, concernynge Jeremy, sayinge: take and cherish hym, and make moche of him: se thou do hym no harme, but intreate him after his awne desyre.

* iiii. Regū. xxv.b Jere.xxxix.d.

So Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne, Nabusazban Rablares, Nergal Sarezer Rabmag and all the kynge of Babylons Lordes sent for Jeremy * and caused hym to be fet out of the fore entrye of the preson, & cōmitted him vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam the sonne of Saphan: that he shulde carye hi home, * and so he dwelt amonge the people.

* Jere. xxxviii.d.

D * Jere. xl. b. Now whyle Jeremy laye yet bounde in the fore entrie of the preson, ꝑ worde of the Lord came vnto him, sayinge: Goo and tell Abedmelech the Mozian: Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, the cruell and sharpe plage that I haue deuysed for this cytie, will I bringe vpon them, that thou shalt se it: but I wyll delyuer ꝑ (sayeth the Lorde) and thou shalt not come in ꝑ handes of those men, whom thou feareste. For doutles I wyll saue the, so that thou shalt not perish wt the swearde: but thy lyfe shalbe saued, ād that because thou hast put thy trust in me, sayeth the Lorde.

C The. xl. Chapter.

C Jeremye hath lycence to go whether he wyll. He dwelleth with the people that remayneth at Jerusalem, ouer whom Godoliah ruleth. Johanan prophecyeth deeth vnto Godoliah.

A THys is the worde that the Lord spake vnto Jeremy, * when Nabuzaradan the chefe Captayne had let him go fre from ‡ Ramah, whyther he had led him boūde amōge all the preconers, that were caryed from Jerusalem and Juda vnto Babylon. The chefe captayne called for Jeremy, and sayde vnto hym. The Lorde thy God spake myghtely before of the mysery vpon thys place: Nowe the Lorde had sent it, and perfourmed it as he had promysed. For ye haue synned agaynst the Lord, and haue not bene obedient vnto his voyce, therfore commeth thys plage vpon you. Beholde, I lowse the bondes from thy handes thys daye: yf ꝑ wilt nowe go with me vnto Babylon, vp then: for I wyll se to the, & prouyde for the. But yf thou wylt not go with me to Babylō, thē remayne here. * Beholde, all the lande is at thy wyll, loke wher thou thynkest cōuenient and good for the to abyde, there dwell. For as yet he was not gone backe againe to Godoliah therfore he sayde to him: Go backe to Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam, the sonne of Saphan: * whō the kynge of Babylō hath made gouernoure ouer the cyties of Juda, & dwell with hym amonge the people, or remayne where soeuer it pleaseth the. So the chefe Captayne gaue him hys expenses with a rewarde, and let him go. * Thē wente Jeremy vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam to Mizpa, and dwelt there with hym among the people that were left in the lande.

Nowe when the captaynes of the hoste of Juda (which wt their felowes were scatred C abrode on euery syde in the lande) vnderstode that ꝑ kynge of Babylō had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam gouernoure in the land, and ꝑ man, wyfe and childe, yee, and ꝑ poore men in the lande (that were not led captyne to Babylon) shulde be vnder his iurisdictiō: They came to Godoliah vnto Mizpa: Namely, Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, Johanan and Jonathan the sonnes of Careah, Sareah the sonne of Thanhometh, the sonnes of Ophai the Netophathite, Jesaniah ꝑ sonne of Maachati, with theyr companyōs. And Godaliah the sonne of Ahicam, the sonne of Saphan, swore vnto them and theyr felowes in this maner * Be not afrayed to serue the Caldees, dwell in the lande, and do the kyng of Babylon seruice, so shall ye prospere. Beholde, I dwell at Mizpa to be an officer in the Caldees behalfe, and to satisfye soche as come to vs. Therfore gather you wyne, corne and oyle, and kepe them in your ware houses, and dwell in youre cyties that ye haue in kepynge.

Yee, all the Jewes also ꝑ dwelt in Moab vnder the Ammonites, in Idumea and in all the countreys, when they herde, that ꝑ kinge of Babylō had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan, gouernoure vpon thē ꝑ were left in Juda. All the Jewes (I saye) returned oute of all places where they were fled vnto: and came into the lande of Juda to Godoliah vnto Mizpa, & gathered wyne & other frutes, & that very moche.

Moreouer, Johanan the sonne of Careah and all the captaynes of the hoste, that were scatred on euery syde in the lāde, cam to Godoliah in Mizpa, & sayde vnto him. knowest thou not that Baalis kynge of the Ammonites hath sent Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, to slaye the? But Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam beleued them not. Then sayde Johanan the sonne of Careah vnto Godoliah in Mizpa in Mizpa these wordes secretly: Let me go, I praye the, and I will slaye Ismael ꝑ sonne of Nathaniah, so that no body shall knowe it. Wherfore will he kyll the, that all the Jewes which resorte vnto the, might be scatred and the remnaunt in Juda perysshe. And Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam sayde to Johanan the sonne of Careah: Thou shalt not do it, for they are but lyes, that thou sayest, of Ismael.

C The. xli. Chapter.

C Ismael kylleth Godoliah gylefully, & many other with hym. Johanan foloweth after Ismael.

A * iiii. Regū. xxv.d. BUt in the seuenth Moneth it happened, ꝑ * Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah the sonne of Elisama (one of the kynges bloude) came with them that were greatest aboute the kynge, & ten men ꝑ were sworne with him: vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam to Mizpa, & they dyd eate together. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah with those ten men that were sworne to him, starte vp, and smote Godoliah the sonne of Ahicā the sonne of Saphan with the swearde, and slewe him, whom the kynge of Babylon had made gouernoure of the lande. Ismael also slewe all the Jewes that were with Godoliah at Mizpa, and all the Caldees that he founde there waytynge vpon hym and those that were able to fyght they slewe with hym.

Nowe the * pyt wherin Ismael dyd cast ꝑ dead bodies of the men (whom he slewe because of Godoliah) had kynge Asa caused to be made, for feare of Baasa the kyng of Israel, and the same pyt dyd Ismael fyll with slayne mē As for the remnaunt of the people, ꝑ kynges daughters and all the people that were yet left at Mizpa, vpon whom * Nabusaradan the chefe Captayne had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam gouernoure: Ismael ꝑ sonne of Nathaniah caryed them away preso-

But when Johanā the sonne of Careah & all they which had bene captaynes ouer the kynges hoste with hym, herde of all the wyckednes that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had done: * they toke theyr cōpanions, & went out for to fyght wt Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, and foūde him by the greate waters that are in Gibeon. Nowe when all the people, whō Ismael led captiue, sawe Johanā the sonne of Careah and all the other Captaines of the hoste, they were glad. So all the people that Ismael had caryed away from Mizpa, were brought agayne.

And when they returned, they came to Johanan the sonne of Careah. But Ismael the sonne of Nathanah fled from Johanā with D eyght of hys swoorne companyons, & wente to the Ammonites. Then Johanan the sonne of Careah and all the captaynes of ꝑ hoste that were with him, toke all the remnaūt of the people, whom Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had led a waye. A SO all the captaynes, & Johanan ꝑ sonne of Kareah, Jezaniah ꝑ sonne of Osayah came with all the people frō the leest vnto the most, and sayde vnto Jeremy the prophete. * O heare oure peticion, that thou mayest praye for vs vnto the Lorde thy God, namely, for all the rēnaūt, wher of there be very fewe of vs left of many, as ꝑ seest vs: ꝑ the Lorde, thy God may shewe vs a waye to goin, & tell vs, what we shulde do. ## ¶ The.xlii. Chapter.

¶ Johanan carryeth the remnaunt of the people into Egypte, contrary to the mynde of Jeremye. Jeremy prophecyeth the destruccyon of Egypte.

A NOwe when Jeremy had ended all the wordes of the Lord his God vnto the people which to declare ꝑ Lorde they God had sent hym to them, (euen all thes wordes I saye) Azariah the sonne of Osaiah, and Johanan the sonne of Kareah with all the stubborne personnes, sayde vnto Jerem: * Thou lyest, the Lorde oure God *Jerer.xliij.a hath not sent the to speake vnto vs, that we shulde not go into Egypte, and dwell there:
B But Baruch the sonne of Neriah prouoketh the agaynst vs, that he myght bryng vs in to the captiuyte of the Caldees: ꝑ they might slaye vs, and carye vs awaye prysoners vnto Babylon.

So Johanan the sonne of Kareah, and all the captaynes of the hooste, and all ꝑ people folowed not the commaundement of the Lorde: Namely, to dwell in the lande of Juda. But Johanan the sonne of Kareah, and all the captaynes of the hooste, caried awaye *Jer.xlij.c all the remnaunt in Juda, * that were come together agayne from all the heythē (amōg whom they had bene scatred) to dwell in the lande of Juda: Men, wemen, chyldren, the kynges daughters, all those that Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne had lefte with Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam, the sonne of Saphan. They caryed awaye also the prophete Jeremy, Baruch the sonne of Neriah, and so came into Egypte: for they were not obedyent, vnto the cōmaundement of God. Thus came they to Taphnis.

And in Taphnis the worde of the Lorde happened vnto Jeremy, saying: Take great stones in thyne hande, and hyde them in the bryck wall, vnder ꝑ doore of Pharaos house in Taphnis, that all the men of Juda maye se, and saye vnto thē: Thus sayth the Lorde of hooستes the God of Israel. * Beholde, I *Jerer.xliij.d
wyll sende and call for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon my seruaunt, and wyll sett his seate vpon these stones that I haue hyd, and he shall spredde his tente ouer them.

And when he commeth, he shall smyte the lande of Egypte, some with slaughter, some D with presonment, and some with ꝑ swearde. He shall set fyre vpō the tēples of the Egyptians goddes, and burne them vp, & take thē selues prysoners. Moreouer, he shall araye him selfe with the lande of Egypte, lyke as a shepherde putteth on hys cote, and shall departe his waye from thēce in peace. The pyllers also of the ☞ temple of the Sunne ꝑ is in Egypte: shall he breake in peces, and burne the tempels of the Egyptians goddes.

¶ The.xliij. Chapter.

¶ He reproueth the people for theyr ydolatrye. they that fet lyght by the threatyng of ꝑ Lorde are chastened. The destruccyon of Egipte and the Jewes therin is prophecyed.

A THis is the worde that was shewed to Jeremy, concernyng all the Jewes: which dwelt in Egypte: at Migdol, at Taphnis, at Noph, & in the lande of Pathures. Thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel: Ye haue sene all the misery, that I haue brought vpō Jerusalem, and vpon the cityes of Juda: lo that thys daye they are desolate, and no man dwellynge therin: and that because of the greate blasphemies which they committed, to prouoke me vnto anger. In that they went backe to do sacrifyce and worship vnto straunge goddes: whom nether ye, ner youre fathers haue knowne. Howebeit, I sent vnto them my seruauntes all the pro-
*Jerer.xxb.a and.xxx.c phetes. * I rose vp early, I sent vnto them, and gaue them warnyng. O do no soche abhominable thynges, & thynges that I hate. But they wolde not folowe ner herken, to turne from their wickednes, & to do nomore sacrifyces vnto straunge goddes.

Wherfore myne indignation and wrath
B was kyndled, and it brente vp the cytyes of Juda, the feldes with the stretes of Jerusalem, so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to passe thys daye. Nowe therfore, thus sayth the Lorde of hooستes, the God of Israel: Howe happeneth it, that ye do so greate euyll vnto youre awne soules: thus to destroye the men and wemen, chyldren and babes of Juda: so that none of you is lefte, because ye prouoke me vnto wrathe with the worckes of youre awne handes: when ye offer vnto straunge goddes in the lāde of Egipt, where as ye be gone to dwell. That ye myght vtterly perysshe, and that ye myght be reuyled and shamefully intreated of all nacyons. Or haue ye nowe forgotten the wickednes of your forefathers, the wickednes of the kinges of Juda and their wyues, the wyckednes that ye youre selues and youre wyues haue done in the lande of Juda, in the cytie and in the lande of Jerusalē.

C Yet are ye not sory vnto this daye, ye feare not, nether walke ye in my lawe and i my commaundementes, that I haue geuen vnto you and youre forefathers.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hooستes, the God of Israel: I am stedfastly aduised and determyned to punysshe you, & to rote out all Juda. As for the remnaunt of Juda, that purposly wente into Egipt, ther to dwell, I wyll take them, * and they shall Jerer.xxij.c and.xxiij.a all be destroyed. In the lande of Egypt shall they perysshe, beynge consumed with the swearde and with honger. For from the leest vnto the moost, they shall perysshe with the swearde and with honger. Moreouer, they shalbe reuyled, abhorred, shamed, and confounded. For I wyll visit them that dwell in Egypte, * as I haue visyted Jerusalem, *Jerer.xxxix.a.
with the swearde, with honger and with pestilence. So that none of the remnaūt of Juda, which are gone to dwell in Egipte, shall be left to come agayne into the lande of Juda all though they thynke to come thyther agayne, and to dwell there. For none shall come agayne, but soch as are fledd awaye.

Then all the mē which knewe that their D wyues had offred vnto straūge goddes, and a greate sorte of wyues that stode there, yee, and all the people that dwelt there in Egipt in the cytie of Pathures, answerde Jeremye, and sayde: As for the wordes that thou hast spoken vnto vs, in the name of the Lorde, we wyll in no wyse heare them: but whatsoeuer goeth out of oure awne mouthe, that we wyll do. We wyll do sacrifyce and offer oblatyons vnto the quene of heauen, * lyke *Jerer.xxiij.b
as we and our forefathers, oure kynges and oure heades haue done in the cytie of Juda, and in the stretes and feldes of Jerusalem. For then had we plenteousnes of vitayles, then were we in prosperyte, and no myshorture came vpon vs.

*But sens we left to burne incense, and to E do sacrifyce vnto the quene of heauen, we *i.(xx)xlv.b
haue had scarcenesse of all thynges, and perisshe with the swearde and honger. Last of all, when we wemen dyd sacrifyce and offered vnto the quene of heauen, dyd we make her cakes and poure vnto her drinck offerynges, euē to that ymage dyd we sacrifyce and seruice, without oure husbandes wylles?

Then sayde Jeremy vnto all the people, to the men, to the wemen, and to all the folke, which had geuen him that answere: Dyd not the Lorde remember the sacrifyces that ye, youre forefathers, youre kynges and rulers, with all the people, haue offered in the cyties of Juda, in the stretes and lāde of Jerusalem? and hath he not consydered thys in his mynde? In somoch that the Lorde might no longer suffer the wyckednes of youre inuencyons, and the abhomynable thynges, which ye dyd? * Is not youre lande desola-

Yee, this is the cause, that all misfortune happened vnto you, as it is come to passe this daye. Moreouer, Jeremy spake vnto all the people and to all the wemen. Heare the worde of the Lorde all Juda, ye that be in the lande of Egipt. Thus sayth the Lord of hooſtes the God of Iſrael. Ye and your wyues haue ſpoken with youre awne mouth, ẏ thinge that ye haue fulfylled in dede.

*Ier.xliij.c *Yee, thus haue ye ſayde: We wyll nott kayle, but perfourme the vowes that we haue vowed, we will do ſacrifyce & powre out drinckofferinges to the quene of heauē. Purpoſly wyll ye let vp your awne meanynges and perfourme your vowes. And therfore, heare the wordes of the Lorde, all Juda, ye that dwell in the lande of Egipte.

*Jere.xlvj.c. *And all the men of Juda that be in the lāde of Egypte ſhall perysche with the ſwearde, and with honger, vntyll they be vtterly deſtroyed. And all the remnaūt of Juda, that are gone into Egypte, there to dwell, ſhall knowe whoſe wordes ſhall be founde true: theyrs or myne. Take thys for a token that I wyll viſet you in this place, ſayth ẏ Lord: and that ye maye knowe ẏ I (without doubte) will perfourme my purpoſe vpon you to punyſhe you. ¶The prophecyeth the deſtruction of Egypt. Deliuerance is promyſed to Iſrael.

Here folowe the wordes of ẏ Lorde A to the prophete Jeremye, which he ſpake agaynſt all the Gentyles.

These wordes folowing preached
*Eſa.xix.a and.xx.a Eze.xxix.a xxx.and.xxxi. ‡ iiij. Regū. xxiiij.b. he to *the Egipcyans concerninge the hooſt of Pharao Necho kynge of Egypte: *when he was in Charcamis, beſyde the water of Euphrates: what tyme as Nabuchodonoſor ẏ king of Babilō ſlewe him, in the fourth yeare of Jehoakim the ſonne of Joſias king of Juda:

*Make ready buckler and chylde, and go
*Jer.xxxvi.a forth to fyght: harnes your horſes, and ſett your ſelues vpon them: ſet your ſalettes faſt on, bring forth ſpeares, ſcoure youre ſwearedes, and put on your breſte plates.

But alas, howe happeneth it, ẏ I ſe you ſo afrayde? why chrynche ye backe? Theyr worthyes are ſlayne. Yee, they runne ſo faſt awaye, that none of them looketh behynde him. Fearfulnes is fallen vpon euerychone of them, ſayth the Lorde. The lightеſt of foote ſhall not flee awaye, and the worthies ſhal not eſcape.

Towarde the north by the water of Eu- B phrates, they dyd ſtōble and fall. But what is he this, ẏ ſwelleth vp, as it were a floude, roaringe and ragynge lyke the ſtreames of water? It is Egipte that ryſeth vp lyke the floude, and caſteth out the waters with ſo greate noyſe.

And he ſayde: I will go, and wyll couer the earth, I will deſtroye the citye with thē that are therin. Gett you vp ye horſes, rolle forth ye charettes, come forth worthies: ye Mozians, ye Libeans with youre bucklers, ye Lideans with your bowes. This daye of ẏ Lorde God of hoſtes, is a daye of vengeaunce, that he maye auenge hym of hys enemyes. The ſwearde ſhall deuoure, it ſhalbe C ſatiſſyed, and bathed in theyr bloude. For the Lorde God of hoſtes ſhall haue a ſlayne offering towarde the north, by the water of Euphrates. Go vp, O Gilead, and bringe triacle vnto the daughter of Egypt. But in vayne ſhalt thou go to ſurgery: for thy wounde ſhall not be ſtopped. The heythen haue heard of thy ſhame, and the lande is full of thy confuſion: for one ſtronge man dyd ſtomble vpon another, and they are fallen both together.

*These are the wordes ẏ the Lorde ſpake D
*Jere.xlvi to the prophete Jeremy concerning the comming of Nabuchodonoſor the kinge of Babilon, which was ſent to deſtroye the lāde of Egipt. Preach out thorowe ẏ lāde of Egipt: & cauſe it to be proclamed at Migdol, Noph and and Taphnis, and ſaye: Stande ſtyll, make the ready, for the ſwearde ſhall conſume the rounde aboute.

Howe happeneth, it ẏ thy mightye worthies are fallen? why ſtode they not faſt? Euen becauſe the Lorde thruſt them downe. The ſlaughter was greate, for one fell euer ſtill vpon another. One cryed vpon another. Vp, let vs go agayne to oure awne people, and to oure awne naturall contrey from the cruell ſwearde.

E They dyd crye euē there, O Pharao kyng of Egipt thou trobulous king: the tyme will bring ſedityon. As truly as I lyue, ſayth the *Eſa.xlviii.a and.li.c king, *whoſe name is the Lorde of hoſtes, it ſhall come as the mount of Thabor, and as Libanus ẏ it ſtode in the ſee. O ẏ daughter of Egipte make ready thy geer to flyt. For Noph ſhalbe voyde and deſolate, ſo that no man ſhall dwell therin. The lande of Egipt is lyke a goodly fayre calfe: but deſtruccyon ſhall come out of the north I ſaye it cōmeth. Her waged ſoudyers that ben with her, are like fat calues. They alſo ſhall flee awaye together, and not abyde: for the daye of theyr ſlaughter, and the tyme of their viſytation ſhall come vpon them.

The crye of them ſhall make a noyſe, as F the blaſt of a trompete. For they ſhall enter in with their hoſtes, and come with axes, as it were hewers downe of wodde. And they ſhall cut downe her wodde, ſayth the Lorde. They ſhalbe innumerable: for they ſhalbe mo in nomber then the greſhoppers, ſo that no man ſhalbe able to tell them. The daughter of Egipte is confoūded, and deliuered in to the handes of the people of the north.

Thus ſayth the Lorde of hoſtes the God of Iſrael. Beholde, I wyll viſet that reſtles people of Alexandria, Pharao and Egypte: yee, bothe theyr goddes and theyr kynges: euen Pharao, and all them that putt theyr truſt in hym. And after all theſe thynges it ſhalbe inhabyted as afore tyme, ſayth the Lorde.

G But be not thou afrayed (O my ſeruaūt Jacob) feare not thou, O Iſrael. For lo, I wyll helpe the from farre, and thy ſeede from the lande of theyr captiuite. Jacob alſo ſhall come agayne, and be in reſt: he ſhall proſpere and no man ſhall do him harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob my ſeruaunt) ſayth the Lord, for I am with the: and wyll deſtroye all nacyons, amonge whom I haue ſcatered the. Thus ſayth the Lorde: Beholde, there ſhall waters aryſe out of the north: & ſhall growe to a greate floude, runnynge ouer and couerynge the lande, the cyties, and them that dwell therin.

And the men ſhall crye, and all they that B dwell in the lande, ſhall mourne at the noyſe and ſtampinge of theyr ſtronge barbed horſes, at the ſhakyng of theyr charettes and at the romblynge of the wheles. The fathers ſhall not loke to their chyldren, ſo feable and wery ſhall their handes be: at the ſame tyme when he ſhall be there, to deſtroye the whole lande of the Philiſtines. He ſhall make waſte both Tirus, Sidon, and all other that are ſworne vnto them.

For the Lorde wyll deſtroye the Phili- C ſtines, the remnaunt of the yle of Caphtor. Baldeneſſe is come vpon Azah, Aſcalō with her other valleys ſhall kepe her peace.

Howe longe wilt thou ſaye, O ẏ ſwearde of the Lorde? Whan wylt thou ceaſſe? Turne agayne into thy ſwete reſte, and leaue of. But howe can it ceaſe, when the Lorde hym ſelfe hath geuen him a charge agaynſte Aſcalon, and rayſed it vp agaynſt the cityes of the ſee coaſt?

* As foz Moabs pryde, we haue hearde of it: she is verye hye mynded. I knowe her stoutnes, her boastynge, her arogancye, and the pryde of her stomack, sayth the Lozde. I knowe (sayeth the Lozde) her indigmacyon, she doth not ryght, her wozdes are lyes, and they haue not delt truly. Therfoze shall ther mourning be made foz Moab, and euery mã shall crye foz Moabs sake: a lamentacyon shalbe made to the men that stande vpõ the wall. So will I mourne foz the also, O Jazer and foz the, O thou vineyarde of Sabamah. Thy vyne braunches shall come ouer the see, and the braunches of Jazer but vnto the see: þ destroyer shall breake into thy harueste and grape gathering: myrth and cheare shalbe taken awaye from the tymbre felde, and from the whole lande of Moab.

There shalbe no swete wyne in the presse, the tr . r shall haue no stomacke to crye yee, ther shalbe none to crie vnto him: which afoze tyme were heard frõ Heshebon to Eleale and Jahaz, which lifted vp their voyce frõ zoar vnto Hozonaim, that ☞ bullocke of thre yeare olde shall go mourning. The waters also of Nemrim shalbe dryed vp. Moreouer, I will make Moab cease, sayeth the Lozd, from the offeringes and censing that, she hath made vnto her goddes in hie places. Wherfoze my hert mourneth foz Moab, lyke a crowde playenge an heuy longe: and foz the mennes sake of the brycke wall my herte mourneth also: euen as a pype that pypeth a dolefull longe: foz they shalbe very feawe, and destroyed. ☞ F

Foz I wyll breake Moab lyke an vnpzofytable vessell, sayth þ Lozde. O howe is she destroyed? O howe mourneth she? O howe doeth Moab hange downe her heade, & is ashamed? Thus shall Moab be a laughing stocke: & had in derision of all thẽ þ be rounde aboute her. * Foz thus sayth the Lozde. Beholde, the enemye shall come flieng as an aegle: & spzede hys winges vpon Moab. They shall clyme ouer þ walles, & wynne the strõgholdes. Foz there shall go a fier out of Heshebõ, and a flame from Sion, and shall burne vp that proude people of Moab, and the toppe of thole seditypous chyldren.

Wo be vnto þ, O Moab, foz thou people of Chamos shalt perysshe. Yee, thy sonnes and daughters shalbe leade awaye captiue. Yet at the laste wyll I brynge Moab out of captiuite agayne, sayeth the Lozde. Thus farre is of the plage of Moab.

C The.xlix.Chapter.

C The wozde of the Lozde agaynst the Ammonites, agaynst Idumea, Damascus, Cedar and Elam.

A * Eze.xxi.d and.xxv.a Amos.i.a S concerning the * Ammonytes, thus the Lozde sayth: hath Israel no childre, oz is he without an heyre? Why hath youre king then take Gad in? Wherfoze doth his people dwell in his cityes? Beholde therfoze, the tyme commeth, sayth the Lozde, þ I wyll bring a noyse of warre into Rabah of the Ammonites: and it shall be layed on a desolate heape: and her cityes brẽt vp: & the Israelites shalbe lozdes ouer those that had them in possession afoze, sayeth the Lozde. Heshebon shall mourne, foz Ay shalbe roted out of the grounde, sayth the Lozde.

☞ The cityes of ☞ Rabah shall crye out, and gyrde thẽ selues with sacke cloth: they shall mourne, & runne about the walles: foz theyr king shalbe led awaye presoner: yee, his prestes and princes with hym.

Wherfoze trustest thou in the valleye? thy B valleye hath flowed awaye, O thou fearce daughter, & thynkest þ þ thou art so safe, by reason of thy treasure, that no mã shall come to the? Beholde, I will brynge a feare vpon the, sayth the Lozde God of hostes, from all those that be about the: so that ye shalbe scattered euery mã from another, and a mã shall gather them together agayne þ be fled. But after that, I wyll bring the Ammonites also out of captiuyte agayne.

* Esa.xxi.b Eze.xxv.b.xxxii.f.& xxxv.a * Upon the Edomites hath the Lozde of hoostes spoken on thys maner: Is there no moze wysdome in Themã? Is there nomoze good counsell amonge his people? Is theyr wysdome then turned clene to naught? Gett you hence, turne youre backes, crepe downe into the deppe, O ye citesyns of Dedan.

Foz I will bryng destruccion vpõ Esau: yee, and the daye of hys visytatyon. If the grapegatherers came vpon the, shulde they not leaue some grapes? If the night robbers came vpon the, shulde they not take so moch as they thought were ynough?

C But I wyll make Esau bare, and discouer his secretes, so that he shall not be able to hyde them: hys sede shalbe wasted awaye: yee, hys brethren and hys neyghbours, and he hym selfe shall not be lefte behynde.

Thou shalt leaue thy fatherlesse children behynde the, and I wyll kepe them, and thy wyddowes shall take their comfozte in me. * Jere.xxxix.b Eze.ix.b i.Pet.iiii.c Foz thus hath the Lozde spoken. * Behold, they that mẽ thought were vnmete to drinke of the cuppe, haue dronken with the fyrst: and thynkest thou then to be free?

No, no, thou shalt nether be quite noz free: but thou must drinke also. Foz why? I haue swozne by my selfe, sayth the Lozde, þ Bozrah shall become a wyldernes, an open shame, a laughyng stocke and cursynge: and all her cyties shalbe a continuall deserte.

Foz I am perfectly informed of þ Lozde D that he hath sent a message allredy vnto the Heythen. Gather you together, and go forth agaynst them: make you ready to the battayle: foz lo, * I wyll make the but small amonge the heythen, and lytell regarded amonge men. * Abd.i.a

Neuertheles, though thy neste were as hye as the aegles, yet wyll I cast the downe, sayeth the Lozde. Moreouer, Idumea shalbe a wildernes: * whoso goth by it, shalbe abashed, and wonder at all her mysserable plages. ‡ Lyke as Sodome, Gomoz, and the cytyes þ laye ther about were turned vp side downe, saith the Lozd, so shall no body dwell in Idumea, and no man shall haue his habitation there. Behold, lyke as the lyon, so shall a destroyer come vp frõ the pleasaunt medowes of Jozdane vnto the stronge dwelling place: & whẽ I haue made him quiet, I will make him to flie from her: and all chosen men, will I set in araye agaynst her. But howe should so worshipfull & glorious the Lorde of hostes. I wyll kyndle a fyre in the walles of Damascus, which shall consume the palace of Benhadad.

*Esa.xvi.c *As for Cedar and the kingdom of Hazor, whō Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon smote downe, the Lorde hath spoken thus vpon them: Aryse, and get you vp vnto Cedar, and destroye the people towarde ỹ east. Theyr tentes and theyr flockes shall they take awaye: yee, their hangynges and their vessels. Their camels also shal they ca-rye awaye with thē. They shall crye to thē:
Feare is on euery syde.

F Flie, get you fone awaye, creape into cā-ues, that ye maye dwell there, O ye inhabiters of Hazor, saith the Lorde: for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon hath holden a councell concernynge you: and concluded his deuyce agaynst you. Aryse, and get you vp agaynst yonder ryche and careles people (sayeth the Lorde) which haue nether gates nor doze barres, but dwell alone. Their camels shalbe stollen, and the droues of theyr catell dryuen awaye.

Moreouer, those wyll I scater towarde all the wyndes: and bringe them to destruccyon: yee, and that thorowe their awne familyers, sayth the Lorde. Hazor also shall be a dwellyng for dragons, and an euerlasting wildernes: so that no body shall dwell there:
G and no man shall haue there his habitation.

*Ezec.xxxv.d Dani.viii.a These are the wordes that the Lorde spake to the prophete Jeremy, cōcerning *Elā, in the begynninge of the raygne of Zedekiah kynge of Juda. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I wyll breake the bowe of Elam, and take awaye theyr strength: and vpon Elam I wyll bring the foure wyndes from the foure quarters of heauen, and will scater them agaynst the same foure windes:
And there shalbe no people, but some of Elā shall flie vnto them.

For I wyll cause Elam to be afrayed of theyr enemyes, and of them that seke theyr lyues: and wyll brynge vpon them the indygnation of my wrath, sayth the Lorde. And I wyll persecute them with the swearde, so longe tyll I haue brought them to naught.
I wyll sett my throne in Elam, I wyll de-stroye both the kynge and the prynces from thence, sayth the Lorde. But in processe of tyme I wyll brynge Elam out of captiuyte agayne, sayth the Lorde.

the children of Israel shall come, they and the children of Juda, wepinge and making haste, and shall seke the Lorde their God.
They shall aske the waye to Sion, thyther

And the Chaldees shalbe spoyled, and all the Lorde, * although ye were so chearfull * Esa.xlviii.a

Go forth in your araye against Babilon rounde about, all ye that can handle bowes:
shute at her, spare no arowes: for she hathe synned agaynst the Lorde. Crye out: vpon her, vpon her, agaynst her rounde about: she be the vengeaunce of the Lorde. * Yee, vengeaunce shalbe taken of her, and as she hath done, so deale ye with her. Rote out ỹ sower from Babilon, and him that handleth the sycle in harueste. For feare of the swearde of the enemye, euery man shall gett him to hys awne people: and euery man shall flee to his awne lande. Israel is a scatred flocke, the lyons haue dispersed them. * Fyrst the king of the Assirians deuoured them, * last of all this Nabuchodonosor king of Babilō hath broken all their bones.

Therfore, thus saith the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will viset the kyng of Babylon and his kingdome as * I haue visited the kyng of the Assirians, and wyll brynge Israel agayne to his pleasaunt pasture, that he maye fede vpon Charmel and Basan, and be satisfyed vpon the moūt of Ephraim and Galaad. * In those dayes and at the same tyme, sayth the Lord, ☞ yf the offence of Israel be sought for, there shall none be founde. Yf men enquere for the syn-ne of Juda, there shalbe none: for I wyll be mercyfull vnto them, whom I suffre to re-mayne ouer.

Go downe, O thou auenger, into the ene-myes lande, and viset them that dwell therin: downe with thē, and smyte them vpō the backes, sayth the Lorde: do accordyng to all that I haue commaūded the. There is gone aboute the lande a crye of a slaughter and great murther, namely on this maner. How happeneth it, that the hammer of the whole worlde is thus broken and broised in sonder?
Howe chaunceth it, that Babilon is become a wildernesse amonge the Heythen on thys maner? I my selfe haue layed wayte for the,
and thou art takē vnawares: art thou trapped and snared: for why? thou hast prouoked the Lorde vnto anger. The Lorde hath ope-that is done in the lande of the Chaldees, it is the Lorde of hostes worcke.

Come against her, for this is her ende:
E breake vp her chestes: threshe her as ye thresh

Slaye all their myghtye souldyers, and put them to death. Woo be vnto them, for the de. Hye thynke I heare allready a crye, of them that be fled and escaped out of the lāde

Therfore shall her yonge men fall downe in the stretes, and all her men of warre shalbe holde, I speake vnto the, O thou proude, sayth the Lorde God of hostes: for thy daye shall come, euen the tyme of thy visitation.

And the proude shall stomble and fall and no man shall helpe him vp. I wyll burne vp his cityes with fyer, and it shall consume all that is rounde about him.

Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: The F childen of Israel and Juda suffer violence together. All they that haue them in capti-uitie, kept them fast, and wyl not let thē go, but their auenger and redemer is mighty, whose name is the Lorde of hoostes: he shall mainteyne their cause, he shall make the lāde shake, and iudge them that dwell therin, one the Chaldees, sayth the Lorde, vpon them that dwell in Babilon, vpon their princes, and vpon their wyse men. The swearde vpō their sothsayers, as for those, they shall be-re, so that it shalbe stollē awaye. A drought vpon their waters, so that they shalbe dried vp. For the lande worshippeth ymages, and delyteth in straunge wonderfull thinges.

Therfore shall wylde beastes, lamia & catte of mountaynes, and estryches dwell therin, for there shall neuer man dwell there, nether shall eny man haue his habitation there for euermore. Like as God destroyed * Sodom * Gen.xix.c and Gomorre, with the cityes that laye ther aboute, sayth the Lorde. So shall no man dwell there also, nether shall eny man haue there his habitatyon. * Beholde, there shall * Jere.l.b.

bonde of men, and many kynges shall stan-de vp from the endes of the earthe. They beare bowes and bucklers, cruell are they and vnmercyfull.

Their voyce roareth like the raging see, G they ryde vpon horsses, and come weapened to fyght agaynst the, O Babylon. A foone as the king of Babilon heareth tell of them, his handes shall waxe feable. Sorowe and heuynes shall come vpon him, as a woman trauelynge with childe. Beholde, * lyke as * Jere.xlix.c the lyon cōmeth vp from the pleasaunt me-dowes of Jordane vnto the grene pastures of Ethan, so wyll I dryue them forth, and make them runne agaynst her. But whom shall I chose out: & ordeyne to soch a thynge?

* Job.xli.d. For who is lyke me, or who will stryue wᵗ me? or what shepherd maye stande agaynst me? Therfore, heare the cõcell that ỹ Lord hath geuen vpon Babilon, and the deuyce ỹ he hath takẽ vpon the land of the Chaldees: The least among the people shall teare them in peces, and loke what pleasaũt thing they haue: they shall laye it waste. The noyse at the wynnynge of Babylon shall moue the earth, and the crye shalbe heard amonge the Gentiles:

Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon hath deuoured & destroyed me, he hath made me an empty vessell. He swalowed me vp lyke a dragon, and fylled his bely with my delycates: he hath cast me oute, he hath taken my substaunce awaye, and the thinge that was left me hath he caried vnto Babylon, sayeth the daughter that dwelleth in Syon: yee, & my bloude also vnto the Caldees, sayeth Jerusalem. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyll defende thy cause, and auenge E the: I wyll drincke vp her see, and drye vp her water sprynges.

* esay.xiii.c * Babylon shall become an heye of stones a dwellinge place for dragons, a fearfulnes and wondrynge, because no man dwelleth there. O, how was it ☞ Sesach wonne! O, how was the glory of the whole lãde taken! how happeneth it, that Babilon is so wondred at among the heathen! * Lyke as Babilon hath beaten downe & slayne many out of Israel, so shall there fall many, and be slayne in all her kyngdome. Ye that haue escaped ỹ sword, haste you, stãde not styll, remembre the Lorde a farre of, and thynche vpon Jerusalem, for we were ashamed to heare the blasphemyes: our faces were couered with shame, because the straunge aleauntes came into the Sanctuary of the Lorde. Wherfore, beholde (sayeth the Lord) the tyme commeth, that I wyll viset ỹ ymages of Babylon, and thorowe the whole lãd they shall mourne and fall. * Though Ba- * Jer.xlix.d bylon clymed vp into heauen, and kepte her power an hye: yet shal I sende her destroyers sayeth the Lorde.

A pyteous cry shalbe heard from Babilon, and a greate misery from the land of the Caldees, when the Lorde destroyeth them, and when he dryueth out the hye stomack & proude boastynge, wherwith they haue bene as furious as ỹ waues of greate water floudes, and made greate crakes with their worDes. For the destroyers shall come vpon her (euen vpon Babylon) which shall take their worthyes, and breake their bowes: for God is disposed to auenge hym selfe vpon them, and sufficiently to recompence them. Yee, (sayeth the Lorde.) I wyll make theyr princes, theyr wyse men, theyr cheke rulers, and all their worthyes, droncke: so that they shall slepe an euerlastynge slepe, and neuer wake. Thus sayeth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde of hoostes.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde of hoG stes. The thycke wall of Babylõ shalbe broken, and her hye gates shalbe brent vp. And the thynge that the Gentyles and the people haue wrought with greate trauayle and labour, shall come to naught and be consumed in the fyre.

This is the charge ỹ Jeremy gaue vnto Saraiah the sonne of Neriah, the sonne of Maasiah, when he went towarde Babylon with Zedekiah the kyng of Juda, in ỹ fourth yeare of hys raygne. Nowe thys Saraiah was a peaceable prynce. Jeremy wrote in a booke all the misery that shulde come vpon Babylon, yee, and all these sermons that be wrytten agaynst Babylon, and gaue Saraiah thys charge. When thou commest vnto Babilon, se that thou reade all these worDes, and saye. O Lorde, thou art determined to rote out thys place, so that nether people ner catell shall dwell there eny more, but to lye waste for euer: and when thou hast redde out the booke, bynde a stone to it, and cast it in the myddest of Euphrates, and saye, Euen thus shall Babylon syncke, & be thrust downe with the burthen of trouble, that I wyll bryngе vpon her: so that she shall neuer come vp agayne. Thus farre are the preachynges of Jeremy.

¶ The.lii. Chapter.

¶ He repeteth the takynge of zedekiah. Jerusalem is taken of the Chaldees, zedekiahs sonnes are killed before hys face, and hys eyes put oute. The cytie is burned. The temple is spoyled and robbed. They that were lefte in Jerusalem are caryed to Babylon. kynge Jehoachyn is brought forth of prison, & fed lyke a kyng.

IZedekiah was * one and. xx. yeare olde, when he was made kyng, and he raygned eleuen yeare in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Hamutall, Jeremyes daughter of Lybna. He lyued wyckedly before the Lorde euen as Jehoachin dyd. For ỹ Lorde was angry at Jerusalem and Juda, so longe tyll he had cast them out of hys presence. And zedekiah fell * Je. xxxix. a. frō the kynge of Babilō. * But in the nynth xxxix. xxxvi. a. yeare of hys raygne, In the tenth moneth, ỹ tenth daye of the moneth it happened, that Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon with all hys hoost came before Jerusalem, and besieged it, and made them bulwarckes rounde aboute it. And thus the siegynge of the cytie endured vnto the eleuenth yeare of kyng zedekiah.

B * iiii. Regū. xxv. a. Jere. xxxviii. b. xxxix. a. * And in the fourth moneth, the. ix. daye of the moneth, there was so great honger in the cytie: that there were nomore vytayles for the people of the lande. So all the souldiers brake awaye, and fled oute of the cytie by nyght thorowe the waye of the porte betwene the two walles by the kynges garden. Nowe the Chaldees had compassed the cytie rounde aboute, yet wēt these men their waye towarde the wyldernes.

And so the Chaldees followed vpon them, and toke zedekiah the kynge in the felde of Jericho, when his hoost was runne frō hym: So they caryed the kyng awaye prysoner to Reblath, vnto the kynge of Babylon in the * Jer. xxxix. b lande of Hemath, * where he gaue iudgemēt vpon hym.

The kynge of Babylon also caused zedekiahs sonnes to be slayne before his face, yee C and put all the prynces of Juda to death at Reblath. Moreouer, he put out the eyes of zedekiah, caused him to be bounde with two cheynes, to be carted vnto Babylon: and let hym lye in prison, tyll he dyed.

Nowe the tenth daye of the fyfth moneth in ỹ nynth yeare of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon, Nabusaradan the chefe captayne and the kynge of Babylons seruaūtes came vnto Jerusalem, and brent vp the house of the Lorde. He brent vp also the kynges palace, all ỹ houses and all the gorgeous buyldynges in Jerusalem. And the whole hoost of the Chaldees that were with the chefe captayne, brake downe all the walles of Jerusalem rounde aboute.

As for the poore people and soch folke as yet was left in the cytie: which also were fallen to the kynge of Babylon, yee, and what people as yet remayned: Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne caried thē awaye prysoners. But the poore people of the coūtre, dyd Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne leaue in the lande, to occuppye the vyneardes and feldes. The Chaldees also brake the brasen pyllers that were in the house of the Lorde, yee, the seate and the brasen lauer that was in ỹ house of the Lorde: and caryed all the metall of them vnto Babylon. They toke awaye also the Cauldrons, shouels, flesshehokes, sprynklers, spones, and all the brasen vessell that was occupyed in the seruyce: with the basens, colepannes, sprynklers, pottes, candelsticckes, spones, and cuppes: wherof some were of golde, and some of syluer.

The chefe captaine toke also the two pil- E lers, the lauer, the twelue brasen bullockes that stode vnder the seate * which kyng Sa- * iij. Reg. vii. lomon made in the house of the Lorde: and all the vessell conteyned so moch metall, that it myght not be weyed. For euery piller was eyghtene cubytes hye: and ỹ rope that went aboute it, was twelue cubytes, & foure fyngers thycke and rounde. Nowe vpō the rope were brasen knoppes, ād euery knoppe was fyue cubytes hye: and vpon the knoppes were whopes, and pomgranates rounde about of cleane brasse.

After thys maner were both the pylers fashyoned w̄ the pōgranates, wherof there were an hundred and. xcvi. which hanged F vpon the whoopes rounde about. The chefe captaine also toke Sariah the hie preste, and Sophoniah that was chefe nexte hym, and the thre kepers of the treasury. He toke oute of the cytie a chāberlayne which was a captayne of the souldyers, and seuen men that were the kynges seruauntes, which were founde in the cytie: and Sopher a captayne that vsed to muster the men of warre, with thyrtescore men of the countre that were taken in the cytie. These Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne toke, and caried them to the kynge of Babylon vnto Reblath: and the kyng of Babylon caused them to be put to death at Reblath in the lande of Hemath. And thus Juda was ledde awaye captiue, oute of hys awne lande. This is the summe of the people, G whō Nabuchodonosor ledde awaye captiue.

In the seuenth yeare of hys raygne, he caried awaye of the Jewes, thre thousand and thre and twenty. In the. xviii. yeare Nabuchodonosor chodonosor caryed awaye from Jerusalem eyght hundreth thirty and two personnes. In the. xxiii. yeare of Nabuchodonosor Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne, toke awaye seuen hundreth fourty and fyue Jewes prysoners. The whole summe of all the prysoners, is foure thousande and syxe hundreth.

In the. xxxvii. yeare after that Jehoachin the kynge of Juda was caryed awaye in the xxv. daye of the. xii. moneth, Euilmerodach kynge of Babylon (the same yeare that he reygned) gaue Jehoachin the kyng of Juda hys pardon, and let hym out of prison, and spake louyngly to him. And sett his trone aboue the trones of the other kynges ỹ were with hym in Babylon. He chaunged also the clothes of his prison, yee, and he dyd eate w̄ hym all his lyfe longe. And he had a continuall lyuyng geuen him of the kynge of Babylon, euery daye a certayne thynge alowed him all the dayes of hys lyfe, vntyll he dyed.

¶ The lamentacyons of Jeremy.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

¶ It happened after Israel was brought into captiuite, and Jerusalem destroyed, that Jeremy the prophete sate weppynge, and sorowfully bewayed Jerusalem and lyghynge and howlynge with an heuy and wofull herte, sayde.

A * iiii. Regum. xxiii. d. xxiv. a. ALas, howe sytteth the cytie so desolate, ỹ somtyme was full of people! Howe is she become lyke a wedowe, * which was ỹ lady of all nacyons! Howe is she brought vnder trybute, & that ruled all landes. She wepeth sore in ỹ nyght so that the teares runne downe her chekes: for amonge all her louers, there is none that Iob. vi. b. geueth her eny comforte: * ye her nexte frendes trāsgresse agenst her, and are become her enemyes. Juda is taken prysoner, because she was dekyled: and for seruynge so many straūge goddes, she dwelleth nowe amonge the Heythen. She fyndeth no rest, all they that persecuted her, toke her, in strayte places B wher she coulde not escape. The streates of Sion mourne, because no man cōmeth no more to the solēpne feastes. All her gates are desolat, her prestes make lamētacīō, her maydēs are carefull: & she her selfe is in great heuynesse. Her enemies haue bene rulers ouer her, and her enemyes haue prospered: because the Lorde hath chastened her for her greate wyckednes: * her chyldren are ledde awaye * Jere. xlv. c. captiue before theyr enemye. All the bewtie of the daughter of Sion is awaye, her princes are become lyke hertes that fynde no pasture. They are dryuē awaye before theyr C enemie, so that they haue nomore power.

Nowe doth Jerusalem remembre the tyme of her misery and disobedience, yee, the ioye and pleasure that she hath had in tymes past seynge her people is brought downe thorow the power of theyr enemye, and there is no man for to helpe her: her enemyes stande lokynge at her, and laugh her Sabbath dayes to scorne. Jerusalem hath synned euer, more and more, therfore is she come in decaye. All they that had her in honoure despyse her: for they haue sene her fylthynes. Yee, she syghyth, and is ashamed of her selfe.

☞ Her skyrtes are defyled, she remem- ☞ bred not what wolde folowe: therfore is her fall so wonderfull, and there is no man to cōforte her. O Lorde, consydre my trouble, for D myne enemye hath the vpperhande. The enemye hath put hys hāde to all the precious thynges that she had, yee, euē before her eyes came the Heathen in and out of the Sāctuary: * whom thou (neuertheles) hast forbyd- * Deutero. xxiij. c. den to come within thy congregacyon.

Consydre, O Lorde, and se, how vyle I am become. Haue ye no regarde O all ye that go fore by, be holde and se, yf there be eny sorow lyke vnto myne, wherwith the Lorde hath troubled me, in the daye of his fearfull wrath. * From aboue hath he sent * Ezech. xxxii. d downe a fyre into my bones and it burneth them cruellye: he hath layed a net for my fete E and throwen me wyde open: he hath made me desolate, so that I must euer be mournynge. The yocke of my transgressyon is come at the last, with hys hāde hath he taken it vp, and put it aboute my neck. My strength is gone: the Lorde hath delyuered me into those handes, wherout I cannot quyte my selfe. The Lorde hath destroyed all the myghtye men, that were in me he hath proclaymed a feaste, to slaughter all my best men. The Lorde hath troden downe the daughter of Juda, lyke as it were in a wyne presse. * Therfore do I wepe, and myne * Jere. xiiii. c. My chyldren are dryuen awaye, for why? the enemy hath gotten the ouerhande.

Syon casteth out her handes, and there is no man

no man to cõforte her. The Lorde hath laied the enemyes rounde aboute Jacob, and Jerusalem is become abominacyon in the myddest of them. * The Lorde is ryghtuous, for I haue prouoked his countenaunce vnto anger. O take hede all ye people, and cõsyder my heuinesse. My maydens and my yonge men are led awaye into captiuyte. * Dani. ix.a.

I called for my louers (but they begyled me) for my prestes and councellers, but they perysshed: euen whyle they sought for meate, to saue theyr lyues. * Consyder (O Lord) howe I am troubled, my wombe is disquyeted, my hert turneth about in me, and I am full of heuines because I rebelled stoburnlie. The swearde hurteth me without, & within I am like vnto death. They heare my mournyng, but there is none that wyll cõforte me. All myne enemies haue hearde of my trouble and are glad therof, because thou hast done it and thou hast brought forthy̆ tyme which thy̆ calledest, whẽ they also shalbe like vnto me. G * Treno. ij.c

Frõ the shall come all their aduersitie thou shalt plucke thẽ awaye euẽ as thou hast pluked me, because of all my wikednes. For my sorowe is very greate, & my hert is heuy.

The. ii. Chapter.

ALas, * howe hath the Lorde darckened the daughter of Syon so sore in hys wrath: As for y̆ honour of Israel he hath cast it downe frõ heauen vnto y̆ erth. Howe happeneth it, that he remembred not his awne * fote stole when he was angre? * Treu.iiii.b

*i. Para. xxix.a. Psal. xcviii.a

The Lorde hath cast downe all the habitatyons of Jacob without any fauour: all y̆ stronge places of the daughter Juda hath he broken in hys wrath, and throwen them downe to the grounde: her kyngdome and her princes hath he suspended. In the wrath of hys indignacyon he hath brokẽ alle the horne of Israel: he hath wtdrawen his right hande from the enemye: yee, a flame of fyre is kyndled in Jacob, and hath consumed vp all rounde aboute. He hath bent his bowe lyke an enemye, he hath fastened hys right hãd as an aduersary: and euery thynge that was pleasaunt to se, he hath smytten it downe. In the habernacle of the daughter of Syon he hath poured out his wrath lyke a fyre. The Lorde is become lyke as it were an enemie, he hath deuoured Israel and all hys palaces: yee, all his strong holdes hath he destroyed, and fylled y̆ daughter of Juda with moche sorowe and heuynesse. B

* Jere. bli.b. * Her tabernacle (which was lyke a garden of pleasure) hath he destroyed: her hye solẽpne feastes hath he put downe. The Lorde hath brought it so to passe, that the hie solẽpne feastes and Sabbathes in Sion, are cleane forgotten. In his heuy displeasure hath he made the kynge and prestes to be despised.

The Lorde hath forsaken hys awne auter, and hath abhorred his awne Sanctuarye, and hath geuen the walles of theyr towres into the handes of the enemye. Theyr enemies made a noise in the house of y̆ Lord, as it had bene in a solempne feaste daye. C

The Lorde thought to breake downe the walles of the daughter of Sion, he spred out his lyne, and drewe not in hys hande, tyll he had destroyed them: Therfore mourne the turrettes and the broken walles together.

Her gates are soncke downe to the grõde, her barres are broken and smytten in sonder, * her kynge & princes are caried awaye to the Gentyls. They haue nether lawe ner prophetes, ner yet eny vysyon frõ the Lorde. * Jere.iii.

The senatours of the daughter Sion syt vpon the grõde in silẽce: they haue strawed asshes vpon theyr heades, and gyrded them selues with sack cloth. The maydens of Jerusalẽ hange downe theyr heades to the grounde. Myne eyes begyne to fayle me thorowe wepyng, * my body is disquyeted, my liuer is poured vpõ the earth, for y̆ greate hurte of my people, seynge the chyldren and babes dyd swowne in the stretes of the cyte. D * Jerem.l.

Euen when they spake to theyr mothers: where is meate and dryncke: for whyle they so sayde, they fell downe in the stretes of the cytie, lyke as they had bene wouñded, and some dyed in theyr mothers bosome.

What shall I saye of the, O thou daughter Jerusalem, to whom shall I lycken the? To whom shall I cõpare the. O y̆ daughter Sion, to comforte the withall? Thy hurte is lyke a mayne see, who maye heale the? E

* Thy prophetes haue loked out vayne and folishe thinges for the, they haue not shewed the of thy wickednes, to kepe the frõ captiuite: but haue ouerladen the, and thorow falshed scatred the a brode. * Jerem.xxiij. Ezech.b. Osee.vi. Zach.xiij.

All they that go by the, clappe their handes at the: hissynge and waggynge their heades vpõ the daughter Jerusalem, and saye: is this the cyte that men call so fayre: wherin the whole lande reioyseth? All thyne enemies gape vpon y̆: whysperinge and bytinge their teth, saying: let vs deuoure, for the tyme that we loked for, is come: we haue founde and sene it. F Jere.xx.b.

The Lorde hath fulfylled the thinge, that he was purposed to do: and perfourmed that he had deuised longe a go: he hath destroyed, and not spared. He hath caused thine aduersarye triumphe ouer the, and set vp the horne of thyne enemie. * Let thyne herte crye vnto the Lorde, O thou cytie of the daughter Sion: let thy teares runne downne lyke a ryuer daye and nyght, rest not, and let not the aple of thyne eye leaue of. Stande vp and make thy praier in the fyrst watch of the nyght, poure oute thyne hert lyke water before the Lorde. lyft vp thyne handes, for the lyues * Deute. iiii.c. and.xxx. Jerem.xlii.

G lyues of thy yonge chyldren, that dye of honger in the stretes. Beholde, O Lorde, and consyder, why hast thou gathered me vp so cleane? Shall y̆ wemen then eate their awne frute, euen chyldrẽ of a spanne longe? Shall the prestes and prophetes be slayne thus in the Sanctuary of the Lorde? Yonge and olde lye behynde the stretes vpon the grounde, my maydens and yonge men are slayne with the swearde: whom thou in the daye of thy wrathfull indignacion hast put to death: yee, euen thou hast put them to death, & not spared them. My neyghboures that are rounde about me, hast thou called, as it were to a feast daye: so y̆ in the daye of the Lordes wrath none escaped, nether was eny left behynde. Those that I haue brought & norysshed, hath myne enemy destroyed.

The. iii. Chapter.

I Am the mã, that (thorowe the rodd of hys wrath) haue experience of misery. He droue me forth, and led me: yee, into darckenesse, but not into lyght. Agaynst me onely he turneth hys hande, and layeth it euer vpon me. A

My flesshe and my skynne hath he made olde, & my bones hath he bruised. He hath buylded rounde aboute me, and closed me in with gall and trauayle. He hath sett me in darckenes, as they that be deed for euer.

He hath so hedged me in, that I cannot get out, and hath layed heuy lynckes vpon me. Though I crye and call pyteously, yet heareth he not my prayer. He hath stopped vp my wayes with foure squared stones, and made my pathes croked. B

He layeth wayte for me lyke a Beare, and as a lyon in a hole. He hath marred my wayes, and brokẽ me in peces, he hath layed me waste altogether. He hath bent hys bowe, & made me as it were a marck to shut at: The arowes of his quyuer hath he shot euen into myne reynes. * I am laughed to scorne of all my people, they make songes vpon me all the dayc longe. He hath fylled me with bitternes, and geuen me wormwod to dryncke. He hath smitten my teth in peces with stones, and rolled me in y̆ dust. C * Jere.xx.b.

He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget all good thynges. I thought in my selfe: I am vndone, there is no hope for me in the Lorde. O remembre yet my misery and my trouble, the wormwod and the gall.

Yee, thou shalt remembre them, for my soule melteth awaye in me. Whyle I consyder these thynges in my herte, I get a hope agayne. Namely, it is of the Lordes mercyes that we are not, vtterly consumed. For truelye hys pytefull compassion hath not ceassed. Newe mercyes shall the Lorde shewe vpon the, erly, yee in the daye spryngc, (O Lorde) greate is thy faythfulnesse.

* The Lorde is my portyon, sayeth my soule, therfore wyll I hope in him. O how good is the Lorde vnto them, that put theyr trust in hym, and to y̆ soule that seketh after hym! The good man with stylnes and pacience tarieth, for the health of the Lorde. * Psal.cxlvi.a

O howe good is it for a man, to take the yock vpon him from his youth vp. He syteth alone, he holdeth hym still, and dwelleth quyetly by him selfe. He laieth hys face vpon the earth, yt (percase) there happen to be eny hope. He offereth his cheke to the smyter, he wyll be content with reproues. D

For the Lorde wyll not forsake for euer, * but though he punyshe hym: yet according to the multitude of his mercyes, he receaueth to grace agayne: For he doth not plage, & cast out the children of men from his herte. * i.Reg.ii.b.

To treade all the preseners of the earth vnder his fete. To moue the iudgement of man before the most hyghest.

To condempne a man in hys cause. The Lorde hath not pleasure in soche thynges.

What is he then that saieth: there shulde somthinge be done without the Lordes commaundement. Out of the mouth of the moost hyghest goeth not euell and good? E

Wherfore then murmureth the lyuynge man? let him murmure at his awne synne.

* Let vs loke, well vpõ our awne wayes and remembre oure selues, and turne againe to the Lorde. Let vs lyfte vp oure hertes with oure handes vnto the Lorde that is in heauen. We haue bene dissemblers, and haue offended, wylt thou therfore not be intreated? Thou hast couered vs in thy wrath, and persecuted vs, thou hast slayne vs without any fauoure. * Thou hast hyd thy selfe in a cloude, y̆ oure prayer shuld not go thorowe. Thou hast made vs out castes, and to be despysed amonge the people. All oure enemyes gape vpon vs. * Job.xxvii.d Psal. xviij. a. * Ezech. xxvb.

Feare and pytt is come vpon vs, yee, deceyte and destruccion. * Whole ryuers of water gushe oute of myne eyes, for the greate hurte of my people. * Treno.i.d.

Myne eyes runne, and cannot ceasse, for there is no rest. O Lorde, when wylt thou loke downe from heauen, and consyder?

Myne eye breaketh my herte: because of all the daughters of my cyte. Myne enemies hunted me out sharpely, lyke a byrde, yee, and that without a cause. They haue put downe my life into a pytt, & they haue cast stones vpon me. They poured water vpon my heade, then thought I: nowe am I vndone. I called vpon thy name, O Lord, out of y̆ depe pyt. Thou hast herde my voyce: and hast not turned awaye thyne eares fro my syghtynge and cryenge. Thou hast enclyned thy selfe vnto me, when I called vpon the, and haste sayde: feare not. Thou G (O Lorde) hast mayntened the cause of my soule, and hast redemed my lyfe. O Lorde ꝑ hast sene my blasphemers, take thou my cause vpon the. Thou hast well consydred howe they go aboute to do me harme, & that all their coũcels are agaynst me. Thou hast heard their despytefull wordes (O Lorde) yee, and all theyr ymaginacyõs agaynst me.

The lyppes of myne enemyes, and theyr devices that they take agaynst me, all ꝑ daye lõge. Thou seyst also theyr syttinge downe, and theyr rysinge vp: they make theyr songes of nothynge but of me. Rewarde them (O Lorde) accordynge to the workes of theyr handes, Geue them an obstinate herte: euen thy curse. Persecute them (O Lorde) with thyne indignacyon, and rote thẽ out from vnder the heauen.

¶ The. iij. Chapter.

A Howe is the golde become so dymme? Howe is the goodly coloure of it so sore chaunged? and the stones of the Sanctuary thus scatred in the corner of euery strete. The chyldren of Syon that were alwaye in honoure, and clothed with the most precyous golde: howe are they nowe become lyke the erthen vessels which be made with the potters handes? The dragons geue theyr yong ones suck with bare brestes: but the daughter of my people is cruell, and dwelleth in the wylderne[illegible] lyke the Estriches. The tonges of the suckynge chyldren, cleue to the roffe of theyr mouthes for very thyrst. The yonge children aske bread, but there is no mã that geueth it thẽ. # ¶ The booke of the Prophete Ezechiel.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

¶ The tyme wherin Ezechiel prophecyed, and in what place. Hys ordynynge and office. The vysyon of the foure beastes. The vysyon of the wheles. The vysyon of the throne, and of the ymage aboue the throne.

A IT chaunced in ꝑ. xxx. yeare, the fyfthe daye of the fourth monethe, that I was among the presoners by the ryuer of Cobar: ☞ where the heauens opened, and I sawe a vysyon of God. Nowe the fyfth daye of the moneth made out the fyfth yeare of Kynge Joachins captyuite. At the same tyme came the worde of the Lorde vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi the prieste, in Ezec. i. a. the lande of the Chaldees by the water of Cobar, * where ✤ the hande of the Lorde came ✤ vpon hym.

And I loked, and beholde a stormy wynde
B came out of the North with a greate cloude full of fyre, which with hys glystre lyghtened all rounde aboute. And in the middest of the fyre it was all cleare lyke the face of an angell, and as it were the lykenes of foure beastes, and thys was there lykenesse.
They were fashyoned lyke a man: sauynge, that euery one had foure faces and foure wynges.

Theyr legges were streight, but theyr fete were lyke bullockes fete, and they glystered, as it had bene fayre scoured metall.
Under theyr wynges, vpon all the foure cozners they had mens handes. Theyr faces and theyr wynges were towarde the foure cozners: yet were the wynges so, that one euer touched another. When they went, they turned them not aboute: but eche one went streight forwarde.

Furthermore thys was the symilitude C of theyr faces. * Vpõ the ryght syde of these * Ezech. x. d.
foure, theyr faces were lyke the face of a mã, and the face of a lyon: But vpon the lefte syde, they had the face of an ore, and the face of an Aegle. Theyr faces also and theyr wynges were spred out aboue: so that two wynges of one touched euer two wynges of another, & with the other they couered their body. Euery one when it wente, it wente streyght forwarde. Where as the spyrete led them, thyther they wente, * and turned not * Ezec. x. c aboute in theyr goynge.

The fashyon and countenaunce of the D beastes was lyke hoote coales of fyre, euen as though burning cressettes had bene amõg the beastes: ✤ (thys was the vysyon) and the fyre ✤ gaue a glistre, and out of the fyre there went lyghtenynge. When the beastes wente forwarde & backward, one wold haue thought it had lyghtened. Now when I had well cõsydered the beastes, I sawe a worcke of wheles vpon the earth with foure faces also nye vnto the beastes.

The fashyon and worcke of the wheles was lyke ꝑ see. The foure wheles were ioyned and made (to loke vpon) as it had bene one whele in another. When one wente forwarde, they wente all foure, and turned thẽ not about in theyr goinges. They were large greate and horrible to loke vpõ. Theyr backes were full of eyes rounde about them all
E foure. When the beastes wente, the wheles wente also with them. And when the beastes lyfte them selues vp from the earth, the wheles were lyft vp also. Whithersoeuer ꝑ spyrete wente, thyther went they also, and the wheles were lyfte vp, and folowed them: for the spyrete of lyfe was in the wheles. When the beastes wente forth, stode styll, or lyft them selues from the earth, then the wheles also wente, stode styll, and were lyfte vp, for the breth of lyfe was in the wheles.

Aboue, ouer the heades of the beastes there was a fyrmament, which was fashyoned as it had bene of the most pure Christall, and that was spred oute aboue vpon theyr heades: vnder the same fyrmament were theyr wynges layed abrode, one towarde another and two wynges couered ỹ body of euery beaste. And when they wente forth, I hearde the noyse of theyr wynges, lyke ỹ noyse of greate waters, as it had bene the voyce of the greate God, and a rushynge together as it were of an hoost of men. And when they stode styll, they let downe theyr wynges. Nowe when they stode styll, and had letten downe theyr wynges, it thondred in the fyrmamẽt that was aboue theyr heades. Aboue the fyrmament that was ouer theyr heades, there was the fashyõ of a seate, as it had bene
G made of Saphyr. Upon the seate there satt
* Eze.viii.a. one lyke a mã. * I behelde hym, and he was lyke an angell, as it had bene all of fyre with in from his loynes vpwarde.

And beneth, when I loked vpon him vnder ỹ loynes, me thought he was lyke a shynynge fyre, that geueth lyght on euery syde. Yee, the shyne and glystre that lyghtened rounde about, was lyke a raynbowe, which in a raynye daye appeareth in the cloudes. Euẽ so was the similytude, wherin the glorye of the Lorde appeared. When I sawe it, I fell vpon my face, and herkened vnto the voyce of hym that spake:

And after thou hast accomplished ỹ dayes of the syege: burne the thyrde parte therof in the fyre in the myddest of the cytie, & cut the other thyrde parte in peces wyth a knyfe. * As for ỹ thirde parte ỹ remayneth, cast it in the wynde and I wyll drawe out ỹ swerde after them.

Yet afterwarde, take a lytle of the same, and bynde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a curtesy of it, and cast it in the myddest of the fyre: & burne it in the fyre. Out of the same fyre shall there goo a flame, vpon the whole B house of Israel. Moreouer, thus sayde the Lorde God: Thys same is Jerusalem. Wherfore, as truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lord God) seyng thou hast defyled my Sānctuary, with all maner of abhominacyons & vāll thy shamefull offentes: For thys cause wyll I also destroye the. Myne eye shall not ouerse the, nether wyll I spare the.

* One thyrde parte wythin the, shall dye of the pestilence & of honger: Another thirde parte shall be slayne downe rounde aboute the with ỹ swerde: The other thyrde parte ỹ remayneth, wyll I scatre abroade towarde all the wyndes, and drawe out the swearde after them. ## ¶ The. vj. Chapter.

¶ He sheweth that the people shalbe plaged for the synne of Idolatrye. He prophecieth the repentaunce of the remnaunt of the people, and their deliuerance. The destruccyon of the frowarde is prophecyed.

ANd the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face to the * mountaynes of Israel, that thou mayest prophecie vnto them, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lorde God, O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus hath the Lorde God spoken to the mountaynes, hylles, valleys and dales. * Eze.xxxvi.

Beholde I, I my selfe I saye, wyll bringe a swearde ouer you, and destroye youre hye places: I wyll cast downe youre aulters, and breake downe youre ymages. Youre slayne men wyll I laye before youre goddes, and the deed carcases of the chyldren of Israel wyll I cast before their Idoles, youre bones wyll I destroye rounde aboute aboute youre aulters, and dwellyng places.

B The cyties shalbe desolate, ỹ hyllchapels layed waste: youre aulters destroyed, & broken: youre goddes cast downe, and taken awaye, your tēples layde euē wyth the grounde, your awne worckes cleane roted oute.

Youre slayne men shall lye amonge you, that ye maye learne to knowe, howe that I am the Lorde. And they that escape of you, shall thincke vpon me amōge the Heathen, where they shalbe in captiuitye.

As for that whorysh and vnfaythfull herte of theyrs, wherewyth they runne awaye fro me, I wyll breake it: yee, & put oute those eyes of theirs, that commytte fornicacyon with theyr Idols.

C Then shall they be ashamed, and displeased wyth their selues, for the wyckednesses and abhominacyons, which they haue done: and shall learne to knowe, ỹ I am the Lorde howe that it is not in vayne, that I ỹ Lorde spake, to bringe soch misery vpon them.

The Lord sayde moreouer vnto me: Smyte thyne handes together, and stampe wyth thy fete, and saye: Wo worth all the abhominacions and wyckednesses of the house of Israel, for because of them, they shall perysh wīth the swearde, wyth honger and with pestilēce. Who so is farre of, shall dye of the pestilēce: he that is nye at hande, shall perysh wyth the swearde: and the other that remayne & ỹ are beseged, shall dye of honger.

D Thus wyll I satisfye my wrothfull displeasure vpon them. ## ¶ The. vij. Chapter.

¶ The ende of all the lande of Israel shall sodenly come. The cause of the destruccyō therof. The prophete is cōmaunded to shewe the summe of the euelles that are at hande.

A The worde of the Lorde came vnto me on thys maner: The I call, O ỹ sonne of man. Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto the lāde of Israel: The ende commeth, vpon the lande of Israel yee, verely the ende cōmeth vpon all the foure corners of ỹ lāde. Then shall ye knowe, that I am the Lorde. * Eze.bij.b. and.iij.c.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, one misery and plage shall come after another. ỹ ende is here. The ende (I saye) is come, it watched for ỹ, beholde it is come all ready, thy destructyon is erlye come agaynst the, ỹ dwellest in the lande.

The tyme is at hande, the daye of sedicīō is harde by, & the crye shall not be as the soundinge agayne of the mountaynes. Therfore, I wyll shortly pour out my sore displeasure ouer the, and fulfyll my wrath vpō the. I wyll iudge the after thy wayes, and recōpence the all thy abhominacyons. B

* Myne eye shall not ouerse the, nether wyll I spare the: but rewarde the after thy wayes, & thyne abhominations shall be punished in the middes of the, to learne you for to knowe, howe that I am the Lord ỹ smyteth. Beholde, the daye is here the daye is come, ỹ houre is rūne out, the rodde florisheth, pryde wareth grene, malicyous violence is growne vp, and the vngodly ware to a staf. For this cause wyll I make them and it to be abhorred. Moreouer, I wyll geue it into the handes of the straungers to be spoyled: and to the wycked, for to be robbed, and they shall destroye it. Make a cheyne, for the lande is whole defyled wyth vnryghteous iudgement of innocent blonde, and the cytie is full of violent oppressyon. Wherfore, I wyll bringe the most cruell tyrauntes from amonge the heathen, to take theyr houses in possessyon. I wyll make the pompe of the proude to ceasse, and ther sanctuary shall be defyled. ¶An appearaunce of the symilitude of God. Ezechiel is brought vnto Jerusalē in the spyrite. The Lorde sheweth the Prophete the Idolatries of the houle of Israel, and chaseth of the Priestes.

I IT happened, that in the syxte yeare & syxth daye of the syxte moneth, I sat in my house, and the Lordes of the councell of Juda with me: and the hande of the Lorde God fell euen there vpon me. Seest thou the greate abhominacyons that the house of Israel cōmytte in thys place? to drye me frō my sanctuary? But turne the aboute, and thou shalt se yet greater abhominacyons. And wyth that brought he me to the courte gate: & when I loked, beholde, there was an hole in ỹ wall. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of mā, dygge thorow the wall. And whē I dygged thorow the wall, beholde, there was a dore. And he sayde vnto me: Go thy waye in, and loke what wycked abhominacyons they do here. So I wente in, and sawe: and beholde, there were all maner ymages of wormes & beastes, all Idoles and abhominacyons of the house of Israel paynted euery one rounde about the wall. ¶The destruccyon of Idolatres, and the conuersacion of the ryghtwes. They that shalbe saued are marcked. They that are vnmarcked are slayne. A complaynte of the Prophet for the destruccyon of the people.

A HE cryed also with a loude voyce in myne eares, sayinge: Come, here ye rulers of the cyte, euery man wyth his weapened hande to the slaughter. Then came there syxe mē out of the strete of the vpper porte towarde the north, and euery man a weapē in hys hāde to ỹ slaughter. There was one amōgest them, that had on hym a lynen rayment, & a wryters pynckhorne by hys syde.

B These wente in, & stode besyde the brasen aulter: for the glory of the Lorde was gone awaye from the *Cherub whych was vpon him, & was come downe to the threshold of the house, and he called the man that had the lynen rayment vpon hym, and the wryters pynckhorne by his syde, and the Lorde sayde vnto hym: Go thy waye thorowe the cyte of Jerusalem, and ☞ set a marcke vpon the foreheades of them, that mourne and are sory for all the abhominacions, that be done therin. And to the other, he sayde that I myght heare: *Go ye after hym thorowe the cytie, slaye, ouerse none, spare none: kyll and destroye both olde men and ponge, maydens, chyldren, and wyues.

Then they begāne at the elders, whych were in the temple, for he had sayde vnto thē: When ye haue defyled the temple, and fylled the courte wyth the slayne, thē go your waye forth. So they wente out, & slewe downe thorowe the citie. Nowe when they had done the slaughter, & I yet escaped: I fell downe vpon my face, & cryed, sayinge: D Lorde, wylt thou then destroye all ỹ residue of Israel, in thy sore displeasure, that thou hast poured vpon Jerusalem? Then sayde he vnto me: The wyckednesse of the house of Israel and Juda is very greate: so ỹ the lande is full of blonde, and the citie full of vnfaithfulnesse: For they saye: *Tush the Lorde regardeth not the earth, he seeth vs not. ¶Of the man that toke whote burnynge coles oute of the myddle of the wheles & of the Cherubyns, in token of the burnynge of Jerusalem. A rehersall of the visyon of the wheles, of the beastes, and of the Cherubyns.

AND as I loked, beholde, in the firmament that was aboue the Cherubins there appeared the symilitude of a stole of Saphyr vpon them: * Then sayde he that sat therin, to him that had the lynē rayment vpon hym: Crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the Cherubyns, and take thyne hāde full of hoate coales out from betwene the Cherubyns, and cast them ouer ỹ cytie. *Eze.ix.c.

Now the Cherubyns stode vpō the ryght syde of the house, when the man wente in, & the cloude fylled the inner courte. * But the glory of the Lorde remoued from the Cherubyns, and came vpon the threshold of the house: so that the temple was full of cloudes, and the courte was full of the shyne of the Lordes glory. Yee, and the sounde of the Cherubyns wynges was hearde into the fore courte, lyke as it had bene the voyce of the almyghtye God, when he speaketh. Nowe when he had byden the man that was clothed in lynen, to go and take the hoate coales from the myddest of the wheles, whych were vnder the Cherubyns: he wēte & stode besyde the wheles. Then ỹ one Cherub reached forth hys hande from vnder the Cherubyns, vnto the fyre that was betwene the Cherubyns, and toke therof, and gaue it vnto hym that had on the lynen rayment in his hande: which toke it, & went out. And vnder the wynges of the Cherubyns, there appeared the lyckenesse of a mans hāde: I sawe also foure wheles besyde the Cherubyns, so ỹ by euery cherub there stode a whele. And the wheles were (to loke vpon) after the fashion of the precyous stone of Tharsys: yet (vnto the syght) they were all .iiij. of one fashyon, as yf one whele had bene in another.

When they wente forth, they wente all foure together, not turnynge aboute in their goinge: But where the fyrst wente, thyther wente they after also, so that they turned not aboute in their goyng. Their whole bodyes, their backes, theyr handes & wynges, yee, and the wheles also, were all full of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. And I hearde hym call the wheles. *Euery one of thē had foure faces: so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the seconde of a man, the thyrde of a lyon, the fourth of an Aegle, & they were lyfted vp aboue. This is the beast, that I sawe at the water of Cobar. Nowe whē the Cherubyns wente, the wheles wente wyth them, and when the Cherubyns shoke theyr wynges to lyft thē selues vpward, ỹ wheles remayned not behynde, but were wyth them also. *Jere.xxiii.a The Lorde (saye they) hath spoken it, whan in very dede the Lorde hath not sent them. Vayne vysyons haue ye sene, and spoke false prophecyes, whē ye saye: the Lorde hath spoken it, where as I neuer sayde it.

Therfore, thus sayeth the Lord God: Be- B cause youre wordes be vayne, and ye se̅ke out lyes: Beholde, I wyll vpon you, sayeth the Lorde. Myne hādes shall come vpon the prophetes that loke out vayne thinges, and preach lyes: they shall not be in the councell of my people, ner wytten in the boke of the house of Israel, nether shall they come in the lande of Israel: ye maye knowe, howe ye I am the Lorde God. And that for by cause: they haue dysceaued my people, * and tolde the of peace, where no peace was. One setteth vp a wall, and they dawbe it with lowse claye. Therfore tell them whych dawbe it * Mat.vij.c. with vntempered morter, that it shall fall * For there shall come a great shower of rayne greate hayle stones shall fall vpon it, & a sore storme of wynde shall breake it, so shall the wall come downe. Shall it not then be sayde vnto you: where is nowe the morter, that ye dawbed it wyth all? Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: I will breake out in my wrothfull displeasure wyth a stormy wynde, so that in myne anger there shall come a myghtye shower of rayne, & hayle stones in my wrath, to destroye withall.

¶ As for the wall, that ye haue dawbed w vntempered morter, I will breake it downe, make it euen wyth the grounde: so ye the foundacyon therof shall remoue, and it shall fall, yee, and ye youre selues shall perych in the myddest therof: to learne you for to knowe, that I am the Lorde. Thus will I perfourme my wrath vpon thys wall, and vpō them that haue dawbed it wyth vntempered morter, and then will I saye vnto you: The wall is gone, and the dawbers are awaye. These are the prophetes of Israel, which prophecye vnto the cytie of Jerusalē, and loke out visiōs of peace for them, where as no peace is, sayeth the Lorde God. Wherfore (O thou sonne of mā) sett thy face agaynst the daughters of thy people, which prophecye out of their awne hertes: and speake thou prophecye agaynst thē, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto you, that sowe pylowes vnder all arme holes, ād bolsters vnder the heades both of yōge and olde, to catch soules wyth all. * For whan ye haue gotten the soules of my people in youre captiuite, ye promyse them lyfe, and dishonoure me to my people, for an hādfull of barly, and for a pece of bread: whan ye kyll the soules of thē, that dye not, and promes lyfe to them, that lyue not: Thus ye dissemble w my people, that beleueth youre lyes.

Wherfore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I will also vpon the pylowes, wher wyth ye catch the soules in flyenge: thē will I take from youre armes, and let the soules go, that ye catch in flyēge. Youre bolsters also will I teare in peces, and delyuer my people out of youre hād: so that they shall come nomoze in youre handes to be spoyled, and ye shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. Seing that with youre lyes ye discomforte the iuste of the ryghteous, whom I haue not discōforted: Agayne: For so moch * as ye corage the hande of the wycked, so that he maye not turne from his wicked waye, and lyue: therfore shall ye sppe out nomoze vanitie, ner prophecye youre awne gessynges: for I will delyuer my people out of youre hande, that ye maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde. *Ose.iiij.b

¶ The.xiiij. Chapter.

¶ The Lorde denyeth hys worde to the people for their synnes sake. The disprysers of the worde doth the Lorde sometyme deceaue by false prophetes. A comforte of the that fledde vnto Babylon.

There resorted * vnto me certayne of the elders of Israel, & sat downe by me. Then came the worde of ý Lorde vnto me, sayēg: Thou sonne of mā, these men beare their vnclennes in theyr hertes, and go purpolly vpon the stomblynge blocke of theyr awne wyckednelle: shulde I then answer at their requeste? Therfore speake vnto them, & saye: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Euery man of the house of Israel that beareth hys vncleane Idols in hys herte, purposynge to stomble in hys awne wyckednelle, and commeth to a prophet, to enquere eny thinge at me by him: vnto that mā will I the Lorde myselfe geue answere, accordynge to the multitude of hys Idols: that the house of Israel maye be snared in their awne hertes, because they be clene gone fro me, for their abhominaciōs sakes. * Ezec.xx.a

Wherfore, tell the house of Israel: thus sayeth the Lorde God: * Be conuerted, forsake youre Idols, and turne youre wyues from youre fylthynesse, and turne youre faces frō all youre abhominacions. For euery man, (whether he be of the house of Israel or a straunger, ý sogeourneth in Israel) whych departeth fro me, and carryeth Idols in hys herte, purposynge to go styll stōblyng in his awne wyckednesse, and commeth to a Prophet, for to aske councell at me thorow hym: vnto that man will I the Lorde geue answere, by myne awne selfe. I will set my face agaynst that man, and will make hym to be an example for other, yee, and a comen byworde: and will rote him out of my people, that he may know, how that I am the Lorde. * and yf that Prophete be disceaued, whē he telleth hym a worde: then I the Lorde my selfe haue disceaued that Prophet, and will stretch forth myne hande vpon hym, to rote hym out of my people of Israel: and they both shalbe punyshed for theyr wyckednes. Accordynge to the synne of hym that asketh, shall the synne of the Prophete be: that the house of Israel be led nomoze fro me thorowe erroure, and be no moze defyled in their wyckednesse: but that they maye be my people, & I theyr God, sayeth the Lorde God. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, * Ezec.xx.a *Ier.xxvij. Iob.xij.c me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, when the lande synneth agaynst me, & goeth forth in wyckednelle: I will stretch out myne hande vpon it, * & destroye all the prouisyō of their bred, and sende derth vpon them, to destroye man & beest in the lande. * And though Noe, Daniel & Job, these thre men were amonge them, yet shall they in their ryghtuousnelle delyuer but their awne soules, sayeth ý Lorde God. If I bringe noysome beastes into the lande, to waste it vp, & it be so desolate, that no man may go therin for beastes: yf these thre men also were in the lande, as truly as I lyue (sayeth ý Lorde God) they shall saue nether sonnes ner daughters, but be only delyuered them selues: and as for the lāde, it shall be waste. * Ezec.xiv.d. and.xlvij.b. * Ier.xv.a.

¶ Or yf I bringe a swearde into the lāde, & charge it to go thorowe the lāde: so that I slaye downe man & beast in it, & yf these thre men were therin: As truly as I lyue (sayeth ý Lorde God) they shall delyuer nether sonnes ner daughters, but only be saued them selues. If I sende a pestilence into the lande, & poure out my sore indignacyon vpon it in bloude, so that I rote out of it both man and beast. And yf Noe, Daniel & Job were therin: as truly as I lyue (sayeth ý Lorde God) they shall delyuer nether sonnes ner daughters, but saue their awne soules in their righ tuousnes. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Moch moze when I sende my * foure troublous plages vpon Jerusalem: the swearde honger, perlous beastes & pestylence, to destroye mā and beast out of it. Beholde ther shall be a remnaūt saued therin, which shall bringe forth their sonnes and daughters. Beholde, they shall come forth vnto you, and ye shall se their waye, and what they take in hande, and ye shall be cōforted, as touchinge all the plages that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem. They shall comforte you, when ye se their waye and worckes: and ye shall knowe, howe that it is not without a cause, that I haue done so agaynst Jerusalē, as I dyd, sayeth the Lorde God. *Jer.xxvij.b

¶ The.xv. Chapter.

¶ As the vnprofytable wood of ý vyne tree is cast in to the fyre, so sayeth he that Jerusalem shalbe brent.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man: What cōmeth of the vyne amonge all other trees? & of the wylde vyne stock amonge all other tymbre of the groaue? Do men take wood of it, to make any worcke with all? Or maye there a nayle be made of it, to hange any thynge vpon? Beholde, it is cast in ý fyre to be brent, the fyre consumeth both the endes of it, the myddest is brent to asshes. Is it mete then for any worcke? No, Seynge then, that it was mete for no worcke, beinge whole: moch lesse maye there any thinge be made of it, when the fyre hath cōsumed & brent it. And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Lyke as I cast ý vyne into ý fyre for to be brēt, as other trees of ý wodd: Euen so will I do with them that dwell in Jerusalem, & set my face agaynst them: they shall go out from the fyre, & yet the fyre shall cōsume them. * Thē shall ye knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I set my face agaynst thē, & make ý lande waste: because they haue so sore offended, sayeth the Lorde God. * Eze.xv.c. and.xvij.b.

¶ The.xvj. Chapter.

¶ The prophete entendynge to speake of the abhominacyons of Jerusalem: doth first shewe the dernesses of God towarde it. Jerusalem is reproued of vnkyndenes, for her fornicacyon with Idoles. He sufficyeth the wickednes of other people in cōparyson of the synnes of Jerusalem. The cause of the abhominacyons in to whych the Sodomytes fell. Mercy is promysed to the repentaunt.

Agayne, the worde of ý Lorde spake vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of mā, shewe the cyte of Jerusalem their abhominaciōs, & saye: thus sayeth ý Lord God vnto Jerusalem: Thy progeny and kynred came out of the lāde of Canaan * thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Cethyte, thus was the maner of thy byrth. In ý daye of thy byrth when thou wast borne, ý stringe of thy nauell was not cut of: ý wast not bathed in water to make the clene: Thou wast nether rubbed w salt, ner swadled in cloutes: No mā regarded ý so moch, as to do any of these thinges for the, or to shewe the soch fauoure, but ý wast vtterly cast out vpō ý felde, yee, despised wast ý in ý daye of thy birth. * Eze.xvi.a. * Eze.xvi.a.

Then came I by the, and sawe ý troden downe in thyne awne bloude, & sayde vnto the: Lyue, although thou be defyled in thyne awne bloude, ye euen I (I tell the) sayde vnto ý lyue, although thou be defyled in thyne awne bloude. * So I plāted ý, as ý blossome of the felde: ý art growē vp, & waxē greate: ý hast gotten a maruelous pleasaūt beutie, thy breastes are come vp, thy hearre is goodly growē, where as ý wast naked & bare afore. * Esa. b.a. Jere.xij.c.

Nowe whan I wēte by the, & loked vpō the: beholde, thy tyme was come, yee, euē the tyme to wowe the. Then spred I my clothes ouer ý, to couer thy dishonestye: yee, I made an othe vnto the, * & maried my selfe with the (sayeth the Lord God) and so thou becamest myne awne. Then washed I the with water, and poureged thy bloude from the. I anoynted the with oyle, I gaue the chaunge of raymentes, I made the shues of Taxus lether: I gyrded ý about with white sylke I clothed the with kerchefes, I decked the w costly apparell, I put rynges vpon thy fyngers: a chayne aboute thy necke, spanges vpon thy fore heade, eare rynges vpō thyne eares, and set a beutifull crowne vpō thyne head. Thus wast thou decked with syluer & golde, & thy raymēt was of fyne white sylke * Jere.iij.a. Ose.xij.c.

Thou dyddest eate nothinge but symnels, honny & oyle: maruelous goodly wast thou & beutyfull, yee euen a very Quene wast þ In so moch, that thy beuty was spoken of amõge the heythen, for thou wast excellent in my beuty, which I put vpõ the sayeth the Lorde God. But thou hast put confidence in thyne awne beuty, & played the harlot, whẽ thou haddest gotten the a name. Thou hast cõmitted whordome, with all that wente by the, & hast fulfylled their desyres: yee, thou hast taken thy garmẽtes of diuerse colours, & deckte thyne aulters therwith, where vpõ þ myghtest fulfyll thyne whordome, * & of soch a fashyõ, as neuer was done, ner shalbe. * The goodly ornamentes & Jewels which I gaue the of myne awne golde and syluer, hast thou taken, and made the mẽs ymages therof, & commytted whordome withall.

¶ Thy garmentes of diuerse colonres hast thou taken, and deckte them therwith: myne oyle & incense hast thou set before them. My meate which I gaue the, as symnels, oyle & hony: (to fede the withall) that hast thou sett before them, for a swete sauoure. And thys came also to passe, sayeth the Lorde God: * Thou hast take thine awne sõnes & daughters, whõ thou haddest begotten vnto me: and these hast thou offred vp vnto thẽ, to be their meate. Is this but a small whordome of thine (thinckest thou) that thou slayest my chyldren, and geuest them ouer, to be brent vnto thẽ? And yet in all thy abhominacyons and whordome, thou hast not remẽbred the dayes of thy youth, howe naked & bare thou wast at þ tyme, and troden downe in thyne awne blonde. After all these thy wyckednesses (wo wo vnto the, sayeth the Lorde) * (thou hast buylded thy stewes and brodel houses in euery place) Thou hast buylte hye places, yee at þ head of euery strete hast þ buylded þ an aulter. Thou hast made thy beuty to be abhorred, þ hast layed out thy legges to euery one that came by, & multiplied thyne whordome. * Thou hast commytted fornicacyon wt the Egyptyans thy neyghbours, which had moch flesche: and thus hast þ encreased thine whordome, to anger me.

Beholde, I dyd stretch out myne hande ouer the, & dyd * minishe thy stoare of fode, and delyuer the ouer in to the wylles of the Philistines thine enemyes, which are ashamed of thy abhominable waye. * Thou hast played the whore also with the Assyriãs, because thou wast insatiable: Yee, thou hast (I saye with thẽ played the harlot, & yett haddest thou not ynough. Thus hast þ forthermore cõmytted thy fornicacyon frõ the lande of Canaã vnto the Caldees, & yet thy lust not satisfyed. Howe obstinate is thine herte (sayeth the Lorde God) seynge thou doest all these workes of an erraũt whore: buyldinge thy stewes at þ head of euery strete, & thy brodell houses in all places? Thou hast not bene as an other whore, þ holdeth scorne of a small rewarde, but a wife þ breaketh wedlocke, & taketh other in stede of her husbõde. Gyftes are geuen to all other whores, but þ geuest rewardes vnto all thy louers: & offrest them gyftes, to come vnto þ out of all places, & to cõmytte fornicacyõ wt the. Jt is come to passe wt the in thy whordomes contrary to the vse of other women: yee, there hath no soch fornicacyon bene cõmitted after þ, seynge that thou profrest gyftes vnto other, and no rewarde is geuen the: this is a cõtrary thinge.

Therfore, heare the worde of the Lorde, O thou harlot: thus sayeth the Lorde God: For so moch as þ hast sett forth thy youthe to whordome, & discouered thy shame, thorowe thy whordome wt all thy louers, and with all þ Jdols of thy abhominacyons in þ blonde of thy chyldren, * whõ thou hast geue them: Beholde therfore, I will gather together all thy louers, vnto whõ thou hast made thy selfe comẽ: yee, and all them whõ thou fauourest, & euery one þ thou hatest: I wyll (I saye) gather thẽ together rounde aboute the, and * will discouer thy shame before thẽ, that they maye se all thy fylthynes.

* Wherefore, I will iudge þ as a breaker of wedlocke and a murtherer, and recõpence þ thyne awne blonde in wrath and gelousy. I will geue þ ouer in to their power, þ shall breake downe thy stues, & destroye thy brodell houses: they shall stripe þ out of thy clothes, all thy fayre & beutyfull Jewels shall they take frõ þ, & so let the syt naked & bare: * yee: they shall bringe þ comẽ people vpõ þ, which shall stone the, & slaye þ downe wt their swerdes. * They shall burne vp thy houses, & punysh the in þ sight of many wemen. Thus will I make thy whordome to cease, so þ thou shalt geue out no more rewardes.

Shulde I make my wrath to be still, take my gelously from the, be cõtent, & no more to be displeased? seynge thou remẽbrest not the dayes of thy youth, but hast prouoked me to wrath in all these thinges? Beholde therfore I wyll bringe thyne awne wayes vpõ thyne heade, sayeth the Lorde God: howe be it, I neuer dyd vnto the, accordynge to thy wickednesse & all thy abhominacyons. Beholde, all they that vse comen prouerbes, shall vse thys prouerbe also agaynst the: soche a mother, soch a daughter.

Thou art euẽ thy mothers awne daughter, þ hath cast of hyr housbande & hyr chyldren: Yee, thou art the syster of thy systers, which forsoke their husbandes & their chyldrẽ. * Youre mother is a Cethyte, and youre father an Amorite. Thyne eldest syster is Samaria, she and her daughters that dwell vpon thy left hande.

But thy yongest syster that dwelleth on thy ryght hande, is Sodoma & her daughters. Yet hast thou not walked after their wayes, ner done after their abhominacyõs: but þ stodest a lytell & very small tyme, and in all thy wayes þ hast bene more corrupte then they. As truly as I lyue, sayeth þ Lorde God: Sodoma thy syster wt her daughters, hath not done so euell, as þ and thy daughters. Beholde, * the synnes of thy syster Sodoma were these: Pryde, fulnesse of meate, aboundaunce & Jdilnesse: these thynges had she & hir daughters. Besydes þ, they reached not their hande to the poore and nedy, but were proude, and dyd abhominable thynges before me: therfore I toke them awaye, as pleased me. Nether hath Samaria done half of thy synnes, * yee, thou hast exceaded them in wickednesse: In so moch that in comparyson of all þ abhominaciõs which þ hast done, þ hast made thy systers good wemen. Therfore thou (which dydest condẽpne thy syster) beare thyne awne shame, for thyne awne offences, that þ hast committed, more abhominable then they dyd, which in dead ar more ryghteous, then þ art, be thou (I seye) ashamed, and beare thy shamfull rebuke, seynge þ thou hast proued thy systers in cõparyson of the ryght wyse.

As for their captiuyte, namely þ captiuyte of Sodoma, & her daughters: þ captiuyte of Samaria & her daughters: I will bringe thẽ agayne, so will I also bringe agayne thy captiuyte amõge them: þ þ mayest take thyne awne cõfusion vpon þ, & be ashamed of all þ thou hast done, & to cõforte them. Thus thy systers (namely) Sodoma & her daughters: Samaria and her daughters, wt thy selfe, & thy daughters, shalbe brought agayne to youre olde estate. When þ wast in thy pryde, & before thy wickednesse came to lyght: thou woldest not heare speake of thy syster Sodoma, vntyll the tyme þ the Syrians with all their townes, & the Philistines with all that lye rounde aboute thẽ, brought the to shame & confusyon: þ þ myghtest beare thyne awne fylthynes & abhominacyõ, sayeth þ Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lorde God: I shulde (by right) deale with the, as thou hast done. Thou hast despysed the oth, and broken the couenaunte. Neuertheles, I will remẽbre þ couenaũt that I made with the in thy youth in so moch that it shalbe an euerlastinge couenaunt: so that þ also remẽbre thy wayes, & be ashamed of them: then shalt thou receaue of me thy elder & yonger systers, whõ I wyll make thy daughters, and that besyde thy couenaũt. * And so will I renue my couenaũt with þ, that thou mayest knowe that I am the Lorde: that thou mayest thincke vpon it, be ashamed, and excuse thyne awne confusyõ nomore: when I haue forgeuen the, all that thou hast done, sayeth the Lorde God.

¶ The .xvij. Chapter.

¶ The parable of the two Aegles.

The worde of þ Lorde came vnto me, saynge: Thou sonne of mã: put forth * a darcke speakynge and a parable, vnto þ house of Jsrael, & saye: Thus sayeth þ Lorde God: There came a great * Aegle wt great wynges, yee, with a myghtye longe bodye, & full of fethers of dyuerse colours, vpõ the mount of Libanus, & toke the hyest braunch frõ a Cedre tree, & brake of þ toppe of his twygge, & caryed it into þ lãde of Canaan, & set it in a cyte of marchaũtes. He toke also of the seade of the lande, & planted it in a frutefull grounde, he brought it vnto greate waters, and set it as a wyllowe tree therby. Then dyd it growe, and was a greate vynestocke, but lowe by the grounde whose braunches turned in to it selfe, and þ rotes of it, were fastened vnder it, thus there came of it a vyne, and it brought forth blossomes, & spred out braũches. But there was another Aegle, a great one, which had greate wynges & many fethers: and beholde, þ rotes of thys vyne had an hũger after him, & spred out his braunches towarde him, þ he myght water her with the orchyerd þ he had planted. Neuertheles, it was planted vpõ a good groũd besyde greate waters: so þ (by reason) it shulde haue brought out braũches & frute, & haue bene a goodly vyne. Speake þ therfore, thus sayeth þ Lorde God: Shall this vyne prospere? shall not his rotes be plucked oute, his frute be broken of, his grene braunches, wither & fade awaye? ye, without ether strõge arme or many people, shall it be plucked vp by þ rotes. Beholde, it was plãted: shall it prospere therfore? Shal it not be dryed vp & withered, yee, euen in þ shutinge out of his blossomes, as soone as þ east wide bloweth?

Moreouer, þ worde of þ Lorde came vnto me saynge: Speake to þ frowarde housholde: knowe ye not, what these thynges do signifye? Tell thẽ: Beholde, * þ kynge of Babylon came to Jerusalẽ, & toke þ kynge and his princes, and ledde them to Babylon.

He toke of the kynges sede, and made a couenaunt wyth hym, and toke an othe of him: The Princes of the lande toke he with him also, that the laude myght be holden in subiectyon, and not to rebelle, but kepe the couenaunt, and fulfyll it. But he fell from him, & sent his Embassytours into Egypte þ he myght haue horses and moche people. Shulde that prospere? Shulde he be kepte safe, that doth soch thynges? Or shulde he escape, that breaketh hys couenaunt? As truly as I lyue sayeth the Lorde God: He shall dye at Babylon, in the place where the kynge dwelleth, þ made hym kynge: whose othe he hath despysed, and whose couenaunt he hath broken. Nether shall Pharao with his greate hoost & multitude of people, mayntayne him in the warre: when they cast vp dyches, and set vp bulwarkes to destroye moch people. For seynge he hath despysed þ othe, and broken the couenaũt (where as he yet gaue his hande ther vpon) and done all these thynges, he shall not escape.

¶ Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God. As truly as I lyue, I wyll bringe myne othe þ he hath despysed, and my couenaunt that he hath broken, vpon his awne head. * I wyll cast my net aboute him, and catch him in my yarne. To Babylon will I carie him, there will I punyshe him, because of the greate offence that he made me. As for those that he from him out of the hoost, they shalbe slayne with the swearde. The residue shalbe scatred towarde all the wyndes: and ye shall knowe, that I the Lorde haue spoken it.

* Eze.xvii.b. xlv.xxxii.a.

G Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll also take a braunche from an hye Cedre tree, and will set it, & take þ vppermost twygge, þ yet is but tendre, and plante it vpõ an hye hyll: Namely, vpon the hye hyll of Syon will I plante it: þ it maye bringe forth twygges, & geue frute, and be a greate Cedre tree: so þ all maner of foules maye bylde in it, & make their nestes vnder þ shadow of his braũches.

And all the trees of the felde shall knowe that I the Lorde haue brought downe þ hye tree, and set the lowe tree vp: þ I haue dryed vp the grene tree, and made the drye tree to florysche: Euen I the Lorde that spake it, haue also brought it to passe.

¶ The.xviij.Chapter.

¶ She sheweth that euery man shall beare his awne synne. To him that amendeth, is saluacyon promysed. Deeth is prophecied to the ryghtwesse, which turneth backe from the ryghtwaye.

A THe worde of þ Lorde came vnto me, on this maner: what meane ye by thys comen prouerbe, þ ye vse in the lãde of * Iere.xxxi.c Israel, saynge: * The fathers haue eaten soure grapes, & þ childrẽs tethe are set on edge: As truly as I lyue, sayeth þ Lorde God, ye shall vse this by worde nomore in Israell.

B Beholde * all soules are myne. Lyke as þ * Isa.xxxix.a father is myne, so is þ sonne myne also. The * Leu.xviij.a soule þ synneth, shall dye. * If a man be godly, & do the thinge þ is equall and ryght, he eateth not vpõ the hylles: he lyfteth not hys eyes vp to þ foule Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neyghbours wyfe: he medleth nõ menstruous woman: he greueth no body: he geueth his detter his pledge agayne, he taketh none other mans good by violence: * he * Ezech.xvij.c parteth his mete vnto the hongrye: he clotheth the naked: ‡ he lendeth nothynge vpõ vsury he taketh nothynge ouer: he withdraweth his hande from doynge wronge: he dealeth saythfully betwixte man & man: & walketh ‡ Psal.xv.a. in my cõmaundementes, and kepeth my lawes, & perfourmeth thẽ faythfully: * This * Roma.x.a. is a ryghtuous man, he shall surely lyue sayeth the Lorde God.

If he nowe gett a sonne, that is a murtherer, a shedder of blonde: yf he do one of these thynges * (though he do not all) he eateth * Ezech.xxxiij.b. vpon the hylles: he defyleth his neyghbours wyfe: he greueth the poore & nedy: he robbeth & spoyleth: he geueth not þ detter his pledge againe, he lyfteth vp his eyes vnto Idols, & medleth with abhominable thinges: he lendeth vpon vsury, & taketh more ouer. Shall this man lyue? he shall not lyue. Seynge he hath done all these abhominacyons, he shall dye, his blonde shalbe vpon him.

Nowe yf this man get a sonne also, that C seeth all hys fathers synnes, which he hath done: and feareth, nether doth soch lyke: Namely, he eateth not vpon the mountaynes: he lyfteth not his eyes vp to þ Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neyghbours wyfe: he vexeth no mã: he kepeth no mans pledge: he nether spoyleth, ner robbeth eny mã: he dealeth his meate w̃ the hõgrye: he clotheth þ naked: he oppresseth not the poore: he receaueth no vsury, ner any thynge ouer: he kepeth my lawes, & walcketh in my commaundementes. This mã shall not dye in his fathers synne, but shall lyue without fayle. As for his father: because he oppressed & spoyled hys brother, and dyd wyckedly amonge his people: lo, he is deed in his awne synne. And yet saye ye: Wherfore then shulde not thys lõne beare his fathers synne? Therfore: because þ sonne hath done equytie & ryght, hath kepte all my cõmaundemẽtes, & done them: therfore shall he lyue in dede. The same soule that synneth, shall dye. * The sonne shall not beare the fathers offence, nether shall the father beare þ sonnes offence. The ryghteousnes of þ ryghtuous shall be vpõ him, & the wickednes of þ wicked shall be vpõ him selfe also. * But yf þ vngodly wyll turne awaye frõ all his synnes þ he hath done, and kepe all my cõmaundementes, and do the thinge þ is equall and ryght: doutles he shall lyue, and not dye. As for all his synnes þ he dyd before, they shall not be thought vpõ: but in his righteousnes þ he hath done, he shall lyue. * For haue I eny pleasure in þ death of a synner, sayeth þ Lorde God, but rather þ he cõuerte, and lyue?

And yet sayeth the house of Israel: Tush, the waye of the Lorde is not equall. Are my wayes vnryght? O ye house of Israel: Are not youre wayes rather vnequall? ## ¶ The.xix.Chapter.

¶ The captyuitye of Jeohahaz & of Jehoachin is signified by the lyons whelpes, & by the lyon. He setteth out þ prosperitye of the cytie of Jerusalem that is past, & the myserye therof that is present.

A BUt thou sonne of man mourne þ for the princes of Israel, & saye. Wherfore laye thy mother þ lyonesse amonge the lyõs, & norysshed her yonge ones amonge the lyons whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp, and it became a lyõ, it learned to spoyle, and to deuoure folke. The heathen herde of him, and toke him in their nettes, and brought him in chaynes vnto the lande of Egypte.

B Nowe when the damme sawe, that all her hope and cõforte was awaye, she toke another of her whelpes, and made a lyon of him: which wente amonge the lyons, & became a fearce lyon: learned to spoyle and to deuoure folcke: he destroyed their palaces, and made their cyties waste. In so moch that þ whole lande & euery thynge therin, were vtterly desolate, thorow þ very voyce of his roaringe.

Then came the heathen together on euery syde out of all countrees agaynst hym, layed their nettes for hym, and toke hym in their pytte. * So they bounde him with chaynes, and brought him to the kyng of Babylon: which put him in prison, that his voyce shulde nomore be herde vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy mother, she is lyke C a vyne in thy blonde, planted by the water syde: her frutes and braunches are growẽ out of many waters, her stalkes were so stroge, * Eze.xvij.a. xxxij.xxx.b. Eze.xxvij.a. xxviij.xij.a.

that mẽ myght haue made staues therof for officers: she grewe so hye in her stalkes.

So whan men sawe that she exceaded the heygth & multitude of her braũches, she was roted out in displeasure, and cast downe to þ grounde. The East winde dryed vp her frute, her stronge stalkes were brokẽ of, withered and brent in the fyre. But nowe she is plãted in the wyldernesse, in a drye & thurstye grounde. And there is a fyre gone out of her stalckes, which hath brent vp her braũches and her frute: so that she hath no mo stroge stalckes, to be staues for officers. This is a pyteous and mysserable thynge.

¶ The.xx.Chapter.

¶ The Lorde denyeth that he wyll answere them when they praye, for the offence of vnkyndenes whych he here obiecteth. He promyseth that his people shall returne from captiuitie. By the wood that shulde be brent is signified the burnynge of Jerusalem.

A IN the.vij.yeare the.x.daye of the v.moneth, * it happened, þ certayne of þ elders of Israel came vnto me, for to aske counsell at the Lorde, & sat them downe by me. * Eze.xliij.a.

Then came þ worde of þ Lorde vnto me on thys maner: Thou sonne of mã: speake vnto the elders of Israel, & saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lord God: Are ye come hyther to aske eny thynge at me? As truly as I lyue (sayeth þ Lorde) I will geue you no answere. Wilt þ not reproue thẽ (thou sonne of mã) wilt thou not reproue them? Shewe them þ abhominacyons of their fore fathers, & tell B them. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * In the * Ezo.xx.b. daye when I chose Israel, and lyft vp myne hande vpon the sede of the house of Jacob, & shewed my selfe vnto them in the lande of Egypte: Yee, when I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them, and sayde: I am the Lorde youre God, euen in the daye þ I lyfte vp myne hãde ouer thẽ, to bringe them out of the lande of Egypte, into a lande þ I had prouyded for thẽ, which floweth with mylcke & hony, & is a pleasaunt lande amonge all other. Then * Deu.vij.a. sayde I vnto them: * Cast awaye euery mã the abhominacions that he hath before him, and defyle not youre selues with the Idoles of Egypte, for I am the Lorde youre God.

But they rebelled agaynst me, and wolde not folowe me: to cast awaye euery man the abhominacyons of hys eyes, and to forsake the Idoles of Egypte. Then I made me to poure myne indignacyon ouer them, & to satisfye my wrath vpon them: yee, euen in the myddest of þ lande of Egypte. But I wolde not doit, for my names sake: that it shulde not be vnhalowed before þ heathen, amõge whom they dwelt, & amonge whõ I shewed my selfe vnto them, þ I wolde bringe them out of the lande of Egypte. Now whẽ I had caryed them out of the lande of Egypte, and brought them into the wyldernesse: I gaue them them my commaundemẽtes, & shewed them my lawes, * which whoso kepeth shall lyue in them: I gaue them also my holy dayes, to be a token betwixte me & them, & therby to knowe, that I am the Lozde, which halowe them. And yet the house of Israel rebelled agaynst me in ỹ wyldernesse, they wolde not walcke in my commaundemẽtes, they haue cast away my lawes (which whoso kepeth shulde lyue in them) and my Sabboth dayes haue they greatly vnhalowed.

* Then I made me to poure out myne indignacyon vpon thẽ, & to cõsume them in the wyldernesse. Yet I wolde not do it, for my names sake: lest it shulde be dishonoured before the Heathen, from the whych I had caryed them awaye. But I swore vnto them in the wyldernesse, that I wolde not bryng them in to the lande, which I gaue them: a lande that floweth with mylcke and hony, & is a pleasure of all landes: and that because they refused my lawes, and walcked not in my cõmaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabbathes, for their herte was gone after their ydoles. Neuertheless, myne eye spared them, so ỹ I wolde not vtterly slaye thẽ, and cõsume them in the wyldernes. Moreouer, I sayde vnto their sonnes in the wyldernesse: * walcke not in the statutes of youre fore fathers, kepe not their ordinaunces, and defyle not youre selues with their ydoles, for I am the Lozde youre God. But walcke in my statutes, kepe my lawes & do them, halowe my Sabbathes: * for they are a token betwixte me & you, ỹ ye maye knowe howe ỹ I am the Lozde your God. Notwythstandyng, their sonnes * rebelled agaynst me also: they walked not in my statutes they kepte not my lawes to fulfyll thẽ (which he ỹ doth shall lyue in them) nether halowed they my Sabboth dayes. Then I made me agayne to poure out my indignacion ouer them, & to satisfye my wrath vpõ thẽ in the wyldernesse. Neuertheless, I wythdrewe my hãde for my names sake, lest it shulde be vnhalowed amonge the Heathen, before whõ I had brought thẽ forth. I lyft vp myne hãde ouer thẽ also in the wyldernesse, ỹ I wolde scatre them amonge the Heathen, & strowe them amonge the nacyons, because they had not kepte my lawes, but cast asyde my cõmaundementes, vnhalowed my Sabbathes, and lyft vp their eyes to their fathers Idoles. Wherfore I gaue thẽ also cõmaundementes not good, & lawes thorowe the whych they shulde not lyue, & I vnhalowed thẽ in their awne giftes * (whẽ I appointed for my selfe all their fyrst borne) to make thẽ desolate: ỹ they myght knowe, howe ỹ I am the Lozde.

Therfore (O thou sonne of man, tell the house of Israel, thus sayeth the Lozde God) Besyde all thys, youre fore fathers haue yet blasphemed me more, and greatly offended agaynst me. For after I had brought them in to the lande, that I promysed to geue thẽ, when they sawe euery hye hyll & all ỹ thicke trees: they made there their offrynges, & prouoked me wyth their oblacyons, makynge swete sauoures there, and powred out their drinkoffrynges. Then I asked thẽ what is ỹ hyll altare ỹ ye go to it? And therfore is it called ỹ hye place vnto this daye. Wherfore, speake vnto ỹ house of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lozde God: ye are euen as vnclene as youre fore fathers & commytte whordome also with their abhominacyõs. In all youre ydoles, where vnto ye bryng your oblacyons, * and to whose honoure ye burne youre chyldren: ye, defyle youre selues, euen vnto thys daye: howe darre ye thẽ come, and aske any questyon at me? O ye housholde of Israel: As truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lozde God) ye get no answere of me: and as for the thynge that ye go aboute, it shall not come to passe, where as ye saye: we wyll be as the Heathen, & do as other people in the lande, wod and stone wyll we worshyppe.

As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lozd God, I my selfe wyll rule you wỉ a mighty hande, with a stretched out arme, & with indignacyon powred out ouer you: and wyll bryng you out of the nacyons and landes, wherin ye are scatred, and gather you together with a myghty hande, with a stretched out arme & wỉ indignacyon poured out vpon you: and wyll bryng you in to the wyldernesse of the people, & there I will reason with you face to face. Lyke as I punyshed youre fore fathers in the wildernesse, so will I punyshe you also, sayeth the Lozde God. I will bringe you vnder my iurisdiccyon, and vnder ỹ bonde of the couenannt. The forsakers also and the transgressours will I take from amonge you, & bringe them out of the lande of youre habitacyon: as for the lande of Israel, they shall not come in it: ỹ you maye knowe howe that I am the Lozde.

Go to nowe then (sayeth the Lozde God) ye house of Israel * Euery one of you folowe your ydols, and serue them seynge yerekuse to obeye me. And my holy name shall ye nomore vnhalowe with your offringes and Idoles. For vpon my holy hyll, euen vpõ the hye hill of Israel sayth ỹ Lozd God, shall all the house of Israel and all that is in the lãde, worshyppe me: * and in the same place will I fauoure thẽ, and there will I requyre your peaue offringes and the fyrstlynges of your oblacyons, with all youre holy thynges.

I will accepte youre swete sauoure, whẽ I bringe you from the nacyons, & gather you together out of the landes, wherin ye be scatred: that I maye be halowed in you before the Heathen, and that ye maye knowe, that I am the Lozde, whych haue brought you into the lãde of Israel: yee, into the same lande, that I swore to geue vnto youre fore fathers. There shall ye call to remembraũce your awne wayes & all your ymaginacyõs, wherin ye haue bene defyled: * and ye shall iudge youre selues worthy to be destroyed, for all youre wickednes, ỹ ye haue done. And ye shall knowe, ỹ I am ỹ Lozd: whẽ I entreate you after my name, not after youre wycked wayes, ner accordyge to youre corrupte workes: O ye house of Israel, sayeth ỹ Lozd.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lozde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of mã, set thy face towarde the south, & speake to the south wynde, & saye to the wod towarde the south: Heare the worde of the Lozde, thus sayeth the Lozde God: Beholde, I wyll kyndle a fyre in the, that shall consume the greene trees with the drye. No man shalbe able to quẽch hys flame, but all that loketh from the south to the nozth, shalbe brent therin: & all flesh shall se, that I the Lozde haue kyndled it, so that no man maye quench it. Then sayde I: O Lozd, they wyll saye of me: * Tush, they are but fables, that he telleth.

The .xxi. Chapter.

The threateneth the swerde, ỹ is to saye, destruccyon to the cytie of Jerusalem. He sheweth the fall of Kynge Zedekiah. He is commaũded to prophecye the destruccyon of the chyldren of Ammon. After ỹ slaughter of other, at the last the Lozd threateneth dreth vnto Nabuchodonosor hym selfe.

And the worde of ỹ Lozd came to me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face towarde Jerusalẽ, speake agaynst the Sanctuary, and prophecye agaynst the lande of Israel, saye to ỹ lãde of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lozde: Beholde, I wyll vpon the, & will drawe my swearde out of the sheath, & rote out of the both the ryghtuous & the wycked. Seynge then ỹ I will rote out of ỹ both the ryghtuous and wycked, therfore shall my swearde go out of his sheath against all flesh frõ ỹ nozth to ỹ south: ỹ all flesh maye knowe howe ỹ I the Lozd haue drawẽ my swearde out of ỹ sheath, & it shall not be put in againe

Mourne therfore (O thou sonne of man) ỹ thy loynes crack withall, ye mourne bitterly for thẽ i their presẽce. And yf they saye, wherfore mourneth thou? Then tell thẽ: for the tidynges that commeth, at the whych all hertes shall melt, all handes shalbe lefte downe, all stomackes shall faynte, & all knees shall waxe feble. Beholde, it cõmeth & shalbe fulfylled, sayeth the Lozde God.

Agayne, the worde of the Lozde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, prophecye, and speake. Thus sayeth the Lozd God: speake. The swearde, the swearde is sharpened & well scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, & scoured that it maye be bryght. Shall we then make myrthe? Agẽst ỹ * tribe of my sonne it is gone for the destroyinge all trees. He hath putt his swearde to the dyghtinge, ỹ wood holde maye be taken of it. This swearde is sharpened & dyght, that it maye be geuen in to the handc of the manslayer.

Crye (O thou sonne of man, & howle, for this swearde shall smyte my people, & all the rulers in Israel) my people shalbe fearede thorowe this swearde. Smite therfore thou vpõ thy thyghe, for it is gone forthe to make a tryall. And what a tryall shall this be, whẽ euẽ my scepter shall be reproued? Yt shall not be sayeth the Lozde God. Prophecy ỹ sonne of man, & smyte thyne hãdes together: make the swearde two edged, ye make it thre edged, that manslayers swearde, ỹ swearde of the greate slaughter, whych shall smyte thẽ, euen in their preuychambres: to make them abashed & faynt at the hertes, & in all gates to make some of them fall. I haue geuẽ that fearfull swerde. O howe bryght and sharpe is it, howe well dight & mete for the slaughter. Sett the some place alone, ether vpõ the ryght hande or on the lefte, whyther so euer thy face turneth. I wyll smyte my hãdes together also & satysfye my wrothfull indignacyon: Euen I the Lozde haue sayde it.

The worde of the Lozde came yet vnto me agayne sayinge. Thou sonne of mã, make ỹ two stretes, ỹ the swearde of the kynge of Babylon maye come. Both these stretes shall go out of one kynges lãde. And chose ỹ a place, at the heade of the strete chose out a corner. Make ỹ a strete, ỹ the swearde maye come towarde Rabath of the Ammonites, & to the stronge cytie of Jerusalẽ. For the kynge of Babylon shall stande in the turnynge of the waye, at the head of the two stretes: * to aske counsell at the sothe sayers, castynge the lottes wỉ his arowes, to aske counsell at the Idole, and to loke in the lyuer. But ỹ sothe sayinge shall poynte to ỹ ryght syde vpõ Jerusalem, ỹ he maye set men of warre, to smyte it wỉ a greate noyse, to crye out Alarũ, to sett batell rammes agaynst the gates, to graue vp dyches, & to make bulwarkes.

Neuertheles, as for the sothe sayinge, they shall holde it but for vanite. And esteame thẽ as those to whome they haue often sworne. Notwithstandynge he shall remembre their wyckednesse, so that by ryght they must be taken & wonne. Therfore sayeth the Lozde God. For so moch as ye youre selues shewe your offence, and haue opened youre wickednesse, so that in all youre workes men maye se your synnes: therfore ar ye come to remẽbrance, and ye shalbe taken by violence.

O thou shamefull wicked guyde of Israel whose daye is come: euen the tyme that wickednesse shall haue en ende. Thus sayeth the Lozde God: take awaye the garland, & put of the crowne, and so is it awaye: the humble is ble is exalted, and the proude brought lowe. Punysshe, punysshe, yee, punysshe thē will I, & destroye them: and that shall not be fulfylled vntyll he come, to whom the iudgement belongeth, & to whō I haue geuen it. And thou (O sonne of man) prophecy, & speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God to ỹ childrē of * Ammon, & to their blasphemy, speake thou: The swearde, ỹ sweard, is drawen forth all redy to the slaughter, & scoured to consume that it glystreth (because thou hast loked ỹ out vanyties, and prophecyed lyes) ỹ it maye come vpon thy necke, lyke as vpon the other vngodly, whych be slayne: whose daye came, whan their wyckednesse was full.

*Jere.xlix.c. Eze.xxi.a. Amos.i.c.

G

Shulde I put it vp agayne? Naye I wyll punysshe the, in ỹ lāde where thou wast norysshed & borne, and poure my indignacyō vpō the and wyll blowe vpon the in the fyre of my wrath, and delyuer ỹ vnto cruel people, which are lerned to destroye. Thou shalt fede the fyre and thy blonde shall be shed in ỹ lande, that thou mayest be put out of remēbraunce. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

¶ The.xxij. Chapter.

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynst Jerusalem for mans slaughter, & denying due honour vnto their fathers & mothers, & other wyckednesses. Of the wycked doctryne of the false prophetes & prestes, & of their vnsaciable couetousnes. The tyrannye of rulers. The wyckednes of the people.

MOreouer, the worde of ỹ Lorde came vnto me, & sayde: thou sonne of man, wylt thou not reproue thys bloudthurstye cyte? Shew them their abhominacyons, and tell them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: O thou cyte, that sheddest blonde in ỹ myddest of ỹ, that thy tyme maye come also: & makest the Idoles to defyle the wythall. Thou hast made thy selfe gylty, in ỹ blonde ỹ thou hast shed: and defyled the in the Idoles, which thou hast made. Thou hast caused thy dayes to drawe nye, & made the tyme of thy yeares to come. Therfore wyll I make the to be confounded amonde the heathen, & to be despysed in all the lādes, whether they be nye or farre from the: they shall laugh the to scorne, thou that hast gotten the so foule a name, & art full of myschefe. Beholde, the rulers of Israel haue brought euery man hys power, to shed blonde in the. * In the haue they despysed father & mother, in ỹ haue they oppressed the straunger, in the haue they vexed the wydowe and the fatherlesse. Thou hast despysed my Sanctuary, and vnhalowed my Sabbath. Murtherers are there in the, that shede blonde, & eate vpō the hylles, and in the they vse abhominacyon.

*Deu.b.c. & .xxby.c.

* In ỹ haue they discouered their fathers shame, in the haue they vexed wemē in their sicknesse. Euery man hath dealte shamefully with his neyghbours wyfe, & abhominably defyled hys daughter in lawe. In the hath euery mā forced his awne sister, euen his fathers daughter: yee, * gyftes haue bene receaued in the, to shede blonde. * Thou hast taken vsury and encreace, thou hast oppressed thy neyghbours by extorcyon, and forgotten me, sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, I haue smyten my handes vpon thy couetousnesse, that thou hast vsed, and vpon the blonde whych hath bene shed in the. Is thy herte able to endure it, or may thy hādes defende thē selues, in the tyme ỹ I shall bringe vpon the? Euen I the Lorde that speake it, wyll bringe it also to passe. * I wyll scatre the amōge the heathen, & strowe the aboute in the landes, & wyll cause thy fylthynesse to cease out of the: yee, and thou shalt be thyne awne enheritaunce & not myne in the syght of the heathen, that thou mayest knowe, that I am the Lorde.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, * the house of Israel is turned to drosse. All they ỹ shulde be brasse, tynne, yron, & lead, are in ỹ fyre become drosse. Therfore, thus sayeth ỹ Lord God. For so moche as ye all are turned in to drosse, beholde: I wyll bringe you together vnto Jerusalem, lyke as syluer, brasse, yron, tynne and leade are put together in the fornace, and the fyre blowē there vnder to melt them. Euen so will I gather you, put you in together, and melt you in my wrath & indignacyon. I wyll bringe you together, and kyndle the fyre of my cruell displeasure vnder you, that ye maye be melted therin.

Lyke as the syluer is melted in the fyre, so shall ye also be melted therin: that ye maye knowe, howe that I the Lorde haue powred my wrath vpon you.

And the worde of ỹ Lorde came vno me, sayinge. Thou sonne of man, tell her. Thou art an vnclene lande, which is not rayned vpō in the daye of ỹ cruell wrath: * thy Prophetes that are in the, are sworne together to deuoure soules, lyke as a roarynge Lyon, ỹ lyueth by his praye. Thy prestes breake my lawe, and defyle my Sāctuary. * They put no differēce betwene the holye & vnholye, nether discerne betwene ỹ cleane & vncleane: they turne their eyes fro my sabbathes, & I am vnhalowed amonge them. Thy rulers in the are lyke rauysshynge wolues, to shed blonde, and to destroye soules, for their awne couetous lucre. * As for thy Prophetes, they dawbe with vntempered claye, they se vanytyes, and prophecye lyes vnto thē, sayinge: ỹ Lorde God sayeth so, where as the Lorde hath not spoken. The people in the lande vseth wycked extorcyon & robbery. They vexe the poore & nedye and * oppresse the straunger agaynst ryght. ## ¶ The.xxiij. Chapter.

¶ Of the corrupcyon, that is to saye, of the Idolatrye of Samaria and Jerusalem, vnder the names of Oholah & Oholibah. In comparyson of Samaria he sheweth ỹ horrificacion of Jerusalem is ỹ filthyer, The destruccyon of Jerusalem is prophecied. The abhoutrye of both the whores is founde oute. Theyr destruccyon.

THe worde of the Lord came vnto me sayeng: Thou sōne of mā, there were two wemē, ỹ had one mother. These (whē they were yōge) begāne to playe ỹ harlottes * in Egypt. There were theyr brestes broused, & ỹ pappes of theyr maydenhead did ỹ Egyptiās destroye. The eldest of them was called Oholah & her yōgest syster Oholibah. These two were my wyues, & bare sonnes & daughters. Theyr names were Samaria, & ỹ was Oholah: & Jerusalē, ỹ was Oholibah. As for Oholah she begāne to go a whoring, whē I had takē her to me. * She was sett on fyre vpon her louers ỹ Assirians as her neybours which had to do wt her: euen ỹ prices & Lordes ỹ were decked i costly araye fayre yonge men, lusty ryders of horses.

*Eze.xvi.d.

Thus thorow her whordome, she cleued vnto all the yonge men of Assiria. Yee, she was madd vpō thē, & defyled her selfe wt all theyr Idols. Nether ceassed she fro ỹ fornicacyon, ỹ she vsed wt the Egyptcians: for in her youth they laye wt her, they brosed the brestes of her maydenhead, & poured theyr whordome vpō her. Wherfore, * I delyuered her to the handes of her louers, euē the Assirians, whom she so loued. These discouered her shame, toke her sonnes & daughters, & slewe her wt ỹ sweard: An euel name gat she of all people, and they punished her.

23

*Eze.xvi.f.

* Her sister Oholibah sawe this, and destroyed her selfe wt inordynate loue, more then she, & exceded her syster in whordome * she loued ỹ Assirians (which also laye wt her) namely, ỹ prices & greate lordes, ỹ were clothed wt all maner of gorgious apparell all lusty horsmē & fayre yonge personnes.

*Jere.iij.b

*Eze.xxiij.c.

Then I sawe, that they both were defyled a lyke. But she increased styll i whordome, for when she sawe mē paynted vpō the wall, ỹ ymages of the Caldees sett forth wt fresh couloures, wt fayre gyrdles about thē & goodly bonettes vpō theyr heades, lokyng all lyke prynces (after the maner of the Babylonyās and Chaldees in theyr awne lande (where they be borne) immediatly, as soone as she sawe thē, she brent in loue vpō them, and sente messaungers for them into the lande of the Chaldees.

Now when the Babylonyans came to her, they laye with her and defyled her with theyr whordome, and so was she polluted with them. And when her lust was abated from thē, * her whordome and shame was discouered and sene: then my herte forsoke her, lyke as my herte was gone from her syster also. Neuertheless, she vsed her whordome euer the longer the more, and remembred the dayes of her youth, wherin she had played the harlot i the lande of Egypt: * she brent in lust vpon them, whose flesshe was lyke the flesh of Asses, and theyr sede lyke the sede of horses. Thus thou hast renued ỹ fylthynesse of the youth, when thy louers broused thy pappes, and marred thy brestes in Egypte.

*Ezec.xbi.c.

Therfore (O Oholibah) thus sayeth the Lord God: I will raise vp thy louers (wt whom thou hast satysfyed thy lust) against the, and gather them together roūde about the: namely the Babylonians, and all the Chaldees, rulers, mightye mē & tyraūtes, wt all the Assiriās: all yonge & fayre louers: princes and Lordes, knyghtes and gentelmen, which be all good horsmē. These shall come vpon the with horses, charrettes, and a greate multitude of people: which shalbe harnessed aboute the on euery syde, wt brestplates, shyldes & helmettes. I wyll punish the before them, yee, they them selues shall punysh the, accordynge to theyr awne iudgemēt. I will put my gelousy vpon the, so that they shal deale cruelly with the. They shall cut of thy nose and thyne eares, and the remnaunt shall fall thorow the sweard. They shall cary awaye thy sonnes and daughters, and the residue shalbe brent in the fyre. They shall stryppe the out of thy clothes, and cary thy costly Jewels awaye with them.

Thus wyll I make an ende of thy fylthynesse and whordome, which thou hast brought oute of the lāde of Egypte: so that thou shalt turne thyne eyes nomore after them, and call thy mynde nomore vpon Egypte. For thus sayeth ỹ Lorde beholde I will delyuer the into the handes of them, whom thou hatest, yee, euen into the handes of them, with whom thou hast fulfylled thy lust, whych shall deale cruelly wyth the. All thy labour shall they take with them, and leaue the naked and bare, and thus the shame of thy fylthye whordome shall come to lyght. All these thynges shall happē vnto the, because of thy whordome which thou hast vsed amonge the Gentyls wyth whose Idols thou hast defyled thy selfe. Thou hast walcked in the waye of thy syster, therfore wyll I geue ỹ her cuppe in thy hande.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: Thou shalt dyncke of thy syssters cuppe, how depe and farre so euer it be to ỹ botome. Thou shalt be laughed to scorne, and had as greatly in derisyon, as is possible. Thou shalt be full of dronkennes and sorowe, for the cuppe of thy syster Samaria is a cuppe of destruc-cion and wastynge: the same shalt thou dyncke, and cuppe it out euen to the dregges, yee, thou shalt eat vp the broken peces of it, & so teare thyne awne brestes: For euē

I haue spoken it sayeth the Lorde God.

F Therfore, thus sayeth ỹ Lorde God: For so moch as thou hast forgotten me, ād cast me aside behinde the, so beare now thyne awne sylthines and whordome. The Lorde sayde moreouer vnto me: Thou sōne of mā wilt ỹ not reproue Oholah ād Oholibah?
Shewe them theyr abhominations: namely that they haue broken theyr wedlocke, & stayned theyr handes wt bloude: yee, euen wt theyr ydoles haue they cōmytted aduoutry *iiii.re.xvi & Eze.xvi.c * and offred them vp by the fyre theyr awne childrē (to be deuoured) whō they had borne vnto me. Yee, & thys haue they done vnto me also: they haue defyled my Sanctuary
i that same daye, & haue vnhalowed my Sabboth. For when they had slayne theyr childrē for theyr Idols, they came the same daye into my Sanctuary to defyle it.
Lo, thys haue they done in my house: Besyde all thys, thou hast sent they messaūgers for men out of farre countrees: & when they came, thou hast bathed & paited thyne eyes wt colours, trymmed & set forth thy self of ỹ best fassion: thou sattest vpō a goodly bed and a table spred before the: wherupō thou *Exo.xxx.d hast set myne * incense and myne oyle.

Then was there great chere with her to optayne peace, and though with those men G many mē came, yet were ther also brought, men of Sabba from the wildernesse: which gaue thē bracelettes vpon theyr handes, & sett glorious crownes vpon theyr heades:
and I sayde vnto her: that seynge she was stryuē in age in her whordōmes: now shall her fornycatiōs come to an end wt her. And they wente into her as vnto a comē harlot Euē so wēt they, (I say) to Oholah & Oholibah those sylthy wemen. O all ye ỹ loue vertue & ryghteousnes, iudge thē, punishe thē: * as aduoutrers & murtherers ought *Leui.xx.b Eze.xvi.d to be iudged & punished. For they are breakers of wedlocke, & the bloude is i theyr hādes. Wherfore thus sayeth the Lorde God
I wil brige a greate multitude of people vpō thē, & make thē be scatred & spoyled: these shall stone thē, & gore thē wt theyr swerdes. They shal slaye theyr sonnes & daughters, and burne vp theyr houses with fyre.
Thus wyll I destroye all soch sylthynes out of the land: that all wemen maye learne, not to do after your vnclennes.

And so they shall laye your sylthynes vpon youre awne selues, and ye shalbe punyshed for the synnes that ye haue cōmyt-ted with your Idols: and ye shall knowe ỹ
I am the Lorde God.

¶ The.xxiiii. Chapter.

¶ The prouerb the syrynge of Jerusalem by a parable of a sethynge potte. The parable of Ezechiels wyfe beynge deed, which he after expoundeth.

A IN the nynth yeare, i ỹ tenth mo-neth, the tenth daye of the mo-neth, came the worde of the Lord vnto me, sayenge. O thou sonne of mā, wryte vp the name of thys daye, yee, euen the houre of this present daye: when the kyng of Babylon sett hym selfe against Jerusalem. Shew that obstinate housholde * a parable, and speake vnto thē: Thus *Ezech.xvii.
sayeth the Lorde God: Gett the a * potte, *Eze.xli.b
sett it on, and powre water into it: put all ỹ peces together in it, all the good peces: the loyne & the shulder, and fyll it with the best bones. Take one of the best shepe, & an hea-pe of bones withall: let it boyle well, & lett the bones sethe well therin. With that sayde the Lorde God on thys maner. * Wo be B * Nahum.iii.
vnto the bloudy cytie of the pot, wherupon Abac.ii.b
the rustynes hāgeth, & is not yet scoured awaye. Take out the peces that are in it, one after another: there neade not lottes be cast therfore, for the bloude is yet in it. Upon a playne dyrye stone hath she powred it, & not vpon the grounde, ỹ it myght be couered wt dust. And therfore haue I letten her powre her bloude vpon a playne dyrye stony rocke, because it shulde not be hyd, and ỹ I myght bringe my wrothfull indignacyon & vengeaunce vpon her.

Wherfore, thus sayth the Lorde God: O, C wo be vnto ỹ bloud thurstye cyte, for whō euen I my selfe will make a grett fyre and sett moche woode, and kyndell the fyre and seath the fleathe, and spice the pott, so that the very bones shall be brent. Moreouer I will sett the pott empty vpon the coles, so ỹ his metall shall be brent & molten also for heate, & ỹ sylthynes of yt shall be molten in yt, & ỹ drosse of yt shal be cōsumed. Thou to kest great payne thys to defyle thy selfe.
And yt will not be purged frō ỹ exceadinge drosse in yt: but thorow fyre shall ỹ drosse of yt be puryfyed. In thy sylthynes euen in thy myscheuous dedes, ỹ dost cōtynue & be- D cause thy sylthynesse is abhominable, for
I haue clensed the, but thou art not clensed.
Thou shalt not be pourged frō thyne vncle-nesse, tyll I haue powred my wrothful idygnaciō vpō ỹ. Euē I ỹ Lorde haue so deny-sed. Yee, it is come therto all redy, ỹ I wyll do it. I will not go backe, I will not spare, I will not be treated: but accordige to thy wayes & ymaginaciōs, ỹ shalt be punyshed, sayeth the Lorde God. And the worde of E
the Lorde

the Lorde came vnto me, saiēg: Thou sonne of man, beholde, I will take awaye ỹ pleasure of thyne eyes wt a plage: yet shalt thou nether mourne, ner wepe, ner water thy che kes therfore: ỹ mayest mourne by thy self alone, but vse no deadly lamentaciō. Holde on thy bonet, and put on thy shoes vpō thy fete, couer not thy face, & eat no mourners breed. So I spake vnto ỹ people by times in ỹ morneyng, & at euē my wyfe dyed: then F vpō ỹ next morowe, I dyd as I was cōmaū-ded. And ỹ people sayd vnto me, wilt ỹ not tell vs what thys signifyeth towarde vs, for this ỹ doest for our sake. I answered them, ỹ worde of ỹ Lorde came vnto me sayēg: Tell ỹ house of Israell, thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde, I will pollute my sanctuary: euen the glory of your power, ỹ pleasure of your eyes, and the thing that ye loue: your sonnes and daughters whom ye haue left, shal fall thorow the swearde.
Lyke as I haue done, so shall ye do also:
Ye shall not hyde your faces, ye shall eate no mourners breed: your bonnettes shall ye haue vpō your heades, & shoes vpō your fete. Ye shall nether mourne ner wepe, but, i your synnes ye shalbe sorowfull, & one re-pēte with another. Thus Ezechiel is your G shew token. For loke as he hath done, so (whē this cōmeth) ye shall do also: that ye maye lerne to knowe, ỹ I am ỹ Lorde God.
But beholde, O thou sonne of man: In the daye when I take from them theyr power, theyr ioye & honour, the lust of theyr eyes,
the burthen of theyr lyfes: namely, theyr sonnes and daughters, shall not this be kno wen? Then shall there one escape, and come vnto ỹ, for to shew the. In ỹ daye shall thy mouth be opened to him, which is escaped, ỹ thou mayest speake, and be no more dōme.
Yee, and thou shalt be theyr shewtokē that they maye knowe, howe that I am ỹ Lord.

¶ The.xxv. Chapter.

¶ The worde of the Lord vpon the sonnes of Ammon, which reioyced at the fall of Jerusalem. Agaynst Moab and Seyr. Agaynst Idumea. Agaynst the Philystynes.

A THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face agaynst the * Ammonytes, pro-*Eze.xxi.d. Jere.xlix.a phecye vpon them, and saye vnto the Am-monytes: heare the worde of ỹ Lord God.
Thus sayeth ỹ Lord God: For so moch as thou spakest ouer my sanctuary. A, ha, I trowe it be nowe suspended: & ouer the land of Israel, I trowe it be now desolat, yee, & ouer ỹ house of Juda, I trowe they be now led awaye presonners: Behold, I will dely-uer the to the people of ỹ east, ỹ they maye haue ỹ in possession: these shall set theyr castels and houses in the. They shall eate thy frute, & dryncke vp thy milcke. As for Ra-bath, I will make of it a stall for camels, ād of Ammon a shepefolde: and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde.
For thus sayeth ỹ Lord God: In so moch
as thou hast clapped with thyne handes, & 25 stamped with thy fete, yee, reioyced i thyne herte ouer the lande of Israel with despite:
beholde, I will stretch out myne hāde ouer the also, ād deliuer the, to be spoyled of the Heathen, and rote the out from amōge the people, and cause the to be destroyed oute of all landes: yee, I will make the to be layed waste, that thou mayest knowe, that I am
the Lorde.
Thus sayeth the Lord God: For so moch as * Moab & Seir do saye: As for ỹ house *Esay.xv. xvi of Juda, it is but lyke as all other Gētyles and.xlviii.a be: Therfore beholde, I will open ỹ syde of Sopho.ii.b Moab, & take awaye theyr strēgth, their cy-ties & chefe coastes of theyr lāde, which are ỹ pleasures of ỹ coūtre. As namely. Bethie simoth, Baalmeon ād Cariathaim: the se will I opē vnto thē of the east, ỹ they maye fall vpō ỹ Ammonites: & will geue it thē in C possessiō: so ỹ the Ammonites shall no more be had in remēbraunce amonge ỹ Heathen Euē thus will I punyth Moab also, that they maye know, how ỹ I am the Lorde.
Moreouer, thus sayeth ỹ Lord God: Because that * Edom hath auenged and cased *Ezech.xxv.a hym selfe vpon the house of Juda, ād haue Jer.xlix.b done great offēce & auēged hī selfe vpō thē Eze.xxxv.f. g. therfore, thus sayeth the Lord: I will reach xxxvi.b out myne hāde vpon Edom, & take awaye Psa.cxxxvii.b man & beast out of it. From Themā vnto Gene.xxv.d Dedā will I make it desolate, they shall be slayne wt the swerde. * Thorow my people *Il.Mac.b.a of Israel will I auēge me agayne vpō Edō they shall hādle him, accordig to my wrath and indygnacyon, so that they shall knowe my vengeaunce, sayeth the Lorde God.
Thus sayeth the Lord God: For so moch D as the * Philistines haue done this: namely *Esa.xiiii.e.
taken vengeaunce with despytefull stomac Jere.xlvii.a. kes, and of an olde euell will set them selues Soph.ii.a to destroye. Therfore, thus sayeth ỹ Lord God: Behold, I will stretch out myne hād ouer ỹ Philistynes, & destroye ỹ destroyer, and cause all the remnaūt of the see coast, to perysh. A great vēgeaūce wyll I take vpō thē, and punyth them cruelly: ỹ they maye knowe, how that I am the Lord, which haue auenged me of them.

¶ The.xxvi. Chapter.

¶ The prophecyeth that Tyrus shalbe ouer thorowen because it reioyced at the destruccyon of Jerusalem. The wonderyng and astōnyshement of the marchaunts, for the desolacyon of Tyrus.

A IT happened, that in the eleuenth yeare, the fyrst daye of ỹ moneth
the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of mā,

*Esa.xxiii.a Jere.xlvii.b. Eze.xxvii.b and.xxviii.

*because that Tyre hath spokē vpō Jerusalem: A,ha,now I trowe the portes of the people be broken, and the turned vnto me, for nowe ỹ the is destroyed I shall be fylled. Yee, therfore, sayeth ỹ Lord God: Beholde O Tyre, I will vpō ỹ, I will bringe a great multitude of people agaynst ỹ, lyke as whē the see arysyth with his wawes: These shall breake the walles of Tyre, and cast downe her towres: I will scrape the grounde from her, and make her a bare stone: yee, as the drynge place, where the fyllhers hāge vp theyr nettes by ỹ see syde. Euē I haue spoken it, sayeth the Lorde God. The Gētyls shall spoyle her: her daughters vpō ỹ felde shall perysh wt the swearde, that they maye knowe how that I am the Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, I will bryg hither Nabuchodonosor (which is the kynge of Babylon, and a kynge of kynges) frō ỹ North vpon Tyre: wt horses, charettes, horsmen, and with a greate multitude of people. Thy daughters that are i the lād, shall he slaye with the sweard: but agaynst the, he shall make bullwerkes and graue vp dyches aboute ỹ, and lyft vp hys shylde agaynst the. Hys slynges and batelrāmes shal he prepare for thy walles, and wt his weapens breake downe thy towres. The dust of hys horses shall couer the, they shalbe so many: thy walles shall shake at ỹ noyse of the horsmen, charettes and wheles when he commeth to thy portes, as men do into an opē cytie. With ỹ hoffes of his horse fete, shall he treade downe all thy stretes. C

He shal slaye the people with the sweard, and breake downe ỹ pylers of thy strēgth. They shall waste awaye thy ryches, and spoyle thy marchaūdyse. Thy walles shall they breake downe, and destroye thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones, thy tymbre ād foundacyons shall they cast in the water.

*Jere.lvj.b. *Thus will I bring ỹ melody of thy songes, and the voyce of thy mynstrelsy to an ende, so that they shall nomore be herde. I will make a bare stone of the, yee, a dryge place for nettes, & ỹ shalt neuer be buylded agayne: For euen I the Lord haue spokē it, sayeth the Lorde God: thus hath the Lorde God spoken concernynge Tyre. The Iles shall be moued at the noyse of thy fall, & at the crye of the slayne, ỹ shall be murthered i the. All kynges of the see shall come downe from theyr seates regall: they shall laye awaye theyr roabes, and put of theyr costly clothynge. Yee, with tremblinge shall they D be clothed, they shall syt vpon the ground: they shalbe afrayed at thy sodeyn fall, ād be abasshed at the.

They shall mourne for the, and saye vnto the. *O thou noble cytie, that hast bene so greatly occupyed of olde, thou that hast *Ezech.i.a. Apo.xviii.c bene the strongest vpon the see with thyne inhabytours, of whom al men stode i feare. How arte thou nowe so vtterly destroyed? Now at ỹ tyme of thy fall ỹ inhabytours of the Iles, yee, and the Iles them selues, shall stande i feare at thy ende. For thus sayeth the Lorde God: whē I make the a desolate cytie (as other cyties be, that no mā dwell in) and whē I bringe the depe vpon ỹ that greate waters maye couer the. Then will I cast the downe vnto thē, that descende into the pitte: vnto a people that hath bene lōge deed, and set the i a lande that is beneth, lyke the olde wildernes, with them which go downe to theyr graues, so that no mā shall dwell more in the. And I will make the to be nomore in honoure, in the lande of the lyninge. I will make an ende of the, and thou shalt be gone. Though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou not be founde for euermore, sayeth the Lorde God.

¶The.xxvii.Chapter.

¶The prophete is moued to bewayle the desolacyon of Tyrus. He setteth out the prayse of Tyrus for the hauntynge of marchauntes therto.

A The worde of the Lord came vnto me sayenge: O thou sonne of man, make a lamentable cōplaynte vpō *Tyre, *Eze.xxvi.a. xxviii. and saye vpon Tyre, ỹ which art a porte of the see, ỹ occupieth with moche people, & many Iles: thus speaketh ỹ Lord God: O Tyre, thou hast sayd: what, I am a noble cytie thy borders are in the middest of the see, ād thy buylders haue made ỹ maruelous goodly, All thy tables haue they made of cypres trees of ỹ moūt Sanyr, frō Libanus haue they takē Cedre trees, to make ỹ maistes: B and ỹ Okes of Basan to make ỹ rowers.

Thy boordes haue they made of yuery, & of costely wood out of the Ile of Cethim. Thy sayle was of dyuers colours, smalle nedle worke out of ỹ lāde of Egypt, to hange vpō thy mast: & thy hāgiges of yelow sylke purple, out of ỹ Iles of Elisah. They of Sydon & Arnad were thy marryners, and ỹ wyseste i Tyre were thy shyppmasters. The eldest and wyseste at Gebal were they, ỹ mēded & stopped thy shyppes. All shyppes of the see wt theyr shyppmen occupyed theyr marchaundies i ỹ. The Perses, Lydians ād phutēs were in thyne host, & helped the to fyght: these hanged vp theyr shyldes & helmettes with the, these sett forth they bewty. They of Arnad were with thyne hoost rounde aboute thy walles, & ỹ Pigmenias C were thy watchmen vpō thy towres, these hāged vp theyr quivers rounde aboute thy walles, and made the maruelous goodly. Tharsis occupyed with the in all maner of wares, in syluer, yron, tynne and lead, ād made thy marckett greate. Jauan, Tubal, and Mesech were thy marchauntes, which brought the mē, and ornamentes of metall for thy occupiēge. They of ỹ house of Thogarma brought vnto the at the tyme of thy marte, horse, horsmen and mules. They of *Dedan were thy marchauntes: and many *Gen.xxv.c. other Iles that occupyed with the, brought the weathers, Elephāt bones & Peacockes for a present. The Syriās occupied with ỹ, because of thy diuerse worckes, and increased thy marchaundies, with Smaragdes, with scarlet, with nedle worcke, with whyte lynen cloth, with sylcke, and with crystall:

Juda and the lande of Israel occupied wt D the & brought vnto thy markettes, wheat, of Minnith and pānag, balme, hony, oyle, & tryacle. Damascus also vsed marchaūdyes wt the, in the best wyne of Helbon & wt woll: because thy occupiēg was so greate, ād thy wares so many, Dan, Jauan & Meusall haue brought vnto thy marckettes, yron redy made, with Cassia & Calam⁹, accordige to thine occuppenge. Dedan occupied with the in sayre tapestrye worcke and cushyns. Arabia & al the princes of Cedar haue occupied wt the, in shepe, wethers and goates.

The marchauntes of Seba and Rema haue occupied also with the, i all costly spyces, in all precyous stones and golde, which they brought vnto thy marckettes. Harā, E Chene and Eden, the marchauntes of Saba, Assiria, and Chelmad, were all dooers wt the, and occupyed with the. In costly rayment, of yelow sylcke & nedle worcke (very precyous, & therfore packte and bounde together with roapes.) Yee, and in Cedre woodde, at ỹ tyme of thy marckettes. The shyppes of Tharsis were the cheke of thy occuppenge.

Thus thou art full, and in greate worshyp, euen i the myddest of the see. Thy robbers shall bringe the into grett waters, ỹ easte winde shall ouerbeare the into ỹ myddest of the see: so that thy wares, thy marchaundies, thy ryches, thy maryners, thy shyppmasters, thy buylders of thy broken places, thy occupiers (that brought ỹ thynges necessary) the men of warre that are in F the: yee, and all thy comens shall perysh in the myddest of the see: in ỹ daye of thy fall. The suburbes shall shake at the loude crye of thy shyppmen. All whyrry men, & all maryners vpon the see, shall leape out of theyr boates, & set thē selues vpon ỹ lande. They shall lyft vp theyr voyce because of the and make a lamētable cry. They shall cast dust vpō theyr heades, and lye downe in the asshes. They shall shaue them selues, and put sacke cloth vpon them for thy sake.

They shall mourne for the with hertfull sorow, and heuy lamentacion, yee, they also shall wepe for the. Alas, what cytie hath so bene destroyed in ỹ see, as Tyre is? Whē thy wares and marchaundies came frō the G sees, ỹ gauest al people ynough. The kiges of the earth hast thou made ryche, thorow the multitude of thy watres & occupieng. But thou art now cast downe i to the depe of ỹ see, all thy resorte of people is perished with the. All they that dwell i the Iles are abashed at the, & all theyr kynges are afrayed, yee, theyr faces haue chaūged coulour. The marchauntes of the nacyons wonder at ỹ. In that thou art so cleane brought to naught, and commest nomore vp.

¶The.xxviii.Chapter.

¶The worde of God agaynst the kyng of Tyrus for hys pryde. Daniel The prophet is moued to bewayle the kyng of Tyrus. The worde of the Lorde agaynst Sydon. The Lord promyseth that he wyll gather together the children of Israel.

A The worde of ỹ Lorde came vnto me sayēge: thou sonne of mā, tell the prince of *Tyre: Thy sayeth *Eze.xxvi. xxviii. the Lorde God, because thou hast a proude hert and hast sayde: *I *Esa.xliii.c am a God, I haue my seate in the myddest of the see lyke a God: where as thou art but a man and not God, and yet standest i thyne awne conceate, that thou arte God: Beholde, ỹ thynckest thy selfe ☞ wyser then *Daniel, that there is no secretes hyd from *Dan.ii.d. the. Wyth thy wysdome and thy vnderstandyng, thou hast gotten the great welthynes, and gathered treasure of syluer ād golde. With thy greate wysdome ād occuppenge, hast thou increased thy power, and because of thy greate rychesse, thy herte is proude.

Therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: 25 For so moch as thou hast lyft vp thyne hert as though thou were God: Beholde, I will bringe enmenyes vpō the, euen the tyraūtes of ỹ heathē: these shall drawe out theyr swerdes vpon thy bewty and wysdome, & shal defyle thy glory. They shall cast the downe to ỹ pitte, so that thou shalt dye in the myddest of the see, as they that be slayne. Lett se, yf thou wilt saye then (before them that slaye ỹ) I am God: where as thou art but a man and not God, in the hādes of thē that slaye the. Dye shalt thou, euen as the vncircumcised in the handes of the enemyes for I my selfe haue spoken it, sayeth the C Lorde God.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayeng: Thou sonne of mā, make a lamentable complaynte ouer ỹ kynge of Tyre, ād tell hym: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: thou art a scale of a lykenesse, full of wysdome & excellēt bewty. Thou hast bene in the pleasaunt garden of God: thou art decked with al maner of precious stones: with Ruby, Topas, Crystall, Jacynte, Onix,

A Moreouer, it happened i the eleuēth yeare, the fyrst daye of the thyrd moneth, ỹ the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayeng: thou sonne of man, speake vnto Pharao the kynge of Egypte, and to al hys people. Whom art ỹ lyke in thy greatnesse? Beholde, Assur was lyke a Cedre tre vpon the mount of Lybanus with fayre brāches: so thycke, that he gaue shadowes and shot out very hye. Hys toppe reached vnto ỹ cloudes. The waters made hym great, and the depe set him vp an hye. Rounde about the rotes of hym rāne there floudes of water, he sent out his lytle
W ryuers vnto all the trees of the felde. Therfore was he hyer then all the trees of the felde, and thorow the multytude of waters ỹ he sent from him, he optayned many longe brāches. All foules of the ayre made theyr nestes in his brāches, vnder his bowes gēdred all the beastes of the felde, and vnder his shadow dwelt all people. Fayre & bewtifull was he in his gretnes & in the lengthy of hys brāunches, for hys rote stode beside H great waters, & no Cedre tre myght hyde hym. In the pleasaunt gardē of God, there
C was no fyre tre lyke hys brāches, ỹ playne trees were not lyke the bowes of hym. All the trees in ỹ garden of God myght not be compared vnto him in his bewty, so fayre and goodly had I made hym w̄ the multytude of hys brāunches. In so moch that * all the trees in ỹ pleasaunt gardē of God had enuye at hym. Therfore, thus sayeth ỹ
D Lorde God: for so moch as he hath lyft vp him selfe so hye, and stretched hys toppe into ỹ cloudes, and seinge his hert is proude in his hyghnesse. I wyll delyuer hym into ỹ handes of the myghtyest among the Heathen, which shall rote him out. Accordynge to his wyckednesse wyll I cast hī awaye, ỹ enemye shall destroye hym, and the myghty men of the Heathen shall so scatre him that his brāunches shall lye vpon all mountaynes and in all valleyes: his bowes shalbe broken downe to the grounde thorow out the lande. Then all the people of the landē
E shall go from his shadowe, ād forsake him. When he is fallen, all the foules of the ayre shall syt vpon hym, and all wylde beastes of the felde shall go about

For vnto death shall they all be delyuered vnder the earth, and go downe to the graue lyke other men.

F Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God: In the daye when he goeth downe to the graue I will cause a lamentacyon to be made, I will couer the depe vpon him, I will stauch his floudes, ād the great waters shalbe restrayned. I shall cause Lybanus to be sorowfull for his sake, ād all the trees of the felde shall be smytē. I will make the Heathen shake at the sounde of his fall, when I

All the trees of Eden, with all the chosen and best trees of Lybanus, yee, and all they that are planted vpō the waters, shall mourne with hym also in the lower habitacyōs: for they shal go downe to hell with him, vnto them that be slayne with the swearde, which dwelt a fore vnG der the shadowe of his arme amōg the Heathen. To whō shalt thou be lykened, that art so gloryous and greate, amōg the trees of Eden? Yet art thou cast downe vnder the earth (amonge ỹ trees of Edē) where thou must lye amōge vncircūcyded, w̄ them ỹ be slayne w̄ ỹ swearde. Euen thus is it w̄ Pharao & all his people, sayeth the Lorde God.

The.xxxii. Chapter.

The prophete is commaunded to bewayle Pharao the kyng of Egypt. He prophecyeth that destruccyon shall come vnto Egypt thorow the kyng of Babylon.

I N the eleuenth yeare, ỹ fyrst daye of the twelueth moneth, ỹ worde of ỹ Lorde came vnto me sayenge: thou sonne of mā, take vp a lamētacyō vpō* Pharao ỹ king of Egypt, & saye vnto him: thou art reputed as a lyon of the heathē, & as a whalfysh i ỹ see: Thou castest thy waters about the, thou troublest ỹ waters with thy fete and stāpest in theyr floudes. Thus sayeth the Lord God: * I wyll spredē my net ouer the, namely, a greate multytude of people: these shall dryue ỹ to my yarne, for I wyll cast the vpon the lande, and let the lye vpō the felde, that all ỹ foules of the ayre maye sytt vpon the. I will geue all the beastes of the felde ynough of ỹ. Thy flesh will I cast vpon the hylles, and fyll the valleyes with thy hyghnesse. I wyll water the lāde with
B the aboundaunce of thy blonde euen to the moūtaynes, and ỹ ryuers shal be full of thy blonde. When ỹ art put out, I will couer ỹ heauen, and make his starres dymme. * I will spredē a cloude ouer the Sunne, ād the Mone shal not geue her light. All ỹ lightes of heauē will I put out ouer ỹ, & brīg darcknes vpon thy lāde, sayeth the Lorde God. I will trouble the hertes of many people, when I bryng thy destrucciō amōg ỹ Heathen & coūtrees, whom ỹ knowest not. Yee, I will make many people w̄ theyr kinges so afrayed thorow the, ỹ theyr heare shall stāde vp, when I shake my sweard at theyr faces. Sodenly shall they be astonyed, euery man in hym selfe, at the daye of thy fall.

For

C For thus sayeth the Lorde God, the kinge of Babylons swearde shal come vpon the, with the swardes of the worthyes wyll I smyte downe thy people. All they that be myghtye amonge the Gentyles shal waste ỹ proude pompe of Egypte, & bryng downe all her people. All the catell also of Egipte will I destroye, ỹ they shall come nomore vpon ỹ waters: so that nether mās fote ner beastes clawe, shall stere thē eny more. Thē will I make their waters depe, & cause their floudes to runne lyke oyle, sayeth the Lord God. When I make ỹ lande of Egypte desolate, and when the countre with all that is therin, shalbe layde waste, & when I smyte all them which dwell in it, that they may knowe, that I am ỹ Lord. This is ỹ mournyng, that ỹ daughters of the Heathen shal
D make: Yee, a sorow & lamentacion shal they take vp, vpon Egypte, and all her people, sayeth the Lord God.

In the.xii. yeare, the.xv. daye of the moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man. Take vp a lamentacion vpon ỹ people of Egypte, & cast thē downe, yee, them I saye, & the myghtye
* Esa.xiiii.e Ezech.xxxi.c people of ỹ heathē also, euen with thē* that dwell beneth: and with them that go downe into the graue. Downe (how fayre so euer ỹ be) & laye the with ỹ vncircumcised. Amōge those ỹ be slayne with ỹ swearde, shall they lye. To the swerde is she all redy delyuered: therfore pluck downe to ỹ grounde, her & all her multitude. The myghtie worthies shal speake to him out of ỹ hell & to his helpers, ỹ be gone downe & lye vncircumcised and w̄ them that be slayne with the swearde.

E Assur is there also wyth hys company, & their graues roūde aboute, which were slayne and fell all with the swearde, whose graues lye besyde him in ỹ lowe pytte. Hys comens are buried rounde aboute hys graue, all together wounded and slayne with the swearde, which mē afore tyme brought feare into the lande of the lyuynge.

* Jere.xlix.c Dani.viii.a. * There is Elam also wyth all hys people, and their graues rounde aboute: which all beynge wounded & slayne with ỹ swearde, are gone downe vncircumcysed vnder ỹ earth, which neuertheles somtime brought feare into the lande of the lyuynge: for the which they beare their shame, with ỹ other that be gone downe to the graue.

Their burial is geuen them and all their people, amonge them that be slayne. Their graues are roūde aboute al them, whych be vncircūcised, & with thē that be slayne thorow ỹ swearde: for seyng that in times past they made the lande of the lyuynge afrayed they must now beare their awne shame, w̄ them that go downe to the pytte, and lye amonge them that be slayne.

There is Mesech also and Tubal, and their people, & their graues rounde aboute. These all are amōg the vncircumcised, and them that be slayne wyth the swearde, because afore tyme they made the lande of the lyuynge afrayed.

Shulde not they then lye also amonge ỹ worthyes, & vncircūcised Spaūtes: which with their weapens are gone downe to hell whose swerdes are layed vnder their heades, whose wyckednesse is vpon their bones: because that as worthyes, they haue brought feare into the lande of the lyuinge Yee, amonge the vncircūcised shalt thou be destroyed, & slepe wyth them, that perished thorowe the swearde.

There is the lande of * Edom wyth her G kynges and princes also, which with theyr strēgth are layed by them that were slayne with the swearde, yee, amonge the vncircūcised, and them which are gone downe into the pytte. Moreouer, there be all ỹ princes of the north, with all the Sidonyās, which are gone downe to the slayne. * Jere.xlix.b Ezech.xxv.b. and.xxxb.a.

With their feare and strength they are come to confusion, and lye there vncircuncised, among those that be slayne with ỹ swearde: and beare their awne shame, with thē that be gone downe to ỹ pytte. Now whan Pharao seyth this, he shalbe comforted ouer all hys people, that is slayne with the swearde: both Pharao and all his hoost, sayeth the Lord God. For I haue geuen my feare in the lande of the lyuinge. But Pharao and all his people shall lye among the vncircumcised, and amonge them that be slayne with the swearde sayeth the Lorde God.

The.xxxiii. Chapter.

He setteth out the office of a curate that preacheth the Gospell. He strengtheneth them that dyspayre, and boldeneth them with the promes of mercy. The worde of ỹ Lord against ỹ remnaunt of ỹ people. Against the mockers of the wordes of the prophete.

A Gayne, the worde of the Lorde A came vnto me: sayenge. Thou sonne of man, Speke to ỹ children of thy people, and tell thē: Whan I sende a swearde vpon a lande, yf the people of the lande take a mā of their countre, & set hym to be their* watchman, the same man, whan he seyth ỹ swearde come vpon the lande) shall blowe the trompet, and warne the people. * Ezech.iii.d

If a man now heare the noyse of the trōpet & wyll not be warned, and the swearde come: and take him awaye: his blonde shall be vpon his awne head: for he herde ỹ sound of the trompet, & wolde not take hede, therfore his blonde be vpon him. But yf he will receaue warninge, he shall saue his lyfe.

W Agayne, yf the watchman se ẏ swearde come, and shewe it not with the tropet, so that the people is not warned: yf the swearde come then, & take eny man from among thē: the same shall be taken awaye in his awne synne, but his blonde wyll I requize of the watchmans hande.

*Eze.xiii.c *And now (O thou sonne of man) I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel: that where as thou hearest eny thinge out of my mouth, thou mayest warne thē on my behalfe. If I saye vnto the wycked thou wycked, thou shalt surely dye, & thou geuest him not warninge, that he maye beware of his vngodly waye: then shall the wycked dye in his awne synne, but his blonde wyll I require of thy hāde. Neuertheles, yf thou warne the wycked of hys waye, to turne from it, where as he yet wyll not be turned from it, thē shal he dye because of his synne, but thou hast delinered thy soule.

C Therfoze (O thou sonne of man) speake vnto ẏ house of Israel. Ye, saye thus: Oure offences and synnes lye vpon vs, and we be corrupte in them how shulde we then be restozed vnto lyfe? Tell them: *As truly as I lyue saieth the Lozd God, I haue no pleasure in ẏ death of the wycked, but moch rather ẏ the wycked turne frō his waye, & lyue. Turne you, turne you frō your vngodly wayes, O ye of the house of Israell. Oh wherfoze wyll ye dye?

Thou sonne of man, tell the chyldzen of thy people: *The righteousnes of the rygh teous shal not saue hym, whansoeuer he turneth awaye vnfaithfully. Agayne, the loyckednesse of the wycked shall not hurt hym, whan soeuer he conuerteth from hys vngodlynesse.

*Eze.xviii.d

And the ryghteousnesse of the ryghteous shall not saue his lyfe, whansoeuer he synneth. If I saye vnto the ryghteous, that he shal surely lyue, and so he trust to his awne ryghteousnesse, and do synne, then shall hys righteousnesse be nomoze thought vpō, but in the wyckednesse that he hath done he shal dye. *Agayne, yf I saye vnto the wycked: thou shalt surely dye: and so he turne from his synnes, and do ẏ thinge that is lawfull and right: In so moch that the same wicked man geueth ẏ pledge agayne, restozeth that he had taken awaye by robbery, walketh in the commaundementes of lyfe, and doth no wzonge. Then shall he surely lyue, and not dye. Yee, the synnes that he hath done, shall neuer be thought vpō. Foz in so moch as he doth now the thinge that is lawfull & ryght, he shall lyue. And yet the chyldzen of thy people saye: Tush: the waye of ẏ Lozde is not ryght, but they lye, where as their awne waye is rather vnright.

D *Esa.lb.b. Jere.xviii.a.

When ẏ ryghteous turneth frō his rygh teousnes and doth the thing that is wicked he shall dye therfoze. But yf the wicked turne from his wickednesse, doing the thinge ẏ is lawfull and right, he shall lyue therfoze.

*Eze.xviii.f Yet ye saye: * the waye of the Lozde is not equall. O ye house of Israell? I will iudge ‡Roma.ii.g euery one of you after his wayes.

E In the.xii. yeare, the.v. daye of ẏ tenth moneth of oure captiuite, it happened, that one which was fled out of Ierusalē, came vnto me, and sayd: the citye is destroyed. Now ẏ hande of ẏ Lozd had bene vpon me the euening afoze this mā (which was escaped) came vnto me, & had ☞ opened my mouth, vntyll ẏ mozning ẏ he came to me: yee, he opened my mouth, so ẏ I was nomoze domme. Then came the wozde of ẏ Lozd vnto me, & sayd. Thou sonne of man, these ẏ dwell in ẏ wasted lāde of Israel, saye: Abzaham was but one man, and he had the lande in possession: now are we many & the lande is geuen vs to possesse also. And therfoze tell them. F Thus sayeth the Lozd: *In the bloud haue ye eaten, youre eyes haue ye lyft vp to Idoles, ‡and haue shed bloud: shall ye then haue the lande in possession?

Ye leane vpon your swoordes, ye wozcke abhominacions, euery one defileth his neygh bours wife: and shall ye thē possesse the lande? Saye ẏ these wozdes vnto them. Thus saieth the Lozd God. As truly as I lyue all ye ẏ dwell in thys wylderneste, shalbe slayne with ẏ swearde: whatsoeuer is vpon the felde, will I geue vnto the beastes to be deuoured: those that be in strong holdes & dennes, shall dye of the pestilence. Foz I wyll make the lande so desolate and waste, & the pompe of her strength shal come to an ende. The mountaynes in Israel shalbe so waste that noman shall trauayle therby.

G *Eze.vi.d *Then shall they lerne to knowe, that I am the Lozd, when I make the lande waste & desolate, because of all their abhominacions, that they haue wzought. And thou sonne of man, the childzē of thy people that talcke of the, by the walles and in the dozes of their houses, sayinge one to another: Come, let vs heare, what wozde is gone fozth from the Lozd. These come vnto the, after ẏ maner of a greate people: yee, as who sayth they were my people, they syt downe befoze the, and heare thy wozdes, but they do not therafter *foz in their mouthes they make a Jeste of them, and theyz herte goeth after theyz awne couetous lucre. And as a balet that hath a swete tune, and is pleasaunt to synge, so shalt ẏ be vnto them: thy wozdes shal they heare, but they will not do therafter. Whā this cōmeth to passe (foz lo, it commeth in dede) then shall they knowe, ẏ there hath bene a prophet amonge them.

The.xxxiiii. Chapter.

Agaynst Byshoppes and Curates that deuyde the flock of Christ, & leade their awne. The Lozd saieth that he wyll vysyt his dispatsed flocke, and gather them together. He reproueth the malice of certen of the flocke. He promiseth the true shepherd Christ, and with hym peace.

ND the wozde of ẏ Lozde came vnto me, sayinge. Thou sonne of man, prophecye agaynst the shepherdes of Israel, prophecy and speake vnto them. Thus

*Ezec.xliii.a Jere.xiiii.b. and.xxiii.a. sayeth the Lozd God. *Wo be vnto the shepherdes of Israell, that fede them selues. Shulde not the shepherdes fede ẏ flockes?

*Lod.xiiii.d. Ye haue eatē vp the fatt, ye haue clothed you with the woll: ẏ best fedde haue ye slayne, but the flocke haue ye not nozished. The weake haue ye not holden vp *the sicke haue ye not healed: ẏ broken haue ye not boūde together, ẏ out caste haue ye not brought

*1.Pet.v.a agayne: ẏ lost haue ye not sought, but *churlishly & cruelly haue ye ruled thē. Thus are they scatred here & there without a shepherde: yee, all ẏ beastes of the feld deuoure thē, and they go astraye.

Therfoze, O ye shepherdes, heare the wozde of the Lozde. Thus sayeth ẏ Lozd God: As truly as I lyue, foz so moch as my shepe are robbed, and deuoured of all the wylde beastes of the felde, hauynge no shepherde: and seinge that my shepherdes take nō regarde of my shepe, but fede them selues onely, and not my shepe. C the Lozd (O ye shepherdes) Thus sayeth ẏ Lozd God: Beholde, I myne selfe wyll vpon the shepherdes: and require my shepe from their handes, and make them ceasse from fedynge of my shepe: yee, the shepherdes shall fede thē selues nomoze. Foz I wyll deliuer my shepe out of their mouthes, so that they

D *John.x.a. Ezech.xxxiii.b. Ose.ii.c.b.a shall not deuoure them after this. Foz thus sayeth the Lozde God: * Beholde, I wyll loke to my shepe myne selfe, and seke them. Like as a shepherde among ẏ flocke seketh after the shepe that are scatered abzoade, euen so wil I seke after my shepe, & gather them together out of all places, where they haue bene scatred in the cloudy and darcke daye. I will bzinge them out from all people, and gather thē together out of all lādes. I will bzinge them into their awne lande, and fede them vpon the mountaines of Israel, by the ryuers, and in all the places of the countre. I will fede them in ryght good pastures and vpon the hie moūtaynes of Israel shall there foldes be. There shal they lye in a good folde, and in a fat pasture shal they fede: eus vpon the mountaynes of Israell.

I will fede my shepe my selfe, and bzinge them to their rest, sayeth the Lozde God.

*Luk.xiii.b. John.x.a *Soch as be lost, will I seke: soch as go astraye: will I bzing agayne: soch as be woūded, will I bynde vp: soch as be weake, will I make strong: soch as be fat & stronge, those will I rote oute, and fede them with the thing that is laufull. And as foz you (O my E shepe) sayeth the Lozde God. * I wyll put a *Mat.xxv.e difference amonge the shepe, among the wethers & the goates. Was it not ynough foz you, to eate vp ẏ good pasture, but ye must treade downe ẏ residue of youre pasture wt your fete also? Was it not ynough foz you to dzincke cleare water, but ye must trouble the residue also with youre fete?

Thus my shepe must be fayne to eate the thinge, that ye haue troden downe wt youre fete, and to dzinke it, that ye with your fete haue defiled. Therfoze, thus sayeth ẏ Lozd God vnto them: Beholde, I wyll seuer the fatt shepe from the leane: foz so moch as ye haue shot the weake shepe vpon the sydes & shoulders, and runne vpon them with your hoznes, so lōge tyll ye haue vtterly scatred them abzode. I will helpe my shepe, so that they shal nomoze be spoyled: yee, I will discerne one shepe from another. I wyll raise vp vnto them one onely shepherde, euen ☞ my seruaunt * Dauid, he shall ‡ fede thē and he shall be their shepherde. I the Lozde * Jere.xxx.b ‡ Actes.ii.c Micheb.v.a will be their God, and my seruaunt Dauid shall be their prince: Euen I the Lozde haue spoken it.

F Moreouer, I wyll make a couenaunt of peace with them and dzyue al euell beastes out of the lande: so that they maye dwell safely in the wilderneste, and slepe in the woddes. Good foztune and prosperite will I geue them, and vnto all that be roūde aboute my hyll. * A prosperous shower and rayne * Deut.xi.d. and.xxviii.d will I sende thē in due season, that the trees in the wodde maye bzing fozth their frutes and the grounde her increase. They shalbe safe in their lande, and shall knowe, that I am the Lozd, which haue broken their yocke and delinered thē oute of the handes of those, that helde them in subiection.

They shal nomoze be spoyled of the heathen, ner deuoured wyth the beastes of the lande: but safely shal they dwell, and no mā shall fraye them, I will set vp an excellent plante foz them, so that they shall suffze no moze hunger in the lande, nether beare the repzoke of the heathē eny moze. Thus shall they vnderstande, that I the Lozde theyz God am with them, and that they (euen the house of Israel) are my people saieth ẏ Lozde God. Ye men are my flocke * ye are the *Ysai.xlv.b and.xcix.b shepe of my pasture: and I am youre God, sayeth the Lozde God.

¶The.xxxv.Chapter.

¶The destruccyon that shall cõme on the hyll Seyr, that is, on ꝑ Idumeans, because they troubled the people of the Lorde.

A MOreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying. Thou sonne of man, turne thy face towarde the mount * Seyr, prophecye vpon it, & saye vnto it. Thus sayeth ꝑ Lord God: Beholde (O ꝑ mount Seyr) I wyll vpon the, I wyll reach out myne hãde ouer the, yee, waste and desolate wil I make the. Thy cities will I breake downe, ãd ꝑ shalt lye voyde: that thou mayst knowe, how ꝑ I am the Lorde. * For so moch as thou hearest an olde enemyte agaynst the chyldren of Israel, and hast drawne the chylderne of Israell vpõ the swerde, what tyme as they were troubled and punished for their synne: Therfore, as truly as I lyue, sayeth ꝑ Lord God, I will prepare the vnto bloude, yee, ☞ bloude shall folow vpon the: * seinge ꝑ layest wayte for bloude, therfore shall bloude persecute ꝑ. Thus will I make ꝑ mount Seir desolate and waste, and bringe to passe, that there shall no man goo thyther, ner come from thence. His mountaynes will I fyll with his slayne men: thy hilles, valleys and ryuers, shall lye full of them, that are slayne with ꝑ swearde. I will make ꝑ a perpetuall wildernesse, so that thy cityes shall not returne to their former estate ꝑ ye maye knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

☞ And because ꝑ hast sayde: what, ☞ both C these nacions and both these landes must be myne, & I will haue thẽ in possession * where as the Lorde was there. Therfore, thus sayeth the Lord God: As truly as I lyue, I will hãdle the accordinge to thy wrath and gelousy, lyke as thou hast dealt cruelly wt them, that I maye be knowen amõg them, how I haue punished ꝑ. Yee, and that thou also mayest be sure, that I the Lorde haue herde al thy despyteful wordes, which thou D hast spoken agaynst the mountaynes of Israell, sayinge: Lo, they are made waste, and geuẽ vs to deuoure. Thus with your mouthes ye haue made youre boast agaynst me, yee, and multiplied your proude wordes agaynst me, which I haue herde altogether. Where vnto, thus sayeth the Lord God: to the iope of all the worlde will I make ꝑ waste. * And lyke as ꝑ (O mount Seyr) wast glad, because the heritage of the house of Israel was destroyed: euen so wyll I do vnto the also, ꝑ thou and whole Edom shal be destroyed, & knowe, that I am the Lorde.

A ¶ Thou sonne of man, prophecye vpon ꝑ mountaynes of Israell, and speake: * Heare ꝑ worde of the Lorde, O ye mõtaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth ꝑ Lord God. Because your enemye hath sayde vpõ you: ☞ A, ha, the hye euerlastynge places ☞ are now become ours, prophecy therfore, & speake: thus sayeth the Lord God. Seynge ye be wasted and trodde downe on euery syde, and become a possession vnto the residue of ꝑ Gentiles, which haue brought you into mens mouthes and vnto an euell name amonge the people. Therfore, heare ꝑ worde of the Lord God, O ye mountaynes of Israell. Thus sayeth the Lord God vnto the mountaynes and hilles, valleys and dales, to ꝑ voyde wyldernesse and desolate cityes, which are spoyled, & had in derision on euery syde, amonge the residue of the Heathẽ. Yee, euẽ thus sayeth the Lord God. In the fyre of my gelousy haue I taken a deuyce, B agaynst ꝑ residue of the Gẽtiles, & agaynst all * Edom: which haue taken in my lande vnto them selues for a possessiõ: which also reioysed frõ their whole hert with a despiteful stomacke, to waste it, and to spoyle it.

Prophecy therfore vpon the lande of Israell, speake vnto the mountaynes & hilles to valleys and dales, thus sayeth the Lord God. Behold, this haue I deuised in my gelousy & terrible wrath. For so moche as ye haue suffred reprofe of the Heathẽ, therfore thus saieth the Lord God. ☞ I haue sworne, ☞ that the Gentiles which lye aboute you, shal beare their cõfusion thẽ selues. And as for you (O mountaynes of Israel) ye shall shute out your braunches, and bringe forth your frute to my people of Israell, for it is C hard by, that it will come. Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you wyll I turne me, ꝑ ye maye be tylled and sowne.

☞ I wyll sende you moch people, which ☞ shalbe all of the house of Israell, the cityes shalbe inhabited, & the decayed places shalbe repaired agayne, I wil prouide you with moch people and catell, which shal increase and bringe frute, I wyll restore you also to your olde estate & shewe you more kyndnes thẽ euer ye had before: wherby ye shal knowe, that I am the Lord. Yee, people wyll I send vnto you (O my folke of Israel) which shall haue the in possession, ãd thou shalt be their inheritaunce, so ꝑ thou shalt nomore be without them. Agayne, thus sayeth the Lorde God. For so moch as they saye vnto you, thou art an eater vp of men, and a waster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no mo men, nether destroye thy people eny more, sayeth the Lord God. And I will not D suffre the, for to heare thine awne confusion amonge the Gentiles from hẽceforth. Thou shalt not beare ꝑ reprofe of the nacions, ner cast out Wherfore, I poured my ☞ wrothfull displeasure vpõ them, ☞ because of the bloude ꝑ they had shed in ꝑ lande, & because of their Idols, wherwith they had defiled thẽ selues. I scatred thẽ also amõge the heathen, so ꝑ they were strawed aboute in the landes. Accordinge to their wayes & after theyr awne inuencyons, so dyd I punithe them.

E * Now, when they were gone vnto the Heathen, & come in amonge thẽ, they dishonoured my holy name: so that it was sayde of them. Are these the people of God, & must go out of their awne lãd? Thẽ spared I my holy name, which ꝑ house of Israel had dishonoured amonge the Gentiles, to whom they came. Therfore tell ꝑ house of Israel: Thus sayeth ꝑ Lord God: I do not this for your sakes (O house of Israell) but for my holy names sake, whych ye dishonoured amonge the Heathen, when ye came to them. Therfore, I wyll halowe my greate name agayne, which amonge the Gẽtiles is euell spoken of: for ye your selues haue dishonoured it amonge them. And the Gentiles shal knowe that I am the Lord, whan I am honoured in you before their eyes, sayeth the Lorde God.

As for you, I will take you from amõge the Heathẽ, and gather you together out of all countres, and bringe you agayne into your awne lande. * Then will I poure clear water vpon you, and ye shalbe clene: yee, from all your vnclennesse and from all your Idols shall I clense you. A new herte also will I geue you, and a new spryte will I put into you. As for that stony herte, I will take it out of youre body, & geue you a fleshly F herte. I will geue my spryte amõge you * & cause you to walcke in my cõmaundemẽtes to kepe my lawes, and to fulfill them.

And so ye shall dwell in the land, that I gaue to your forefathers, and ye shalbe my people, and I wilbe your God. I will helpe you out of all your vnclẽnes. I will call for the corne, and will increase it, & let you haue no honger. I will multiplie the frutes of the trees and the increase of ꝑ felde for you, so ꝑ ye shall beare no more reprofe of hõger, amonge the Heathen. Then shal ye remembre your awne wicked wayes, & your ymaginacions, which were not good: so that ye shal thinke ꝑ ye were worthy to be destroyed: for your synnes and abhominacyons.

But I wyll not do thys for youre sakes G (saieth the Lord God) be ye sure of it. Therfore, O ye house of Israell, be ashamed of your sinnes. Moreouer, thus saieth ꝑ Lord God: what tyme as I shall clense you from all youre offences, then will I make the cyties to be occupied agayne, and will repaire ꝑ places that be decayed. The desolate lande shal be builded agayne, which afore time laye waste in the sight of all them that wẽte by. Then shal it be sayde: this waste lande is become lyke a garden of pleasure, and the voyde, desolate & broken downe cityes are now strong, & defensed agayne. Then ꝑ residue of ꝑ Heathen that lye rounde about you, shal knowe that I am ꝑ Lorde, which repaire that was broken downe, and plante agayne, ꝑ was made waste. Euen I ꝑ Lord haue spoken it, and will do it in dede.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll yet once be founde agayne of ꝑ house of Israel, and do this for them: * I shal increase them as a flocke of mẽ. Lyke as the holy flocke & the flocke of Jerusalem are in ꝑ hye solempne feastes: so shall also the wilde wasted cyties be filled with flockes of men: and they shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

¶The.xxxvii.Chapter.

¶The prophecieth the bringynge agayne of the people beynge in captiuite. He sweeth the ruyen of the ten trybes with the two.

A THe hande of the Lorde came vpon me and caried me out in the spryte of the Lorde, and let me downe in a playne felde, that laye ful of bones, and he led me rounde about by them: and beholde, the bones that laye vpon the felde, were very many, and maruelous drye also. Then sayd he vnto me. Thou sonne of man: thynkest thou these bones maye lyue agayne? I answered O Lorde God, thou knowest. And he sayde vnto me. Prophecy thou vpon these bones, and speake vnto them. Ye drye bones, heare the worde of ꝑ Lord. Thus sayeth the Lord B de God vnto these bones: Beholde, I wyll put breth into you, that ye may lyue: I will geue yow synowes, and make flesshe growe vpon you, and couer you ouer with skinne: and so geue you * breth, that ye may lyue, & knowe, that I am the Lorde. * Gene.ii.b.

So I prophecied, as he had commaũded me. And as I was prophecyinge, there came a noyse & a great mocyon, so ꝑ the bones rãne euery one to another. Now whẽ I had loked, beholde, they had synowes, ãd flesshe grewe vpon them: and aboue they were couered with skynne, but there was no breth in them. Then sayde he vnto me. Thou sonne of man, prophecye thou towarde ꝑ wynde: prophecy: and speake to ꝑ wynde. Thus sayeth the Lord God. Come (O thou ayre) ☞ from the foure wyndes, & ☞ blowe vpon C these slayne that they may be restored to lyfe. So I prophecied, as he had commaunded me: then came the brethe into them, and they receaued lyfe, and stode vp vpon their fete, a maruelous greate sorte.

Moreouer, he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israell. Behold, they saye: Oure bones dried vp, oure hope is gone, we are clene cut of. Therfore prophecie thou, and speake vn D to them: thus saieth the Lord God. Behold, I will open your graues (O my people) and take you out of your sepulcres, & bringe you into the lande of Israel agayne. So shall ye knowe that I am the Lorde, when I open your graues, and bringe you out of them. My spirite also will I put in you, and ye shall lyue: I will set you agayne in your awne lande, and ye shall knowe, that I am the Lord, which haue sayde it, and fulfilled it in dede.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: thou sonne of man, take a stycke & wryte vpon it. Vnto Juda and to the chyldren of Israell his companions. Then take another stycke, and write vpon it: Vnto Joseph the stock of Ephraim, & to all the house holde of Israell his companions. And than, take both these together in thyne hande, so E shall there be one stycke therof. Now yf the chyldren of thy people saye vnto the: wilt thou not shewe vs, what thou meanest by these? Then geue them this answere: thus * Ose.i.b. sayeth the Lord God: beholde, * I will take the stock of Joseph, which is in the hande of Ephraim and of the tribes of Israell his felowes, and will put them to the stock of Juda, and make them one stock, and they shall be one in my hande. And the two stickes where vpon thou writest, shalt thou haue in thyne hand, that they may se, and shalt saye vnto them.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: beholde, I F will take awaye the childrē of Israel from amonge the heathen, vnto whom they be gone, and will gather them together on euery syde, and bringe them agayne into their awne lande: yee, I will make one people of them in the lande, vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and they all shal haue but one kyng. They shall no more be two peoples frō hēce forth, nether be deuided into two kīgdomes: they shal also defile thē selues no more with their abhominatiōs, Idoles, & all their wycked doinges. I will helpe thē out of all their dwellinge places, wherin they haue synned: and wil so clense them, that they shalbe my people, and I their God.

G Dauid my seruaunt shalbe their kyng, & they al shal haue one shepherde onely. They shall walcke in my lawes, & my commaundementes shall they both kepe and fulfyll. They shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue vnto Jacob my seruaunt, where as your fathers also haue dwelt. Yee, euen in the same lande shal they, their chyldren, & their chylders chyldren dwell for euermore, & my seruaunt Dauid shalbe their euerlastinge prince. Moreouer, I wil make ☞ a bōde of peace w̄ them, which shalbe vnto them an euerlastinge couenaunt. I wil set le them also, & multiply them, my Sanctuary wil I set among them for euermore. * My dwellynge * Leu.xxvi. shalbe with them: yee, I will be their God, & they shal be my people. Thus the heathen also shal knowe, that I the Lord am the holy maker of Israell: when my Sanctuary shalbe amonge them for euermore.

¶ The.xxxviii. Chapter.

¶ The prophecieth that Gog and Magog shall come with an appointed hoste into the lande of promes. Their entent. He rehearseth the comming of Gog was before prophecied of the prophetes. The destruccion of hym.

AND the worde of the Lord came I vnto me, sayinge. Thou sonne of man, turne thy face ☞ towarde Gog the lande of Magog which is the cheke prince at Mesech and Tubal: prophecy agaynst hym, & saye. Thus sayeth the Lord God. * O Gog * Eze.xxxix. the cheke prince of Mesech and Tubal: beholde, I will vpon the, & will turne the aboute and put a bytt in thy chawes: I will bringe the forth and all thine hoost, both horse and horsmen, which be all weapened of the best fassion: a great people, the handle altogether spears, shildes, & swerdes: the Perses, Moryans and with them the Libiās, which all beare shildes and helmettes: Gomer and all his hoostes: the house of Thogorma out of the north quarters, and all his hoostes, yee, and moch people with the.

Therfore prepare the, set thy selfe in araye with all thy people, that are come vnto the by heapes, and be thou their defence. After many dayes thou shalt be visited, and in the latter yeares thou shalt come into the lande that hath bene destroyed with the swearde, & now is replenished agayne with diuerse people vpon the mountaines of Israel, which haue longe lyen waste. Yee, they be brought out of the nacions, and dwell all safe. Thou shalt come vp like a stormy wether, to couer the lande, & as it were a darck cloude, thou with all thine hostes, and a greate multitude of people with the.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lord God: At the same tyme shal many thinges come into thy mynde, so that thou shalt ymagyn myschefe, and saye: I wyll vp to yonder playne lande, seinge they syt at ease, & dwell so safely (for safely (for they dwell all without any walles D they haue nether barres nor dores) to spoyle the, to robbe the, to laye hāde vpon their so well habited wyldernesses: against that people, that is gathered together from amōge the heathen, which haue gotten catell and good, and dwell in the middest of the lande. Then shall Saba, and Dedan, and the marchantes of Tharsis with all their worthies saye vnto the: Art thou come to robbe? Hast thou gathered thy people together, because thou wilt spoyle? to take syluer and golde: to cary awaye catell and good, and to haue a greate praye?

E Therfore, O thou sonne of man, that shalt prophecie, and saye vnto Gog. Thus saieth the Lord God. In that daye thou shalt knowe that my people of Israel dwelleth safe: and shalt come from thy place out of the north partes, thou & moch people with the which ryde vpon horses, wherof there is a greate multitude and an innumerable sorte. Yee, thou shalt come vpon my people of Israell, as a cloude to couer the lande. Thys shall come to passe in the latter dayes: I will bringe the vp into my lande, that the heathē maye knowe me, whē I get me honoure vpon the (O Gog) before their eyes.

F Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Thou art he, of whom I haue spoken afore tyme by my seruaūtes the prophetes of Israel, which prophecied in those dayes and yeares, that I shuld bringe the vpon them. At the same tyme, when Gog commeth vp into the land of Israel (saieth the Lord God) shal my indignacion go forth in my wrath. For in my gelousy and hote displeasure I haue deuysed * that there shalbe a greate trouble i the * Dan.xii.a. lande of Israell at that tyme. The very fishes Mat.xxiiii.b in the see, the foules of the ayre, the beastes Luke.xxi.e of the felde, and all the men that are vpon the earth, shall tremble for feare of me.

G The hilles also shalbe turned vp side downe, the stayres of stone shal fall, and all walles shal syncke to the groūde. I will cal for a swearde vpon them in all my moūtaines sayeth the Lorde God: so that euery mans swearde shall be vpon another. With pestylence and bloude will I punische him: stormy rayne and hayle stones, fyre and brimstone will I cause to rayne vpon him and all his heape, yee, and vpon all that greate people that is with hym. Thus will I be magnifyed, honoured, & knowne amonge the heathen: that they maye be sure, howe that I am the Lorde.

¶ The.xxxix. Chapter.

¶ She weth the destruccion of Gog and Magog. The graue of Gog and of his hoste. He prophecieth that Gog & his company shalbe deuoured of byrdes and beastes, wherfore the house of Israell is wasted. Their bringinge agayne fro captiuitie is promysed.

THerfore, O thou sonne of man, prophecie agaynst Gog, and speake. Thus A sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde * O * Ezech.xxxviii.c. Gog: thou cheke prince at Mesech and Tubal, I wyll vpon the, and ☞ punyshe the with sixe plages, & leade the from the north partes, and bring the vp to the mountaines of Israell. As for thy bowe, I will smyte it out of thy left hāde, and cast thyne arowes out of thy right hāde. Thou with all thine heape, and all the people that is w̄ the, must fall vpon the mountaynes of Israell. Then will I geue the vnto fowles and wilde beastes of the felde, to be deuoured: there must thou lye vpon the felde: for euen I the Lord haue spoken it, sayeth the Lord God.

Into Magog, and among those that syt B so careles in the Iles: will I send a fyre, & they shal knowe, that I am the Lord. I wil make also the name of my holinesse to be knowne amōg my people of Israel: and I will not let my holy name be euel spoken of enymore: but the very heathen also shall knowe, that I am the Lord, the holy one of Israel. Behold, it commeth, and shalbe fulfilled in dede, sayeth the Lord God. This is the daye wherof I haue spokē. They that dwel in the cities of Israell, shall go forth and set fyre vpon the weapēs, and burne them: shyldes and speres, bowes and arowes, bylles & clubbes: seuē yeares shal they be burnynge therof, so that they shal els bringe no stickes frō the felde, nether haue nede to hewe downe eny out of the wodde. For they shal haue weapēs ynowe to burne. They shal robbe those C that robbed them, & spoyle those that spoyled them sayeth the Lord God. At the same tyme wil I geue vnto God, a place to be buried in Israel, euē the valley, where thorow men go from the east to the see warde. Those that trauayle therby, shall stoppe their noses for stenche. There shall Gog & all his people be buried: and it shalbe called the valley of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes longe shall the house of Israell be burynge of thē that they maye clense the lande. Yee, all the people of the lande shall burie them. O, it shall be a glorious daye, when I gette me that honoure, saieth the Lord God. They shal ordeyne mē also to be deed buriers, euer goynge thorow the lande, & appoynte them certayne places to bury those in, which remayne vpon the felde, that the lande maye be clensed. From ende to ende shall they seke, & D that seuē monethes longe. Now those that go thorow the lande, where they se a mans bone, they shalt set vp a tokē by it, tyll the deed buryers haue buried it also, in the valley of the people of Gog. And the name of the citie shal be called, Hamonah (that is a multitude). Thus shall they make the lande clene.

And thou sonne of man: thus sayeth the Lorde

Lord God. Speake vnto all the foules and euery byrde, yee, and to al the wilde beastes of the felde, heape you together and come, gather you rounde aboute vpon my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you: euē a greate
* Apo.xix.d. slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israell, eate flesh and drincke bloude. Ye shall *eate the flesh of the worthies, & drinke the bloud of the princes of the lande: of the wethers, of the lambes, of the goates, and of the oxen ꝑ be all slayne at Basan. Eate the fat your belyfull, and drincke bloude, tyll ye be dronken of the slaughter, whych I haue slayne vnto you. Fill you at my table with horses and stronge horsmen: with captaynes and men of warre, sayeth the Lord God.

F I will bringe my glory also amonge the Gentyles, that all the heathen maye se my iudgemēt, that I haue kepte, and my hand which I haue layed vpō them: that the house of Israell maye knowe, how that I am ꝑ Lord their God from that daye forth. And the heathen shall knowe, that where as the house of Israell were led into captiuyte: it was for their wyckednes sake, because they offended me.

For the which cause I hyd my face from them, and delyuered them into the hādes of their enemies, that they might all be slaine with the sweorde. Accordige to their vncle-nesse & vnfaithfull dealinges, so haue I entreated them, and hyd my face from them.

G Therfore, thus sayeth the Lord God: Now will I bringe agayne the captiues of Jacob & haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israel, and be gelous for my holy names sake
All their cōfusion and offence that they haue done agaynst me shall be taken awaye: & so safely shal they dwell in their lande, that no man shall make them afrayed. And whē
I haue brought them agayne from amōge
the people, when I haue gathered thē together out of their enemies landes, & am pray sed in them before many heathen: then shal they knowe, that I am the Lord their God which suffred thē to be led into captiuite amonge ꝑ Heathen, but now haue I brought them agayne into their awne lāde, and not left one of them ponder.

After that, will I hyde my face nomore *esa.xxvbi.d from thē *but will poure out my spyrete vpō the house of Israell, sayeth the Lorde God.

¶ The.xl. Chapter.

¶ The restoarynge of the cyties and of the temple that was to come is shewed vnto the Prophete.

IN the .xxv. yeare of oure captiuite, in the begynnynge of the yeare, the .x.
daye of the moneth: that is the .xiiii.
yeare, after that the cyte was smyten dowe-ne: the same daye came the hand of the Lorde vpon me, and caried me forth: euen into the lande of Israel brought he me in the visyons of God: & set me downe vpon a mar-uelous hye moūtayne, wher vpō there was a buylding (as it had bene of a cyte) toward the north.

Thyther he caried me, and beholde, there was a mā, whose similitude was like brasse, which had a threde of flax in his hande, & a meterode also. He stode in the doze, and sayd vnto me: marcke well with thine eyes, herken to with thine eares, and fasten it in thine hert, whatsoeuer I shal shewe the, for to that intent that they myght be shewed ꝑ therfore art ꝑ brought hyther. And whatsoeuer thou seyst, thou shalt certyfye ꝑ house of Israell therof.

Beholde, there was a wall on ꝑ out syde B roūde aboute the house: the meterodde that he had in his hande, was sixe cubytes long & a spanne. So he measured the bredth of the buyldinge, which was a meterodde, and the heygth also a meterode. Thē came he vnto the east doze, & wente vp the steares, & measured the postes of ꝑ doze, wherof euery one was a meterodde thicke. Enery chābre was a meterodde lōge & brode: betwene the chā-bers were fyue cubytes. The poste of ꝑ doze within the porche, was one meterodde. He measured also the porche of the ynnermer doze, which conteyned a meterodde. Then measured he the entrye of the doze, that con teyned eyght cubytes, & his pylers two cubytes: and this entrye stode inwarde.

The chābers of the doze eastwarde, were thre on euery syde: a lyke brode and longe.
The pilers also that stode of both the sydes C were of one measure. After this, he measured the wydenesse of the doze, which was .x.
cubytes, & the heygth of the doze .xiii. cubyt-es. The edge before the chambers was one cubyte brode vpon both the sydes, and the chambres six cubytes wyde of eyther syde.
He measured the doze from the rydge of one chambre to another, whose wydenesse was
xxv. cubytes, & one doze stode agaynst another. He made pilers also. lx. cubites hye, rounde about ꝑ courte doze. Before ꝑ iwarde parte vnto the fore entre of the ynnermer doze, were L. cubytes. The chambers and their pylers within, rounde about vnto the doze, had syde wyndowes. So had the fore entries also, whose wyndowes wēte roun-de about within. And vpon the pylers there stode date trees.

Then brought he me into the fore courte where as were chambers & paued worckes, made in the fore courte rounde aboute. xxx.
chambres vpō one paued worcke. Now the paued worke was a longe beside the dozes & ꝑ was the lower paued worke. After this he measured the bredth frō the lower doze, vnto the ynnermer courte of the outsyde, which had an. C. cubytes vpō the east & the D north

north parte. And the doze in the vttermoste court towarde the north, measured he after the lēgth and bredth: hys thre chambres also on ether syde with his pillers and forētrves:
which had euen the measure of the first doze.
His heygth was. l. cubytes, the bredth .xxv.
cubites, hys wyndowes & porches with hys date trees, had euen lyke measure as the dore towarde the east: there were. viij. steppes to go vp vpon, and their porche before them.
Nowe the doze of the ynnermer court stode streyght ouer agaynst the doze, ꝑ was to-warde the northeast. Frō one doze to another he measured. C. cubytes.

D After that, he brought me to ꝑ southsyde,
where there stode a doze towarde the south:
whose pillers and porches he measured, these had the fyrst measure, and with their porches they had windowes rounde about, like the fyrst wyndowes. The heygth was. l. cu-bites, the bredth .xxv. with steppes to go vp vpon: hys porche stode before with hys pyl-lers and date trees on ether side. And the dore of the ynnermer courte stode towarde the south, and he measured from one doze to another an. C. cubites. So he brought me into the ynnermer court, thorowe the doze of the southsyde, which he measured: and it had the measure aforsayde. In lyke maner, hys chābres, pyllers and forentreys, had euē the foresayde measure also. And he had with hys porches roūde about windowes of fifty cu-bites heygth, and .xxv. cubytes brode. The porches roūd about were .xxv. cubites lōge, and. v. cubites brode: and his porche reached vnto the vttermost court, vpon his pyllers, there were date trees, and eyght steppes to go vp vpon.

E He brought me also into the ynmost court vpō the east syde, and measured the doze, according to the measure aforsayd. His chambers, pyllers and porches had euen the same measure, as the fyrst had: and with hys porches, he had wyndowes rounde about. The heygth was. l. cubytes, the bredth .xxv. cubi-tes: hys porche reached vnto the vttermost court: his pillers also had date trees on ether syde, & .viij. steppes to go vp vpon. And he brought me to the north doze & measured it:
which also had ꝑ forsayde measure. His chābres, pillers & porches had windowes roūde about: whose heyght was. l. cubites, and the bredth .xxv. Hys pyllers stode towarde the vtmost court, and vpō them both were date trees, and. viij. steppes to go vp vpon. Ther stode a chambre also, whose intraunce was at the doze pyllers, and there the burntofferynges were washed.

F In the doze porche, there stode on eyther syde two tables for the slaughtinge: to sleye the brentofferinges, synofferynges and trespaceofferinges therupō. And on the outside as men go forth to the north doze, ther stode two tables. Foure tables stode on ether side of the doze, that is. viij. tables: wherupon they slaughted. Foure tables were of hewē stone for the burntoffringes, of a cubite and a halfe longe and brode, and one cubite hye:
wherupon were layed the vessels and orna-mentes, which were vsed to the burnt and slayne offerynges: whā they were slaughted.
And within, there were hokes foure fingers brode, fastened rounde about, to hange flesh vpon, and vpon the tables was layed ꝑ ofefryng flesshe. On the out syde of the innermer doze were the syngers chambers in the inwarde court belyde the north doze ouergaynst the south. There stode one also, beside the east doze northwarde.

And he sayde vnto me: This chambre on G
the south syde belongeth to the prestes, that kepe the habytatyon: and this towarde the north, * is the prestes that wayte vpon the * 1.Pa.xxiv.a aulter: which be the sonnes of ‡ Sadoch, that ‡ iii.Reg.ij.c do seruice before the Lorde in steade of the chyldren of Leui. So he measured the fore court, which had in lēgth an. C. cubites, and asmoch in bredth by the foure corners. Now the aulter stode before the house. And he brought me to the fore entrye of the house, and measured the walles by the entry doze: which were. v. cubites longe on eyther syde. The thyckenes also of the doze on eyther syde was thre cubites. The length of the porche was
xx. cubites, the bredth .xi. cubites, and vpon steppes went men vp to it: by the walles also were pyllers on eyther syde one.

¶ The.xlj. Chapter.

¶ The disposytion and deuyce of buylding agayne the temple, & of the other thinges therto belōgyng.

AFter this, he brought me to the A tēple, and measured the postes, which were of both sydes syre cubites thicke, accordyng to the widenes of the tabernacle. The bredth of ꝑ doze was .x. cubites, & the wal-les of the dore on eyther syde. v. cubites. He measured the length therof, which cōteyned xl. cubites, & the bredth .xx. Then went he in & measured the doze postes: which were two cubites thicke: but the doze it selfe was syxe cubites, and the bredth of the doze was, viij.
cubites. He measured the length and bredth therof, which were euery one .xx. cubites, before the temple.

And he sayde vnto me: this is the holiest of all. He measured also the wall of the house, which was. vi. cubites. The chābres that stode roūde about the house, were euery one iiij. cubites wyde: and one stode harde vpon another, wherof ther were .xxxiij. ther stode postes beneth by the walles roūde about the house, to beare thē vp: but in the wall of the house, they were not fastened. The syde

DD cham-

chambres were, ꝑ hyer ꝑ wyder, & had steppes thorowe them rounde about the house.
Thus was it wyder above, ꝑ frō the lowest
B men myght go to the hyest by ꝑ mydd chābres. I sawe also ꝑ the house was very hye rounde aboute. The foundatyon of the syde chābres was a meterodde, yis. vi. cubites broade. The thicknes of the syde wall without, contened. v. cubites, and so dyd the out wall of the chambres in the house.

Betwene the chambres was the wydenes. xx. cubites rounde about the house. The chambre dores stode ouer agaynst the out wall, the one dore was toward ꝑ north, the other towarde the south: and the thyckenesse of the out wall was. v. cubites rounde about Nowe the buylding that was separated towarde the west, was. lxx. cubites wyde: the wall of the buylding was. v. cubytes thicke rounde about, and the length foure score cubites & ten. So he measured the house which was an. C. cubytes longe, and the separated buylding with the wall were an. C. cubytes longe also. The wydenes before the house, and of it that was separated towarde the C east, was an. C. cubytes.

And he measured the length of the buylding before and behynde with the chambres vpon both the sydes: and it conteyned an. C. cubytes. The vnnermer temple, the porch of the fore court, the syde postes, these thre had syde wyndowes and pyllers rounde about oueragaynst the postes, frō the grounde vp to the wyndowes. The wyndowes thē selues were syled ouer with bordes: and thus was it above ꝑ dore vnto the vnmost house: and without also. Yee, the whole wall on euery syde both within and without was sīled ouer with great bordes. There were cherubins and date trees made also, so that one
D date tree stode euer betwixte to cherubyns. One cherub had two faces, the face of a mā lokyng alyde toward the date tree, & a lions face on the other syde. Thus was it made rounde about in all the house. Yee, the cherubyns and date trees were made from the grounde vp above the dore, and so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

The bypostes of the temple were foure squared, and the fashyon of the sanctuarye was * euē as it appeared vnto me afore in ꝑ visiō. * The table was of wodde. iij. cubites hye and. ij. cubytes longe: hys corners, the length & the walles were of wodde. And he sayde vnto me: Thys is the table, that shall stande before the Lorde. The temple and the holyest of all had eyther of them two dores: and euery dore had. ij. lytle wyckettes which were folde in one vpō another, on euery side two. And vpon the dores of the temple, ther were made cherubins and date trees, like as vpon the walles: and a greate thycke balke of wodde was before on the out syde of the porche. Upō both the sydes of the walles of the porch, there were made depe wyndowes and date trees, hauyng beames and balkes, lyke as the house had.

Of the chambres of the temple for the prestes, and the holy thynges.

Then caryed he me out into ꝑ fore court towarde the north, & brought me into the chambre ꝑ stode ouer agaynst the backbuyldinge
A north ward, which had the lēgth of an. C. cubytes: whose dore turned toward the north. The wydenes conteyned. l. cubytes: ouer agaynst the. xx. cubytes of the vnnermer court, and agaynst the paued worke that was in the court, besyde all these thre, ther stode pillers, one ouer agaynst another: And before thys chambre there was a walkyng place of. x. cubites wyde, and within was a waye of one cubite wyde ād their dores towarde the north. Thus the hyest chābres were alwaye narower then the lowest and myddelmost of the buyldynge: for they bare chambre vpon chambre, and stode thre together one vpon another, not hauyng pillers lyke the fore court: therfore were they smaller then those beneth and in the middest to reken from the grounde vpwarde.

The wall without that stode by the chā-
B bres towarde the vtmost court vpō the fore syde of the chambres, was. l. cubytes longe: for the length of the vtmost chambres in the fore court was. l. cubytes also: but the lēgth therof before the temple was an. C. cubytes. These chambres had vnder them an intraūce of the east syde, wherby a man myght go in to them out of the fore court, thorowe the thicke wall of the fore court towarde ꝑ east, ryght ouer agaynst the separated buylding. Before the same buyldyng vpon thys syde, there were chambres also which had a waye vnto them, lyke as the chambre on the north syde of the same length and wydenesse.

They intraunce, fashyō and dores were
C also of the same maner. Yee, euen lyke as the other chambre dores were: so were those also of the south syde. And before the waye towarde the syngers steppes on the east syde, there stode a dore to go in at. Then sayde he vnto me: The chābers towarde the north & the south which stāde before the backe buyldynge: those be holy habytatyons, wherein the prestes that do serupce before the Lorde, must eate ꝑ most holy offerynges: and there must they laye ꝑ most holy offeringes, meat offerynges, synne offerynges, and trespace offerynges: for it is an holy place. When the prestes come therin, they shall not go out into the fore courte: but (seynge they be holy) they shall leaue the clothes of their ministration, cyon, and put on other garmētes, when they haue any thyng to do with the people.

Nowe whē he had measured all the vnner-
D mer house, he brought me forth thorowe the east porte, and measured the same rounde about. He measured the east syde with ꝑ meterode, which rounde about conteyned. v. C. meterodde: And the north syde measured he which conteyned rounde about euē so moch. The other two sydes also towarde the south and the west, which he measured, conteyned ether of them. v. C. meterodde. So he measured all the foure sydes, where there went a wall rounde aboute. v. C. meterodde lōge, and as broade also which separated the holy from the vnholy.

The. xliij. Chapter.

The seeth the glory of God goyng into the temple, from whence it had before departed. He menyoneth the ydolatry of the children of Israel, for which they were consumed and brought to naught. He is cōmaūded to call them agayne to repentaunce.

So he brought me to the dore ꝑ turneth toward the east. Behold, then
A came the glory of the God of Israel frō out of ꝑ east, whose voyce was lyke a great noyse of waters, and the earth was lyghtened with his glory. His syght to

I heard one speaking vnto me out of the B house: and there stode one by me, that sayde vnto me: O thou sonne of man, * this rowme is my seate, & the place of my fotesteppes,
* Eze. xl. a. and. xlvi. a. & po. xli. a where as I wyll dwell amonge the children of Israel for euermore: so that the house of Israel shall nomore defyle my holy name: nether they, ner their kynges thorowe their whordome, thorowe their hye places, & thorowe the deed bodyes of their kinges: which haue builded their thresholdes i maner hard vpō my thresholdes, & their postes almost at my postes: & a wall betwyxte me and them.

Thus haue they defyled my holy name

And when they be ashamed of all their D workes, then shewe them the fourme & fashyon of the temple, the comming in, the goynge out, all the maner and descripcyō therof: yee, all the vses & ordinaunces of it, that they maye kepe and fulfyll all the fashyons and customes therof.

This is the descriptiō of ꝑ house. Above,
D vpon the mount roūde about all the corners, it shalbe ꝑ holyest of all. Beholde, that is the descripcyon and fashyon of the house. Thys is the measure of the aultar, after the true cubite: which is a spāne longer then another cubyte, his botome in the middest was a cubite longe and wyde, and the ledge that wēt rounde about it, was a spanne broade. This is the heyght of the aulter. From the ground to the lower steppes, the length is two cubites: and the bredth one cubite: and from the lower steppes to the higher, are foure cubytes, and the bredth but one cubite.

* The aultar was. iiij. cubytes hye, and * cro. xxvij. a from the aultar vpwarde stode. iiij. hornes, and it was. xij. cubytes lōge and. xij. cubites broade, vpon the foure corners: the couering of the aultar was. xiiij. cubites lōge & broad vpon the foure corners, and the ledge that E went rounde about had halfe a cubite, and ꝑ botome therof rounde about one cubite: hys steppes stode towarde the east. And he sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thus sayth the Lorde God: these are the ordynaunces and lawes of the aultar: in the daye, whan it is made to offer burntofferinges, and to sprenckle bloude therupon. To the prestes, to the leuites that be of the sede of * Sadoch, and * Exe. xliiij. c and. xlviij. b treade before me to do me serupce, sayeth the Lorde God. * Thou shalte take the bullocke also of the * Leui. xvi. c synoffering, and burne him in a seuerall pla-
F ce without the sanctuary.

The next daye, take a goatbucke, wout blemyth for a synofferynge, to reconcyle the aultar withall, lyke as it was reconcyled wō the bullocke. Nowe whan thou hast made it cleane, then offre a yonge bullocke * without * Leui. xxiij. c blemyth, and a rāme out of the flocke without blemyth also. G Seuen dayes shalt thou bryngе euery daye a goatbuck. A yonge bullocke and a ramme of the flocke, both without blemyth, shall they offre. Seuen dayes shall they reconcyle and clense the aultar, and offre vpon it. Whē these dayes are expyred, then vpon the eight daye and so forth, the prestes shall offre their burntofferinges and healthofferinges vpon the aultar: so will I be mercyfull vnto you, sayth the Lorde God.

¶The.xliij.Chapter.

¶He sheweth what doze of the temple is shut. He is commaunded to vpbrayd the people with their offence. The vncircumcised in hert and in the flesshe. Who are to be admitted to the seruice of the temple: & who to be refused. He sheweth what prestes he wold haue admitted into the holy place, and also theyr office.

A After this, he brought me againe to the outwarde doze of the sanctuary on the east syde, and that was shut. Thē sayd ꝑ Lozd vnto me: This doze shalbe styll shut: & not opened foz eny mā to go thozowe it: but only foz ꝑ Lozde God of Israel: yee, he shall go thozowe it, els shall it be shut styll. The prince hym selfe shall come thozowe it, that he maye eate bread befoze the Lozde. At the pozche shall he come in, and there shall he go out againe. Then brought he me to the doze vpon the nozth syde of the house. And as I loked aboute me, beholde, *the glozy of the Lozd fylled the house: and I fell downe vpō my face. So the Lozde spake vnto me: O ꝑ sonne of man, fasten thys to thyne herte: beholde, and take diligent hede to all ꝑ I wyll saye vnto the, concernyng all the ozdynaunces of the Lozd, & all his lawes: pondze well with thyne hert the cōmynge in of the house and the goyng fozth of the sanctuary: & tell that obstynate houshold of Israell. Thus sayth the Lozde God: O house of Israel, ye haue nowe don ynough withall youre abhominacyons, seyng that ye haue brought into my sanctuary straungers, hauyng vncircumcysed hertes and flesshe, where thozowe my sanctuary is defyled, when ye offre me bread, fatt, and blonde.

Thus with all youre abhominacions ye haue broken my couenaūt, and not kepte the holy ozdynaunces of my sanctuary: but sett kepers of my sanctuary, euen after youre awne mynde. Therfoze thus sayth the Lozde God: Of all the straūgers that dwell amōg the chyldzen of Israel, no straunger (whose hert and flesshe is not circumcised) shall come within my sanctuary. No, ner the leuites that ben gone backe fro me: and haue disceaued the people of Israel with all errources, goyng after theyr ydoles: therfoze shall they beare their awne wyckednes. Shulde they be set and ozdeined to ministre vnder the dozes of the house of my sanctuary? And to do seruyce in the house: to slaye burntofferynges and sacrifyces foz the people: to stande befoze thē, and to serue them, seynge the seruyce that they do them, is befoze theyr ydoles, and cause the house of Israel to stomble thozowe theyr wickednes? * Foz the which cause I haue pluckte oute myne hande ouer them, sayth the Lozde, so ꝑ nowe they must beare theyr awne iniquitie, and not to come nye me, to serue me with theyr prestlode, in my sanctuary, and moost holyest of all: that they maye beare theyr awne shame and abhominacyons, which they haue done. Shulde I vse them to be pozters of the house, and to all the seruyce that is done therin? But the prestes, the leuites, the sonne of * Sadoch, that kepte the holy ozdynaunces of my sanctuary, whē the chyldzē of Israel were gone fro me, shall come to me, to do me seruyce, to stande befoze me, and to offre me the fat and the blonde, sayth the Lozde God.

They shall go into my sanctuary, and treade befoze my table: to do me seruyce, and to wayte vpon myne ozdynaunces. Nowe when they go in at ꝑ dozes of the ynnermer court: they shall put on lynen clothes, so that no wollyne come vpon them whyle they do seruice vnder the dozes of ꝑ innermer court, and within. They shall haue fayre linen bonettes vpō their heades, and lynen bzeches vpō their loynes, which in their labour they shall not put about them. And whē they go fozth to the people into the outwarde court, they shall put of the clothes wherin they haue ministred, and laye them in the habitatiō of the sanctuary, and put on other apparell, lest they vnhalowe the people with theyr clothes.

* They shall not shaue theyr heades, ner nozyth the bushe of theyr heare, but rounde theyr heades onely. * All the prestes that go into the inmost court, shall dzyncke no wyne. † They shall mary no wedowe, nether one that is put frō her husbāde: but a mayde of the seede of the house of Israel, oz a wedowe that hath had a prestе befoze.

* They shall shewe my people the difference betwene the holy and vnholy, betwixt the cleane and vncleane. If any discozd arise, they shall discerne it: & geue sentence after my iudgementes. Moreouer my solempne feastes, my lawes and ozdinaunces shall they kepe, and halowe my sabbathes. ☞ * They shall come at no deed persone to defyle them selues, except it be father oz mother, sōne oz daughter, bzother oz syster, that hath had yet no husbande, in soch maye they be defyled.

And when he is clensed, ther shalbe reckened vnto him. vij. dayes: and yf he go into ꝑ sanctuary agayn to do seruice, he shall bzing a synoffering, sayth the Lozde God. * They shall haue an heritage: yee, I my selfe wyll be their heritage: els shall ye geue thē no possession in Israel, foz I am their possessyon. The meatofferynges, synofferyng and trespaceofferinge shall they eate, & ☞ euery dedicate thynge in Israel, shalbe theyrs. The fyrstlinges of all the fyrst frutes, and all freywillofferinges shalbe the prestes.

Ye shall geue vnto the preste also all the fyrst frute of your first bozne, all I saye, & all that is separated vnto God, all youre heue offeringes (I saye) shalbe the prestes, & also ꝑ fyrstlinges of youre dough, ꝑ God maye pzospere spere the residue. * But no deed carcon shall the prest eate, ner soch as is deuoured of wilde beastes, foules oz catell:

¶The.xlv Chapter.

¶Out of all the lāde of promes ar ther separate.iiii. portcions, of which the fyrst is geuē to the prestes and to the temple, the seconde to the leuytes: the thyrde to the cītye: the fourth to the pzynce. An exhoztacyon to the heades of Israel. Of iust weyghtes and measures. Of fyrst frutes. &c.

A When ye deuyde the lāde by the lot, ye shall put a lyde one * parte foz the Lozde, to be holy from other landes: namely. xxv. M. meteroddes lōge, and. x. M. bzoade. This shalbe holy, as wyde as it is rounde about. Of thys parte there shall belonge vnto the sanctuary v. C. meteroddes in all the foure cozners, & .l. cubites wyde rounde about to the suburbes And from this measure, namely of .xxv. M. meteroddes lōge, & .x. M. bzoade, thou shalt measure, wherin the sanctuary and the holyest of all maye stande.

The residue of that holy grounde shalbe the prestes, which do seruyce in the sanctuary of the Lozde, and goo in befoze the Lozde to seruc hym, that they maye haue rowme to dwell in.

B As foz the sanctuary, it shall stande foz it selfe: and to the leuites that serue in the house, there shalbe geuen .xx. habitatyons, of the xxv. M. legth and .x. M. bredth: ye shall geue also vnto the cītye a possession of .v. M. meteroddes bzode, and .xxv. M. lōge, beside the parte of the sanctuary: that shalbe foz the whole house of Israel. * Upon both the sydes of the sanctuaryes parte, and by the cytie, there shalbe geuen vnto the pzince, what soeuer lyeth oueragaynst the cītye, as farre as reacheth westwarde & eastwarde: which shalbe as longe as one parte, from the west vnto the east.

This shalbe hys awne lande in Israel, ꝑ my pzynces be nomoze chargeable vnto my people. And soch as remaynceth yet ouer in ꝑ lande, shalbe geuen to the house of Israel accozding to theyr tribes. Thus sayth ꝑ Lozd God: O ye pzinces, ye haue nowe oppzessed and destroyed ynough: nowe leaue of, handle nowe accozding to the thynge ꝑ is equall and lawfull: & thzust out my people nomoze sayth the Lozde God. * Ye shall haue a true weyght, a true ephah, and a true bath. The ephah and the bath shalbe a lyke. One bath shall conteyne the tenth parte of an homer, and so shall one ephah do: their measure shall be after the homer. * One syckle maketh .xx: geras. So twentye sycles, and .xxv. and .xv. sycles make a pounde. Thys is the heaueofferynge, that ye shall geue to be heaued: namely, the .xvj. parte of an ephah, out of an homer of wheate, and the .xvj. parte of an ephah, out of an homer of barly. The oyle shalbe measured with the bath: euen the tēth parte of one bath out of a coz.

Ten bathes make one homer: foz one homer fylleth ten bathes. And one lambe from two hundzed shepe out of the pasture of Israel: foz a meatofferyng, burntofferyng, and healthofferyng, to reconcyle them, sayth the Lozde God. All the people of the lande shall geue thys heaueofferynge with a fre wyll. Agayne, it shalbe the pzinces parte to offre burntofferynges, meateofferinges & drinckofferinges vnto the Lord, in the holy dayes, newe moones, sabbathes, and in all the hye feastes of the house of Israel. The synoffering, meateofferyng, burntoffring & healthofferyng shall he geue to reconcyle the house of Israel. Thus sayth the Lozde God: The fyrst daye of the first moneth thou shalt take a ponge bullocke without blemysh, and clēse the sanctuarye. So the preste shall take of the bloude of the synofferyng, and spzynckle it vnto the postes of the house, and vpon the foure cozners of the aulter, with the dozeposstes of the innermer courte. And thus shalt thou do also the seuenth daye of the moneth * (foz soch as haue synned of ignozaunce, oz beynge disceaued) to reconcyle the house wall. * Upon the .xiij. daye of the fyrst moneth, ye shall kepe easter. Seuen dayes shall the feaste contynue, wherin there shall no sowze ner leuened bzeed be eaten.

Upon the same daye shall the pzince geue foz him selfe & all the people of the lande, a bullocke foz a synoffering. And in the feast of the seuen dayes he shall offre euery daye a bullocke and a ram, ꝑ are without blemysh, foz a burntoffering vnto ꝑ Lozde: and an hegeate daylye foz a synoffering. Foz ꝑ meatofferynges he shall geue euer an ephah to a bullocke, an ephah to a ram, and an hyn of oyle to an ephah. Upon the fyfteenth daye of the seuenth moneth, he shall kepe the seuen dayes holy, one after another, euen as the other seuen dayes: wt the synoffering, burntoffering, meatoffering, and with the oyle.

¶The.xlvi.Chapter.

¶The sacrifyces of the Sabboth and of the newe moones. Thozowe which dozes they must go in, or come out of the temple. &c.

Thus sayth the Lozde God: ꝑ doze of the innermer court towarde ꝑ east shalbe shut the vj. wozcking dayes: but in the sabboth and in the daye of the newe moone, it shalbe opened. Then shall ꝑ pzince come vnder the doze pozche, and stande still wout by the doze check. So the prestes shall offre vp his burnt and healthofferinges. And he shall wozchyp at the dozeposte, and go hys waye fozth agayne: but the doze shall nomoze be shut tyll the euenynge.

On the same maner shall the people of the lande also do their wozchyp befoze ꝑ Lozde without thys doze vpon the sabbathes and newe moones. This is nowe the burntofferyng, ỹ the prince shall bryng vnto ỹ Lorde vpon the sabboth: syxe lambes without blemysh, ād a ram without blemish, & an ephah for a meatoffering, with the ram. As for the lābes, he maye geue as many meatofferinges to them as he will: and an hyn of oyle to an ephah. In the daye of the newe moneth, it shalbe a yonge bullocke without blemish, syxe lābes and a ram also without blemish. With the bullocke he shall geue an ephah, & with the ram an ephah also for a meatoffering: but to the lambes, what he maye come by. And euer an hyn of oyle to an ephah.

C When the prynce cōmeth, he shall go vnder the doze porche, and euen there departe forth agayne. But when the people of the lande come before the Lord in the hye solēpne feaste, as many as come in by the north doze to do worshyp, shall go out agayne at the south doze. And they that come in at the south doze, shall go forth agayne at ỹ north doze. There shall none goo out at the doze, where he came in, but shall go ryght forth ouer on the other syde, and the prynce shall go in and out amonge them.

D Upon the solempne and hye feaste dayes this shalbe the meatofferyng. An ephah to a bullocke and an ephah to a ram, and to the lambes, as many as he will: but euer an hyn of oyle to an ephah. Nowe when the prynce bryngeth a burntofferyng or an healthoffering with a free wyll vnto the Lorde, ỹ east doze shalbe opened vnto hym, that he maye do with his burnt and healthofferinges, as he doth vpon the sabboth: and when he goth forth, the doze shalbe shut after him agayne. He shall dayly bryng vnto the Lorde a lābe of a yeare olde without blemysh for a burnt offering: this shall he do euery morning.

E And for a meatoffering, he shall geue the syxte parte of an ephah, and the thyrd part of an hyn of oyle, to myngle with the cakes, euery morning. Yee, this shalbe a dayly meatofferinge vnto the Lorde: for an euerlasting ordinaunce: and thus shall the lambe meatoffering and oyle be geuen euery morning, for a daylye burntofferinge.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God: If the prynce gyue a gyfte vnto any of hys sonnes, then shall it be hys sonnes heritage perpetuall, that he maye possesse it. But yf he wyll geue one of hys seruauntes, some of hys heritage, it shalbe hys ☞ to the * fre yeare, and then to returne agayne vnto the prince: for hys heritage shalbe hys sonnes onely. * The prince also shall take none of the peoples enheritaunce, ner put them from their possession: but to his awne sonnes shall he geue his possession, that my people be not scatered abroade, but that euery man maye haue hys awne.

* Exod.xxi.a Nu.xxxvi.c

* iiij.Reg.viij.b

And he brought me thorowe the intraūce at the syde of the doze to the habitatyō of the sanctuary, that belongeth to the prestes and stode towarde the north, and beholde, there was a place vpon the west syde, then sayde G he vnto me. This is the place where the prestes shall dyght the trespace and synofferynges, and bake meateofferinges, ỹ they nede not beare them into the outwarde court: and so to vnhalowe the people. So he brought me into the vtmost courte, rounde about all the foure corners. Beholde, in euery corner of the court, there was yet a lytle courte. Yee in all the foure corners of ỹ court, there was made a lytle court of .xl. cubites lōge, & .xxx. cubites broade: these foure lytle courtes were of one like measure: and there went a ridge wall rounde about them all foure, vnder the which there were harthes made rounde about. Then sayde he vnto me: Thys is the kechin where the ministers of the house shall dyght the slayne offeringes of the people.

¶ The .xlvij. Chapter.

¶ The bisyon of the waters that came out of the temple. The coastes of the lande of promes, and ỹ diuisyon therof by trybes.

A Fter this, he brought me agayne before the doze of the house: A and beholde, there gushed oute waters from vnder the postes of the house eastwarde, for the house stode towarde the east, that ran downe vpon the ryght syde of the house, which lyeth to ỹ aulter southwarde. Then caryed he me out to the north doze, and brought me forth there rounde about by the vtmost doze that turneth eastwarde. * Beholde, there came forth the water vpō the right syde. Now whā the man that had the meterodde in hys hande went vnto the east doze, he measured a .M. cubites, and then he brought me thorowe the water, euē to the ancles: so he measured yet a thousande, and brought me thorowe the water agayne vnto the knees: yet measured he a thousande, and brought me thorowe the water vnto the loynes. After this he measured a thousande agayne, then B was it such a ryuer, that I myght not wade thorowe it. The water was so depe, that it was nedeful to haue swimmed, for it might not be waded ouer. And he sayde vnto me: hast thou sene thys, O thou sonne of man? and with that, he brought me to the ryuer banck agayne.

* Zach.xiij.a and.xiiij.b

Nowe when I came there, there stode many trees vpon either syde of the ryuer bancke. Then sayde he vnto me: Thys water that floweth oute towarde the east, and runneth downe into the playne felde, commeth into the see: and from the see runneth out: & maketh the waters whole. Yee, all that lyue & moue, whervnto thys ryuer commeth, shall recouer, recouer. * And where thys water commeth, ther shalbe moch fysh. For all that † cōmeth to this water, shalbe lusty and whole. By this ryuer shall the fyshers stāde from Engaddy vnto En Eglaim, & there spread out their nettes: for there shalbe great heapes of fysh, lyke as in the mayne see. As for his clay e and pyttes, they shall not be whole, for why? it shalbe occupyed for salt.

* Mat.xiij.c and.xiij.f † Joh. iiij.a. and.viij.d

C By this ryuer vpon both the sides of the shore, there shall growe all maner of frutefull trees, whose leaues shall not fall of, ner ther shall their frute perysh: but euer be rype at theyr monethes: for theyr water runneth oute of theyr sanctuarye. Hys frute is good to eate, and his leafe profytable for medicyne. Thus sayth the Lorde God: Let thys be the border, wherin ye shall deuyde the lande vnto the .xii. tribes of Israel, with the lyne. Parte it indyfferētly vnto one as vnto another: * of the which lande I swore vnto yō fathers, that it shulde fall to youre enherytaunce.

* Gene.xxvi.c

This is the border of the lande vpon the northsyde, from the mayne see, as men go to zadada: namely Hemath, Berotha, Sabarim: from the borders of Damascus and Hemath vnto Hazar Tichon, and ỹ lieth vpon the coastes of Haueran. Thus the borders frō the see forth, shalbe Hazar Euan the border of Damascus, the north and the borders of Hemath, that is the north parte.

The east syde shall ye measure from Haueran and Damascus, from Galead and the lande of Israel by Jordane and so forth, frō the see coast, that lyeth eastwarde: and this is the east parte.

D The southsyde is, from Thamar forth to the * waters of stryfe vnto Cades the ryuer to the mayne see: and that is the south parte.

* Nume.xx.b Deu.xxij.b

The west parte: namely the greate see frō the borders therof, tyll a mā come vnto Hemath: thys is the west parte.

* Nu.xxxiiij.c

* Thys lande shall ye parte among you, accordyng to the trybes of Israel, and deuyde it to be an heritage for you, * and for the straungers that dwell amonge you, and beget children. For ye shall take them amonge the chyldren of Israel, lyke as though they were of youre awne housholde and contrey, and they shall haue heritage wt you amonge the chyldren of Israel.

* Leuit.xix.g Deu.x.d and.xxiij.c

Loke in what trybe the straunger dwelleth, in the same trybe shall ye geue hym hys heritage, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ The .xlviij. Chapter.

¶ The lottes of the .xij. trybes. The partes of the possession of the prestes and of the temple, of the leuites, of the citye, of the prynce are rehearced. The lottes of the other trybes. The gates of the citye.

A These are the names of the trybes that lye vpon the northsyde, by the waye of Hetlon, tyll thou cōmest vnto Hemath and Hazar Enam, the borders of Damascus towarde the north besyde Hemath: Dan shall haue hys porcyon from the east quarter vnto the west. Upon the borders of Dan from the east syde vnto the west, shall Asser haue his porcion. Upon the borders of Asser from the east parte vnto the west shall Nephtaly haue his porcion.

Upon the borders of Nephtaly from the east quarter vnto the west, shall Manasses haue his porcyon. Upon the borders of Manasses from the east side vnto the west, shall Ephraim haue hys porcyon. Upon the borders of Ephraim from the east parte vnto ỹ west, shall Ruben haue hys porcyon. Upon the borders of Ruben from the east quarter vnto the west, shall Juda haue his porcyon. Upon the borders of Juda frō the east part vnto the west, ye shall set a syde one porcion of .xxv. M. meteroddes longe and brode, like as an another porcyon frō the east syde vnto the west, wherin the sanctuary shall stande.

* Eze.xlv.a. * As for the porcyō that ye shall separate, out for the Lorde, it shalbe .xxv. M. longe & .x. M. brode. Which separated holy porcion shall belonge vnto these: namely to the prestes, towarde the north .xxv. M. and towarde the west .x. M. brode, towarde the east .x. M. brode also, & towarde the south .xxv. M. longe, wherin ỹ sanctuary of the Lord shall stāde. Yee, this same place shalbe the prestes, that are of the children of * Sadoch and haue kept my holy ordinaūce: which went not astraye in the erroure of the children of Israel, lyke as the leuites ar gone astraye: and thys separated pece that they haue of lande, shalbe the most holy, harde vpō the borders of the leuites. And next vnto ỹ prestes shall the leuites haue .xxv. M. longe, and .x. M. broade. Thys shalbe on euery syde .xxv. M. longe, and .x. M. brode. Of this porcyō they shall sell nothing, ner make any permutatiō therof, lest the chefe of the lande fall vnto other, for it is halowed vnto the Lorde.

* Eze.xliij.b and.xliiij.c

The other .v. M. after the bredth ỹ lyeth by the .xxv. M. shalbe comē: it shall belonge to the citye and to the suburbes for habitations, and the citie shall stāde in the middest therof. Let this be the measure: towarde the north parte .v. C. & .iiij. M. towarde ỹ south parte .v. C. & .iiij. M. towarde the east part, .v. C. & .iiij. M. towarde the west parte .v. C. and .iiij. M.

The suburbes harde vpon the citye, shall haue towarde the north .l. and .ij. C. towarde the south .l. and .ij. C. towarde the east .l. and .ij. C. towarde the west also .l. and .ij. C. As for the residue of the length, that lyeth harde vpon the separated holy grounde: namely .x. M. towarde the east, and .x. M. towarde the west, nexte vnto the holy porcion: it and the increase therof shall serue for their meat:

that laboure in the citye. They that laboure for the wealth of the citye, shall mayntayne thys also, out of what tribe soeuer they be in Israel.

All that is separated of the .xxv. M. lōge and .xxv. M. brode on the foure partes, that shall ye put aside for the separated porcyon of the sanctuary, and for the possession of the citye. The residue vpon both the sides of the sanctuary and possessyon of the citye, shall belonge to the prynce, before the place of the xxv. M. vnto the eastende, & before the place of the .xxv. M. westwarde vnto the borders of the citye: this shalbe the prynces porcyon. Thys shalbe the holy place, and the house of the sanctuary shall stande in the myddest. Moreouer, from the leuytes and the citys possession, that lye in the middest of the princes parte: loke what remayneth betwixt the border of Juda and the border of Beniamin, it shalbe the princes.

Nowe of the other tribes.

From the east parte vnto the west, shall Beniamin haue his porcyon. Upon the borders of Beniamin from the eastside vnto ỹ west, shall Simeon haue his porcion. Upon the borders of Symeon from the east parte vnto the west, shall Issakar haue his porciō. Upon the borders of Issakar from the east syde vnto the west, shall Zabulon haue hys porcion. Upon the borders of Zabulon from the east parte vnto the west, shall Gad haue his porcyon. Upō the borders of Gad southward, the coastes shall reach from Thamar forth vnto the waters of stryfe to Cades, & to the floude, euen vnto the mayne see.

Ezech.xlvii.. Jos.xiii. xiiij

Thys is the lande with hys * porcyons, which ye shall dystribute vnto the trybes of Israel, sayeth the Lorde God. Thus wyde shall the citye reach vpon the northy parte. v. C. and .iiij. M. measures. The portes of the citye, shall haue the names of the trybes of Israel. Thre portes of the northside: one Ruben, another Juda, the thyrde Leui.

Upon the eastside. v. C. and .iiij. M. measures, with thre portes: the one Joseph, another Beniamin, the thyrde Dan. Upon the southside. v. C. and .iiij. M. measures, with the thre portes: the one Symeon, another Issachar, the thyrde Zabulon. And vpon the westside. v. C. and .iiij. measures, with thre portes also: the one Gad, another Aser, the thyrde Nephtali. Thus shall it haue .xviij. M. measures roūde about. And from that tyme forth, the name of the citye shalbe, the Lorde is there.

The ende of the Prophecye of Ezechiel.

The booke of the prophete Daniel.

The fyrst Chapter.

The prophete sheweth the captyuite of Jehoakim kynge of Juda. Of the sonnes that were in captyuite, the kynge commaundeth to chose which of them shulde be taught the learnynge and language of the Chaldees. They are alowed the kynges kechynge. Daniel abstaynyth from the meate of the kynge of Babylon.

IN the thyrde yeare of ỹ rayne of Jehoakim king of Juda, came Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon vnto Jerusalem, & besieged it: * and the Lorde delyuered Jehoakim the kynge of Juda into hys hande, with certayne ornamentes of the house of God, which he caryed awaye vnto the lande of Sēnar, to the house of his God, and there he brought them into hys goddes treasury. And the kynge spake vnto Aspha-naz the chefe chamberlayne, that he shulde bryng hym certayne of the chyldren of Israel, that were come of the kynges sede and of princes, yonge swyngaldes without eny blemysh, but fayre and weltauored, instruct in all wysedome, connynge and vnderstandynge: which were able to stande in the kinges palace, to reade and to learne for to speake Chaldeysh.

* 4.Reg.xxiiij. 2.Par.xxvi.

Unto these the kynge appoynted a certayne porcion of his awne meate, and of the wyne, which he dranke hym selfe, so to norysh them thre yeare: that afterwarde they myght stande before the kynge. Amonge these nowe were certayne of the chyldren of Juda: namely Daniel, Ananias, Misael ād Azarias. Unto these, the chefe chāberlayne gaue other names, and called Daniel, Balthalar: Ananias, Sidrach, Misael, Misach: and Asarias, Abednago. But Daniel was at a poynt with hym selfe, * that he wolde not be defyled thorowe the kynges meate, ner the wyne which he dronke. And this he desyred of the chefe chāberlayn, lest he shuld defyle hym selfe. So God gaue Daniel fauoure and grace before the chefe chāberlayn that he sayde vnto him: I am afrayde of my Lorde the kyng, which hath appoynted you your meate and drincke: lest he spye your faces to be worse lykyng then the other swyngaldes of your age, and so ye shall make me lose my head vnto the kynge.

* Gen.xliii. Dobie.i.b Judic.xiii.a

Then Daniel answered Melassar, whom the chefe chamberlayne had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael and Asarias, and sayd: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruaūtes, and let vs haue potage to eate, & water to drincke: then loke vpon oure faces, & theyrs that eate of the kinges meate. And as thou seyst, so deale so deale with thy seruauntes. So he consented to them in thys matter, & proued them .x. dayes. And after the ten dayes, theyr faces were better lykinge and fatter, then all the yonge swyngaldes, which dyd eate of ỹ kynges meate.

Thus Melassar toke awaye their meate and wyne, and gaue them potage therfore. God gaue nowe these foure swyngaldes cōnynge and lernyng in all scripture and wysdome: but vnto Daniel specially, he gaue vnderstandynge of all vysyons and dreames. Nowe when the tyme was expyred, that the kynge had appoynted to bryng in these yonge swyngaldes vnto hym: the chefe chāberlayne brought thē before Nabuchodonosor, and the kinge communed with them. But amōg them all were founde none soche as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Asarias. Therfore stode they before the kinge which in all wysdome and matters of vnderstandinge, that he enquered of them, founde them ten tymes better, then all the sothsayers and charmers, ỹ were in all his realme. And Daniel abode styll, vnto the fyrst yeare of kynge Cyrus.

The.ii. Chapter.

The dreame of Nabuchodonosor. He calleth vnto hym sothsayers, and requyreth of thē both the dreame and the interpretacyō therof. They answere that they cannot shewe it. The kynge commaundeth all the wyse men of Babylon to be slayne. Daniel requyreth tyme to solute the question. The Lorde openeth the mysterye vnto Daniel. Daniel is brought vnto the kynge, & sheweth hym hys dreame and the interpretacion therof. Of the euerlastynge kyngdome of Christ.

IN the seconde yeare of the raygne of Nabuchodonosor, had Nabuchodonosor a dreame, * where thorow his spyrete was vered, and his slepe brake from hym. Then the kynge commaūded to call to gether all the sothsayers, charmers, witches and caldees, for to shewe the kynge hys dreame. So they came, and stode before the kynge. And the kynge sayde vnto thē: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spyrete was so troubled therwith, that I haue clene forgotten, what I dreamed. Upon this the Caldees answered the kynge ☞ in the Syrians speache: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Shewe thy seruauntes the dreame, and we shal shewe the, what it meaneth. The kynge gaue the Caldees theyr answere and sayde: It is gone from me. Yf ye wyll not make me vnderstande the dreame with the interpretacyon therof, ye shalldye, and youre houses shalbe pyled. But yf yee tell me the dreame and the meanynge therof, ye shall haue of me gyftes, rewardes and greate honoure: onely, shewe me the dreame and the signifycacyon of it. They answered agayne, and sayde: the kynge must shewe his seruaūtes the dreame, and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the kynge answered, saying: I perceaue of a trueth, that ye do but prolonge the tyme: for so moche as ye se, that the thynge is gone from me. Therfore ye wyll not tell me the dreame, ye shall all haue one iudgement. But ye fayne & dissemble wt vayne wordes, which ye speake before me, to put of the tyme. Therfore tell me the dreame, & so shall I knowe, yf ye can shewe me, what it meaneth. Upō this, ỹ Caldees gaue answere before the kynge, and sayde: there is no mā vpō earth, that can tell the thinge, which the kynge speaketh of: yee, there is nether kynge, prince ner Lorde, that euer asked soche thynges at a sothsayer, charmer or Caldeer: for it is a very harde matter, ỹ the kynge requyreth. Nether is there any, that cā certifye the kynge therof, excepte the goddes: whose dwellynge is not amonge the creatures.

* Job.viii.b. Danie.viii. a. and.b.a.

For the which cause the kynge was wroth with greate indignation, and commaūded to destroye all the wyse men at Babylon: & the proclamacyon went forth, and the wyse mē were slayne. They sought also to slaye Daniel with his companyons Then Daniel enquered of Arioch the kinges steward, of the iudgement and sentēce, that was gone forth alredy to kyll soch as were wyse at Babylō. He answered and sayde vnto Arioch beynge then ỹ kynges debyte. Why hath the kynge proclamed so cruell a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniel the matter. Upon this, wente Daniel vp, and desyred the kynge, that he myght haue leysoure, to shewe the kynge the interpretacyon, & then came he home agayne & shewed the thynge vnto Ananias, Misael & Asarias his cōpanions: ỹ they shulde beseche the God of heauē for grace in thys secret, that Daniel & hys felowes with other soche as were wyse in Babylō, perished not. Thē was ỹ mysterye shewed vnto Daniel in a vysyon by nyght. And Daniel praysed the God of heauē. Daniel also cried loude, & sayde: O that the name of God myght be praysed for euer and euer, for wysdome and strength are hys awne: * he chaungeth the tymes and ages † he putteth downe kynges, he setteth vp kynges: * he geueth wysdome vnto ỹ wyse, & vnderstandinge to those that vnderstande, he openeth the depe secretes: he knoweth the thynge that lyeth in darcknesse † for the lyght dwelleth with hym. I thācke the, & prayse ỹ (O thou God of my fathers) ỹ thou hast lent me wysdome & strength, & hast shewed me ỹ thynge, that we desyred of the, for thou hast opened the kynges matter vnto me.

* Dani.vii.d † Luke.i.c Job.xxxiii.c Jere.xxvii.a. Danie.iii.c. * Job.xxxii.b i.Timo.vi.c. † i.John.i.b.

Upon this went Daniel in vnto Arioch, whom the kynge had ordened to destroye the wyse at Babylō: he went vnto him, & sayde: destroye not soche as are wyse in Babylon, but bryng me in vnto the kyng, and I shall shewe the kynge the interpretacyon. Then Arioch brought Daniel into the kynge in all the haste, and sayde vnto hym: I haue foūde a man a man amonge the presoners of Juda, that shall shewe the kynge the interpretacyon.

Thē answered the kynge, & sayde vnto Daniel, whose name was Balthazar. Art thou he that cāst shewe me the dreame, whiche I haue sene, & the interpretacyon therof? Daniel answered the kynge to his face, & sayde:
As for thys secrete, for the which the kynge maketh inquisicyon: it is nether the wyse, the sorcerer, the charmer ner the deuell conturer,
* Math.xi.c. that cā certifye the kynge of it. * Only God in heauen can open secretes, and he it is, that sheweth the kynge Nabuchodonosor, what is for to come in the latter dayes.

E Thy dreame, & that which thou hast sene
in thyne head vpon thy bed, is this: O kynge thou dydest cast in thy mynde, what shulde come hereafter. So he that is ỹ opener of mysteries, telleth the, what is for to come. As for me, this secrete is not shewed me, for eny wysdome that I haue, more then eny other lyuinge: but onely ỹ I myght shewe ỹ kynge the interpretacyō, and that he myght knowe ỹ thoughtes of his awne herte. Thou kynge sawest, and beholde: there stode before the a greate Image, whose fygure was maruelous greate, and hys visage grymme. The Image heade was of fyne golde, hys brest & armes of syluer, his body and loynes were of copper, his legges were of pyrō, hys fete were parte of yron, and parte of earth.

* Math.xxi.c Luke.xx.b. * This thou sawest tyll, the tyme ỹ, with out eny handes, there was hewen of, a stone which smote the Image vpon the fete, that were both of yron and earth, and brake them to poulder: then was the yron, the earth, the copper, the syluer and golde broken altogether in peces: and became lyke the chaffe of corne, that the wynde bloweth awaye from the somer floores, that they can no more be founde. But the stone that smote the ymage, became a greate mountayne, which fulfylleth the whole earth: This is the dreame. And now we will we shewe before the kyng, what F it meaneth.

* Dani.v.d. * O kynge, thou art a kynge of kynges:
For the God of heauē hath geuē the a kyngdome, ryches, strength and maiesty: & hath delyuered the all thynges, that are amonge the children of men: the beastes of the felde, & the foules vnder the heauen, and geuen the dominion ouer thē all. Thou art that golden head. After ỹ there shall arise another kyngdome, which shall be lesse then thyne. The thyrde kyngdome shalbe lyke copper, & haue dominacyon in all lādes. The fourth kyngdome shall be as stroge as yron. For lyke as yron breaketh and breaketh all thynges: Yee, euen as yron beateth euery thynge downe, so shall it beate downe and destroye.

Where as thou sawest the fete and toes, parte of earth and parte of yron: that is a deuyded kyngdome, whyche neuertheles shall haue some of the yron grounde mixte with it for so moche as thou hast sene the yron mixte with the claye.

The toes of the fete that were parte of yron and parte of claye, sygnifyeth: that it shalbe a kyngdome partely stronge and partely weake. And where as thou sawest yron mixte wyth claye: they shall mingle them selues wyth the sede of symple people, & yet not cōtynue one wyth another, lyke as yron will not be souldered wyth a potsherde.

In the dayes of these kynges, shall ỹ God G of heauen set vp an * euerlasting kyngdome * Esay.xl.b
whych shall not perish, & his kyngdome shal not be geuen ouer to another people: yee, the same shall breake & destroye all these kyng-domes, but it shall endure for euer.

And where as thou sawest, that wythout earth, the syluer and golde in peces: by that hath the greate God shewed the kyng, what will come after this. This is a true dreame, and the interpretacyon of it is sure.

Then the kynge Nabuchodonosor * fell * Act.x.b.xiii.
downe vpon his face, & bowed him selfe vnto Daniel, and commaunded that they shuld offre meat offerynges and swete odoures vnto hym. The kynge answered Daniel, and sayde: yee, of a trueth youre God is a God aboue all goddes, a Lorde aboue all kynges, and an opener of secretes: seynge thou canst discouer this mysterie. So the kynge made Daniel a greate man, and gaue hym many & greate gyftes.

* He made him ruler of all the countrees * Gen.xli.a.
of Babylon, and Lord of all the nobles, that were at Babylon. Nowe Daniel intreated ỹ kynge for Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, so that he made them rulers ouer all the officers in the lande of Babylon: But Daniel hym selfe remayned styll in the courte by the kynge.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

¶ The kynge setteth vp a golden Image, which he commaundeth to be worshypped. Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago are accused, because they disobeyed the kynges commaundment. They are brought vnto the kynge and commaunded to worshyppe the Image. They refuse to do it and are put into a burnynge ouen. By beleue in God they are delyuered from the fyre. Nabuchodonosor confesseth the power of God after the syght of the myracle.

A Nabuchodonosor the kynge caused a golden Image to be made, whych was.lx. cubytes hye, and syxe cubytes thycke. This he made to be set vp in the felde of Dura in the land of Babylon & sent oute to gather together the dukes, Lordes and nobles, the iudges and officers, the debytes and shreues: with all the rulers of the lande: that they myght come to ỹ dedicacyō of the Image which Nabuchodo-nosor

nosor the kynge had set vp: So the dukes, Lordes and nobles, the iudges and offycers, debytes and shreues with all ỹ rulers of the lande gathered them together, and came vnto the dedycatynge of the Image, that Na-buchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

Nowe whē they stode before the Image,
B which Nabuchodonosor set vp, ỹ bedel cried out with all his might: O ye people, kynred-des and tunges, to you be it sayde: that whē ye heare the noyse of the trompettes, which shalbe blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, Psalteries, Symphonies and all maner of Musick: ye fall downe and worshippe ỹ gol-dē Image, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge hath set vp. Whoso then falleth not downe & boweth him selfe, shall euen the same houre be cast into an hote burnynge ouen. Therfore, when all the folcke herde the noyse of ỹ trompettes that were blowen, with the har-pes, shawmes, Psalteries, Symphonies ād all kynde of Melody, then all ỹ people, kyn-redes and nacyons fell downe, and bowed them selues vnto the goldē Image, that Na
buchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

Now were there certayne men of the Cal
C dees. that wente euen then and accused the Iewes, and sayde vnto the kynge Nabucho donosor: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer, Thou beynge kynge hast geuen a commaūdement, that all men whē they heare ỹ noyse of the trompettes, harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies and all the other melodies:
shall fall downe and bowe them selues to-warde the golden Image: whoso then fell not downe & worshypped not that, he shulde be cast into an hote burnynge ouen. Nowe
* Dani.ii.g. are there certayne Iewes, * whom thou hast set ouer the offyces of the lande of Babylon:
namely, Sydrach: Mysach and Abednago.
These men (O kyng) regarde not thy com-maūdment, yee, they will not serue thy god-des, ner bowe them selues to ỹ golden Image, that thou hast set vp.

Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wrath and displeasure, commaunded, that Sidrach Misach and Abednago shulde be brought vnto hym. So these men were brought before ỹ kynge. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, & sayde: what? O Sidrach Mi-sach and Abednago, will not ye serue my goddes? nor bowe youre selues to the golden Image, that I haue set vp. Well, be redy her-after, whē ye heare the noyse of the trompet-D tes blowe with the harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonyes and all the other melodyes: that ye fall downe, and worshyppe the Image which I haue made. But yf ye wor-shyppe it not, ye shall be cast immediatly in to an hote burnyng ouen. Let se, what God is there, that maye delyuer you oute of my handes? Sydrach, Misach and Abednago answered the kynge, & sayde: O Nabuchodonosor, we ought not to cōsente vnto the in this matter, for why? oure God whō we ser-ue, * is able to kepe vs frō the hote burnyng * Matth.vi.g.
ouen (O kynge) and can rycht well delyuer vs out of thy handes. And though he will not, yet shalt thou knowe (O kyng) that we will not serue thy goddes, ner ho reuerēce to ỹ Image, which thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor full of indignacyō, so that the countenaunce of his face chaunged vpon Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. Therfore he charged and commaunded, that the ouen shuld be made seuē tymes hotter, then it was wonte to be: & spake vnto the strongest wor thies that were in his hoste, for to bynde Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, and to cast them into the hote burnynge ouen.

So these men were bounde in their cotes hosen, shues wyth their other garmentes, & E cast into the hote burnynge ouen: for the kyn ges commaundemēt was so strayte, and the ouē was exceedynge hote. As for the mē that put in Sidrach, Misach & Abednago, ỹ flāme of the fyre destroyed them. And these thre mē Sidrach, Misach & Abednago fell dow-ne in the hote burnynge ouen, beynge faste boūde. Thē Nabuchodonosor ỹ kyng mar-ueled, and stode vp in all hast: he spake vnto hys councell and sayde: dyd not ye cast these thre mē bounde into the fyre? They answe-

¶ The.iiii. Chapter.

¶ Nabuchodonosor dreameth agayne. Daniel interpreteth it. Nabuchodonosor is out of hys realme, and eateth with beastes. He confesseth the power of God, and is restored into hys kyngdome.

A * Dani.vi.c. * Nabuchodonosor kynge vnto all people, kynreddes and tunges that dwell vpon the whole earth: peace be multiplied amõg you. I thought it good to shewe the tokens and maruelous worcke, ỹ the hye God hath wrought vpon me. O, howe great are his tokens, and howe * Psal.cxlv.b Danie.vii.d. Luke.i.c myghtie are his wonders! * his kyngdome is an euerlasting kyngdome, and his power lasteth for euer and euer.

I Nabuchodonosor beyng at rest in myne house, and florishynge in my palace, sawe a dreame, which made me afrayed: & the thoughtes that I had vpõ my bedd, with the visyons of myne head, troubled me. * Then * Danie. ii.a. sent I out a commission, that all they which were of wysdome at Babilõ shulde be brought before me, to tell me the interpretacyõ of the dreame. So there came the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees and coniurers of deuels: to whom I tolde the dreame, but what it betokened, they coulde not shewe me: tyll at ỹ last, there came one Daniel (other wyse called Balthazar, according to the name of my B God) which hath the spyrete of ỹ holy goddes in him, to whom I tolde the dreame, saying: O Balthazar, thou prince of Sothesayers: For so moche as I knowe, that thou hast the spyrete of the holy Goddes and no secrete is hyd from the. tell me therfore, what the vysyon of my dreame (that I haue sene) maye sygnifie. I sawe a visyon in my heade vpon my bed: and beholde, there stode a tre vpon the grounde, which was very hye, greate and myghtye: the heygth reached vnto the heauen, and the bredth extended to all the endes of the earth: hys leaues were fayre, he had very moche frute, so that euery man had ynough to eate therin.

The beastes of the felde had shadowes vnder it, and the foules of the ayre dwelt in the bowes therof. Shortly, all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my head a visyon vpõ my bed: & behold, a watcher & the holy one came downe frõ heauen, & cryed myghtely, saying. Hewe downe ỹ tree, breake of his braũches, shake of his leaues, and scatre hys frute abrode: that all the beastes maye get them awaye frõ vnder him, and the foules from his braunches. Neuertheles, leaue the grounde of hys rote styll in the earth, & bynde him vpon the playne felde, with cheynes of yron and stele. With the dewe of heauen shall he be wet, & he shall haue hys parte in the herbes of the grounde with other wylde beastes.

C That mans herte of his shall be take frõ hym, and a beastes herte shall be geuen hym, tyll seuen yeares be come and gone vpõ him.

This crande of the watcher, is a cõmãdment grounded and sought out in the councell of him, that is most holy: to learne mẽ for to vnderstande, that the hyest hath power ouer the kyngdomes of men, & geueth them, to whom it lyketh him, and bringeth the very out caste of men ouer them. Thys is the dreame, that I kyng Nabuchodonosor haue sene. Therfore O Balthazar, tell thou me what it signifyeth: for so moch as all ỹ wyse men of my kyngdome are not able to shewe me, what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for the spyrete of the holy Goddes is in the.

Then Daniel (whose name was Balthazar) helde hys peace by the space of an houre and hys thoughtes troubled hym. So the kynge spake, & sayde: O Balthazar, lett neither the dreame ner the interpretacyõ therof D feare the. Balthazar answered, saing: O my Lorde, this dreame happẽ to thyne enemies, and the interpretacyon to thyne aduersaries. As for the tree that thou sawest which was so great & myghtye, whose heygth reached vnto the heauen, and hys bredth vnto all the worlde: whose leaues were fayre, and ỹ frute moch: vnder the which the beastes of ỹ felde had theyr habitacyon and vpõ whose braũches the foules of the ayre dyd syt.

Euen thou (O kynge) art the tre, greate and stronge. Thy greatnes increaceth, & reacheth vnto the heauẽ, so doth thy power to ỹ endes of the earth. But where as the kynge sawe a watcher euen an holy angell, ỹ came downe from heauẽ, and sayde: hewe downe the tree, and destroye it: yet leaue the ground of the rote in the earth: and bynde hym vpon the playne felde with cheynes of yron & stele: he shall be wet with the dewe of heauẽ, and hys parte shall be with ỹ beastes of the felde, E tyll seuẽ yeares be come and gone vpõ hym: Thys (O kynge) is the interpretacyon, yee, it is the very deuyce of hym, that is hyest of all, and it toucheth my Lorde the kynge.

Thou shalt be cast out frõ men, and thy dwellinge shalbe with the beastes of ỹ felde: with grasse shalt thou be fed lyke an oxe. Thou must be wet with ỹ dewe of the heauen: yee, seuen yeares shall come, & go vpon the, tyll thou knowe, * ỹ the hyest hath po- * Danie.iii. Moreouer, where as it was sayde, that the rote of the tree shulde be left styll in the grounde: it betokeneth, ỹ thy kyngdome shal remayne whole vnto the, after thou hast lerned to knowe, that ỹ power commeth from heauen. Wherfore, O kynge, be cõtent with my coũcell, that thou mayest redeme thy synnes with almoyse * and thyne offences with mercy to poore people: for thys shall be an helynge of thyne errour. * Eccli.xli.d

All these

All these thynges touche the, kynge Nabuchodonosor.

F So after.xii. monethes, the kyng walked vp and downe in the palace of the kingdome of Babylon, and sayde. Thys is the greate cyte of Babylon, which I my selfe) with my power and strength) haue made a kynges courte, for the honour of my mageslye. While these wordes were yet in ỹ kynges mouth there fell a voyce from heauen, sayinge: O kynge Nabuchodonosor, to the be it spokẽ: Thy kyngdome shall departe from the, thou shalt be cast out of mẽs company: thy dwellynge shalbe with the beastes of ỹ felde, so ỹ thou shalt eate grasse lyke as an oxe, tyll seuẽ yeares become and gone ouer the. euen vntyll thou knowest, that the hyest hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, & that he may geue them, vnto whom it pleaseth him. The very same houre was thys matter fulfylled vpon Nabuchodonosor: so ỹ he was cast out of mens company, and dyd eate grasse lyke an oxe. Hys body was wet with the dewe of heauen, tyll hys heares were as great as Aegles fethers, and hys nayles lyke byrdes clawes.

G When thys tyme was past, I Nabuchodonosor lyfte vp myne eyes vnto heauẽ, and myne vnderstandinge was restored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thãckes vnto the hyghest. I magnifyed and praysed him that ly- * Dani.iiii.f. ueth for euermore, * whose power endureth alwaye, and hys kyngdome from one generacyon to another: in comparyson of whom all they that dwell vpon the earth, are to be reputed as nothynge.

* Job.xlii.b. * At ỹ same tyme was myne vnderstãdinge geuen me agayne, and I was restored to the honoure of my kingdome, to my dignite, and to myne awne shape agayne. My great estates and Princes sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdome agayne, so that I had yet greater worshyppe.

Then dyd I Nabuchodonosor, loue, magnifye and prayse the kynge of heauẽ: for all his workes are true, and hys wayes ryght. As for those that go on proudly, he is able to brynge them downe.

¶ The. v. Chapter.

¶ Balthazar kynge of Babylon, abusynge the vessels of the temple, seeth an hande wrytynge in the wall. The sothesayers called of the kynge, cannot expõde the wrytynge. Daniel is called, which readeth it, and interpreteth it also. Balthazar beynge slayne, Darius succedeth in hys rowme.

A KYnge Balthazar made a great bãcket to his thousand Lordes: with all these thousande he made great chere, and when he was dronken with wyne commaunded to bring hym the golden and syluer vessels * which hys father Nabuchodonosor had taken oute of the temple at Jerusalem: that the kynge & his Lordes with his quene and concubynes myght drincke therout. * i.pa.xxvi.c

So they brought the golden vessell, that was taken oute of the temple of the Lordes house at Jerusalem. Then the kynge and his Lordes with his quene and concubines drõcke out of them. They droncke wyne, and praysed theyr Idoles of golde, syluer, copper yron, wodde and stone.

In the very same houre there appeared B fyngers, as it had bene of a mans hande wrytynge, ryght ouer agaynst the candelstycke vpon the playne wall in the kynges palace: & the kynge sawe the palme of the hande that wrote. * Then chaunged the kynge his coũ- * Jerem.l.a. tenaũce, and his thoughtes troubled hym, so that the ioyntes of his body choke, and hys knees smote one agaynst ỹ other. * wherfo- * Dani.ii.a. re the kinge cried myghtely, that they shulde bringe hym the charmers. Caldees and coniurers of deuels. The kynge spake also to the wyse men of Babylon, and sayde: Who so can rede this writing, & shewe me the playne meaning therof: shalbe clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde about his necke, and rule the thyrde part of my kyngdome.

Upon this, came all the kinges wyse mẽ: but they coulde nether reade ỹ writynge, ner shewe the kinge what it signifyed. Thẽ was the kynge sore afrayed, in so moch, ỹ hys coloure chaũged, and his Lordes were sore vexed. So by reason of this matter, that had C happened to the kynge & his Lordes, ỹ quene went vp herselfe into the banket house, and spake vnto the kinge, sayinge: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Let not the thoughtes trouble the, and let not thy countenaunce be chaunged. For why? there is a man in thy kyngdome, that hath the spyrete of the holy goddes within him, * as it was sene in thy * Dani.v.a. fathers dayes. He hath vnderstandynge and wysdome lyke ỹ goddes. Ye the kynge Nabuchodonosor thy father made this man chefe of the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees ãd readers of destines: because that soche an aboundaunt spyrete, knowledge & wysdome (to expounde dreames, to open secretes, and to declare harde dowtes) was founde in him: yee. euen in Daniel, whom the kyng named Balthasar. Let this same Daniel be sente for, and he shall tell, what it meaneth.

Then was Daniel brought before the kynge. So the kinge spake vnto Daniel, and sayde. Art thou that Daniel, one of the presoners of Juda, whom my father the kynge brought out of Jewry? I haue heard speake of the, that thou hast the spyrete of the holy goddes, experience and vnderstandinge, and that there hath bene greate wysdome founde in the.

D in ỹ. Nowe haue there bene brought me, wise & conninge charmers, to reade thys wryting and to shewe me the meanynge therof. But they coulde not tell me, what thys matter signifyed Then hearde I saye, that thou canst expounde darcke thynges, and declare harde doutes. Well than, yf thou canst reade thys wrytynge, & shewe me the meanynge therof thou shalt be clothed w purple, haue a cheyne of golde aboute thy necke, and rule the thyrd parte of my kyngdome.

E Daniel answered, & sayde before the kyng: * Is for thy rewardes, kepe thē to thy selfe, or geue thy ryche gyftes to another: yet not theleſſe, I will rede ỹ wryting vnto ỹ kyng, & shewe him the interpretacyon therof * O kynge heare. God ỹ hyest gaue vnto Nabuchodonosor thy father, the dignitie of a kyng with worshyppe & honour, so that all people, kinreddes & tunges stode in awe and feare of hym, by reason of the hye estate, that he had lent hym. For why, he slewe whō he wolde: he smote, whōit pleased him. Agayne: whom he wolde, he set vp: and whom he lyst, he put downe. * But because his hert was so proude, and his stomack set so fast vnto royalnesse: he was deposed frō his kynglye trone, & hys magesty was taken from hym. He was shut out frō amonge men, hys herte was lyke a beastes herte, and hys dwellynge was F with the wylde asses: he was fayne to eate grasse lyke an oxe, & hys body was wet with the dewe of the heauē, tyll he knewe, that the hyest had power vpon ỹ kyngdomes of men and setteth ouer them, whom he lyst.

And thou his sonne (O Balthazar) for all this, hast not submytted thyne herte, though thou knewest all these thinges: but hast magnifyed thy selfe aboue the Lorde of heauen, so that the vessels of hys house were brought before the: that thou, and thy Lordes, with thy quene and concubynes, myght dryncke wyne therout. And hast prayſed the Idoles of syluer and gold, copper and yron, of wodd and stone. As for the God * in whose hande consysteth thy breth and all thy wayes: thou hast not loued hym.

G Therfore is the palme of thys hande sent hyther from hym, to token vp this wryting. And this is the scripture, that is written vp: Mane, Thetel, Phares. Nowe the interpretacion of the thynge is this: Mane, God hath nombred the kyngdome, and brought it to an ende: Thetel, thou art weyed in the balaunce, and art founde to lyght: Phares, thy kyngdome it delt in partes, and geuen to the Medes and Perses.

Then commaunded Balthazar, to cloth Daniel wyth purple, to hange a cheyne of golde aboute hys necke, and to make a proclamacyon concernynge hym: that he shulde be the ruler of the thyrde parte of hys kyngdome. * The very same night was Balthazar ỹ kynge of the Caldees slayne, and ‡ Darius out of Medea toke in the kyngdome, beynge .lxii. yeare of age.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

¶ Daniel is made ruler ouer the Lordes. The Imagynacyon of an acte agaynst Daniel. The proclamacyon of the acte, wherof Daniel is accused vnto the kynge as transgressoure. He is put into a denne of Lyons by the commaundement of the kynge. He is delyuered by kayth in God. Daniels accusars are put vnto the Lyons to be torne in sonder. Darius by the proclamacyon of a decree, magnifyeth the God of Daniel.

A IT pleased Darius to set ouer his kingdome an .C. and .xx. Lordes, whyche shulde be in all hys kyngdome about. Aboue these he set thre Prynces (of whom Daniel was one) that the Lordes myght gene accomptes vnto them, and the kynge to be vndiscaled.

But Daniel exceaded all these Prynces and Lordes, for the spyrte of God was plenteous in him: so that the kynge was mynded to set hym ouer the whole realme. Wherfore the Princes and Lordes sought, to pycke out in Daniel some quarell agaynst the kyngdome: yet coulde they fynde none occasyon ner faute vpon hym. For why: he was so kaythfull, that there was no blame ner dishonesty founde in hym.

B Then sayde these men: we wyll get no quarell agaynst thys Daniel, excepte it be in the lawe of hys God. Upon this, wente the prynces & Lordes together vnto the kinge, & sayde thus vnto hym: kynge Darius, God saue thy lyke for euer. All the greate estates of the realme: as the Prynces, Dukes, Senatours and Judges, are determed to put oute a commaundement of the kynge, & to make a sure statute: namely, ỹ whoso desyreth any peticyon, ether of any God or man (within this .xxx. dayes) excepte it be onely of the, O kynge: the same person may be cast into the Lyons denne. Wherfore, O kyng, confyrme thou this statute, and make a wrytinge: that the thing which the Medes and Perses haue ordeyned be not altered ner broken.

So Darius made the wrytinge, and cōfyrmed it. Nowe when Daniel vnderstode ỹ the wrytinge was made, he wente into hys house: and ỹ windowes of his wall towarde Jerusalē stode opē. There kneled he downe vpon hys knees, thre tymes a daye: there he made hys peticyon, and prayſed hys God, lyke as hys maner was to do afore tyme.

C Then these men made searche, and founde Daniel makynge hys peticyon & prayinge vnto hys God. So they came to the kynge, & spake before him concernynge his commaūdement, sayinge: O kyng, hast thou not subscribed the statute, ỹ within .xxx. dayes who so requyreth his peticion of any God or man but onely of thy selfe, O kynge: he shalbe cast into the denne of the Lyons? The kynge answered swered, and sayde: yee, it is true. It must be as a lawe of the Medes & Perses, that maye not be broken.

D Then answered they, and sayde vnto the kynge: Daniel one of the preſoners of Juda O kyng, regardeth nether the, ner thy statute, that thou hast made, but maketh his peticyon thre tymes a daye. When the kynge hearde these wordes, he was sore greued, and wolde haue excused Daniel, to delyuer hym, and put of the matter, vnto ỹ Sunne went downe, to ỹ intent that he myght saue hym.

These men perceaupng the kynges mynde, sayde vnto him: knowe this (O kynge) ỹ the lawe of the Medes and Perses is, that ỹ commaundement & statute which the kynge maketh, maye not be altered. * Then ỹ king bad them bringe Daniel, and they cast hym into the Lyons denne.

The kynge also spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: thy God, whom thou alwaye seruest, euē he shall defende the. And there was brought a stone, and layed vpon the hole of ỹ denne: this the kyng sealed with his awne ryng E ge, and with the sygnet of hys prynces: that the kynges cōmaundement concernynge Daniel, shulde not be broken.

So the kynge wente into hys palace, and eate no meate ỹ nyght nether was there any mynstrelsy brought in before hym, nether coulde he take any slepe. But bytymes in the morynge at the breake of the daye, ỹ kynge arose, and wente in all haste vnto the denne of the Lyons.

Nowe as he came nye vnto the denne, he cried with a piteous voyce vnto Daniel: yee, the kynge spake, and sayde vnto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruaunt of the lyuinge God, is not thy God (whom thou alwaye seruest) able to delyuer the from the lyons? Daniel sayde vnto the kinge. O kyng, God saue thy lyke for euer. * Why God hath sent his angell F * which hath shut the lyons mouthes, so that they might not hurte me. For why: mine vngyltynesse is founde out before hym. And as for the, O kynge, I neuer offended the.

Then was the kynge exceadinge glad, & commaūded to take Daniel out of the denne. So Daniel was brought out of the denne, and no maner of hurte was foūde vpon him. For he put hys trust in hys God. And as for those men which had accused Daniel, ỹ kyng commaunded to bringe them, and to cast thē in the Lyons denne: them, theyr chyldren and theyr wyues. * So the Lyons had the mastry of them, and brake all theyr bones a sonder, or euer they came at the grounde.

The. viii. Chapter.

¶ A visyō of a stryke betwene a ramme & an hegoate.
The vnderstandyng of the vysyon is of the battell be-twene the kynge of Persia and the kynge of the Grecyens. Of the shamefull kynge Antiochus.

IN the thyrde yeare of the raygne of A kynge Balthazar, there appeared a visyon vnto me Daniel, after that I had seue the * fyrst. I sawe in a * dani.vii.a visyon (and whē I sawe it, I was at Susis in the chefe cyte, which lyeth in the lande of * Elam) and in the visiō, me thought I was * Iere.xlix.d Ezec.xxviii.
by the ryuer of Ulai.

Then I loked vp, & sawe: & beholde there stode before ỹ ryuer, a rāme, which had two hornes: and these two hornes were hye, but one was hyer then another, & the hyest came vp behinde. I sawe ỹ this rāme pushed with his hornes, agaynst ỹ west, agaynst ỹ north, & agaynst the south: so that no beastes might stande before him, ner defende them from his power: but he dyd as hym lysted, and waxed B greatly. I toke hede vnto thys, & then came there an he goate from the west ouer ỹ whole earth, and touched not the grounde.

Thys goate had a maruelous wrethen horne betwixte his eyes, & came vnto the rā-me, that had the two hornes (whō I had seue afore by the ryuer syde) and ranne fearcely vpō him with his might. I sawe him drawe nye vnto the ramme, beinge very fearce vpō hym: yee, he gaue hym soche a stroke, that he brake his two hornes. Nether had ỹ ramme C so moch strength as to stande before him: but he cast hym downe, troade hym vnder hys fete: & no man was able to delyuer the rāme out of hys power.

The goate waxed exceadinge greate, and whē he was at the strōgest, his great, horne was broken also. * Then grewe there other * danie.viii.a and.xi.a. Zach.i.a foure soch lyke in the Iceade, toward the. iiii.
wyndes of the heauen. Yee, out of one of the leest of these hornes, there came vp yet another horne, which waxed maruelous greate:
toward the south, toward the east, and to ward the fayre pleasaunt lande. It grewe vp to the hoost of heauen, wherof it dyd cast some downe to the grounde, and of the stares also, and trode them vnder fete.

Yee, it grewe vp vnto the prynce of the hoost, from whom the daylye offerynge was takē, and the place of hys Sanctuary casten downe. And a certayne season was geuen vnto it, agaynst ỹ daylye offeringe (because of wyckednesse) that it myght cast downe ỹ veryte to the grounde, and so to prosper in all thinges

all thynges, that it wente aboute.

D Upō this I hearde one of the saincte speakynge, which sayncte sayde vnto one that asked this question. Howe longe shall this vi-syon of the daylye sacrifyce and of the wa-stinge abhominacyon endure: that the Sanctuary and the power shall so be troden vnder fote? And he answered him: Unto ỹ euē-nynge & the mornynge, euen two thousande and thre hundreth dayes: then shall the Sāctuary be clensed agayne.

E Nowe when I Daniel had sene this visiō and sought for the vnderstandynge of it: be-holde, there stode before me a thinge like vn to a man. And I herde a mans voyce in the riuer of Ulay, which cryed, and sayd: O Ga briel, make this man vnderstande the visyō.
So he came, and stode by me. But I was afrayed at hys commynge, and fell downe vpon my face.

Then sayde he vnto me, O thou sonne of man, marcke well, for in the last tyme shall this visiō be fulfylled. Now as he was spea kynge vnto me, I waxed faynte, so ỹ I suncke downe to the groūde. But he toke holde vpon me, and sett me vp agayne, sayinge:
Beholde, I will shewe the, what shall happen in ỹ last wrath: for in the tyme appoynted it shalbe fulfylled.

The ramme which thou sawest with the two hornes, is the kynge of the Medes and Perles: but the goate is the kynge of Grecke lande: the greate horne that stode betwyxte hys eyes, that is the principall kynge. But where as it brake, and foure other rose vp in the steade: it signifyeth, that out of this people shall stande vp * foure kyngdomes, but dani.viii.a not so myghtye as it.

F After these kyngdomes (whyle vngodlynesse is a growinge) there shall aryse a kyng of an vnshamefast face, whych shalbe wyse in darcke speakynges.

He shalbe myghtye and stronge, but not in his awne strēgth. He shall destroye aboue measure, and all that he goeth aboute shall prospere: he shall slaye the stronge and holy people. And thorowe hys craftynes, falshed shall prospere in hys hande, hys herte shalbe proude, and many one shall he put to death in his welthynesse. He shall stāde vp agaynst dani.viii.c 2.Thess.ii.b. the Prynce of Prynces, * but he shalbe destroyed wythout hande. And thys visyon that is shewed vnto the, is as sure as ỹ euēdani.viii.d. nynge and the mornynge. * Therfore wryte thou vp thys syght, for it wylbe longe or it come to passe.

Upon this was I daniel very faynte, so that I laye sycke certayne dayes: but when I rose vp, I wente aboute the kynges busynesse, and marueled at the visyon, neuerthelesse no man knewe of it.

And why? for oure synnes sake, and for the wyckednesse of oure forefathers is Jerusalē & thy people abhorred, of all thē that are aboute vs: Now therfore, O our God, heare the prayer of thy seruaunt, and hys intercessyon. As I was yet speakynge at my prayers, knowledgynge myne awne synnes, and the synnes of my people, makynge so myne intercessyō before the Lorde my God, for ỹ holy hylles sake of my God: yee, whyle I was yet speakynge in my prayer, beholde, the mā Gabriel. (* whō I had sene afore in the vi-

¶ The.x. Chapter.

¶ Where appeareth vnto Daniel a man clothed in lynen, whych sheweth hym wherfore he is sent.

IN the thyrde yeare of Kynge Cirus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniel (other wyse called Balthasar) a matter, yee, a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme vntoit. He vnderstode the matter well, and perceaued what the visyon was. At the same tyme, I Daniel mourned for ỹ space of thre wekes, so that I had no lust to eate bread: as for flesshe and wyne there came none wythin my mouth: No, I dyd not once anoynte my self, tyl the wole thre wekes were out.

Upon the. xxiiij. daye of the firste moneth, I was by the greate floude, called Tygris * I lyft vp myne eyes, and loked: and beholde, a mā clothed in lynē, whose loynes were * dani.viij. Apoca.i.c. gyrded vp with fyne golde of Araby: his body was lyke the Chrysolite stone, hys face (to loke vpon) was lyke lyghtenynge, hys eyes as the flame of fyre, hys armes and fete were lyke fayre glysterynge metall, but the voyce of his wordes was lyke the voyce of a multitude.

B * I Daniel alone sawe thys visyon: & the men that were wyth me, sawe it not: but a * dani.viij. ‡ Actes.ix.a. greate fearfulnesse fell vpon them, so ỹ they fled awaye, and hyd them selues. I was left there my selfe alone, and sawe this great visyon, so longe tyll there remayned nomore strength wythin me: yee, I lost my coloure clene, I wasted awaye, and my strēgth was gone. Yet heard I the voyce of hys wordes: and as soone as I heard it, fayntnesse came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the groūde vpon my face. And behold, an hande touched me, whych set me vp vpon my knees & vpon the palmes of my handes, sayinge vnto me. * O Daniel, thou well beloued man: * dani.ix.b take good hede of the wordes, that I shall saye vnto the, and stande ryght vp, for vnto the am I nowe sent. *

And when he had sayde these wordes, I C stode vp trēblynge. Then sayde he vnto me: feare not Daniel: for why, sence ỹ fyrst daye that thou that thou set thyne herte to vnderstāde, and dydest chasten thy selfe before thy God: thy wordes haue bene herde. And I had come vnto the, when thou begannest to speake had

* Iosue.v.d. Daniel.xii.a. not the prynce ouer the kyngdom of the Perses wythstāde me. xxj. dayes. But lo, * Michael one of the cheefe prynces, came to helpe and I was left to cōtynue ther with the kinges of Persia, & am come to shewe the, what shall happen vnto thy people in the latter dayes. For it wylbe longe yet or the vysyon be fulfylled.

Nowe when he had spoken these wordes vnto me, I cast downe my head to the groūde and held my tunge. Beholde, there touched my lyppes one very lyke vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth, and sayde vnto
D him, that stode before me, O my Lorde, my toyntes are lowsed in the visyō, and there is nomore strength within me. Howe may my Lordes seruaunt then talke wyth my Lord? seynge there is no strēgth in me, so that I cānot take my breth? Upon this there touched Dani.x.d. me agayne, one moch lyke a man * and confor-ted me, sayinge. O thou man so well beloued, feare not: be cōtent, take a good hert vnto the, and be stronge. So when he had spoken vnto me, I recouered, and sayde. Speake on my Lord, for thou hast refreshed me. Then sayd he: knowest thou wherfore I am come vnto the? nowe wyll I go agayne to fyght wyth the prince of the Perses. As soone as I go forth, lo, the prince of Grekelāde shall come. Neuertheles, I wyll shewe ỹ ỹ thynge, that is fast noted in the scripture of trueth. And as for all ponder matters, there is none that helpeth me in thē, but Michael youre prynce.

¶ The.xj. Chapter.

¶ A prophecy of the kynges of Persia. Of the kyngdome of Grece. Of the kyngdome of Egypte, and of the bonde therof, and of the battell wyth the kyngdome of Syria. Of the Jewes that flye vnto the kynge of Egypte, whom Antiochus the kynge of Syria persecuteth, whych figureth vnto vs Antychrist. The pryde of Antiochus.

A AND in the fyrst yeare of Darius of Media, I stode by hym, to cōforte him, and to strengthe hym, & nowe wyll I shewe ỹ trueth. Beholde, there shall stande vp yet thre kynges in Persia, but the fourth shalbe farre rycher then they all. And when he is in the cheefest power of hys ryches, he shall prouoke euery man agaynst the real-
Dan.viij.a. me of Grekelande. * Then shall there aryse
* 1. Macha.i.a. yet a myghtye kynge, that shall rule wyth greate dominion, and do what hym lyst. * And as soone as hys kyngdome cometh vp, it shalbe destroyed, and deuyded towarde the foure wyndes of the heauen. They that come after hym, shall not haue soche power & dominyon as he: but hys kyngdome shalbe scatred, yee, euen amonge other then those.

And the kyng of the south shalbe myghtyer, then his other prynces. And one shall be strōger then he, & shall rule hys dominyon wyth greate power.

And in the ende of yeares they shalbe joyned together, and the kynges daughter of ỹ south shall come to the kynge of the North, for to make frēdshyppe, but she shall not op-
B tayne the power of that arme, nether shall she be able to ēdure thorowe his myght: but she, and soch as brought her (yee and he that begat her, and confor-ted her for hys tyme) shalbe delyuered vp. Out of the braunches of her rote, there shall one stande vp in hys steade: whych with power of armes shall go thorowe the kynges lande of the north, and handle hym accordynge to hys strength. As for their Idols and prynces, with their costly Jewels of golde and syluer, he shall cary the awaye captyues into Egypte, and he shall reygne more yeares then the kynge of the north. And when he is come into the kynges realme of the south, he shalbe fayne to turne agayne into hys awne lande. Wherfore hys sonnes shalbe displeased, & shall gather together a myghtye greate hoost of people: and one of them shall come, and go thorowe lyke a water flowde: then shall he returne, and go forth with defynge and boastynge vnto his awne lande.

Then the kynge of the south shalbe angry and shall come forth to fight against the kynge of the north: yee, he shall brynge a greate multitude of people together, and a C greate heape shalbe geuen into his hāde: these shall he cary awaye wyth greate pryde, for so moche as he hath cast downe so many thousādes, neuertheles, he shall not preuayle. For the kyng of the north shall gather (of the new) a greater heape of people then afore, and come forth (after a certayne tyme & yeares) wyth a myghtye hooste and exceadynge greate good.

At the same tyme there shall many stande vp agaynst the kynge of the south, so that ỹ wycked chyldren of thy people also shall exalte them selues (to fulfyll the vision) & then fall. So the kinge of the north shall come to laye sege, and to take the strōg fensed cyties: And the power of thē of the south shall not be able to abyde him, and the best men of the people shall not be so strōg, as to resyst hym. Shortely, when he commeth, he shall hādle hym as he lyst, & no man shalbe so hardy as to stande agaynst hym. He shall stande in the pleasaunt coūtre, whych thorowe him shalbe destroyed: he shall set hys face wyth all hys power to optayne hys kyngdom, and to be lyke it. Yee, that shall he do, and geue him vnto the daughters amonge wemen, to destroye hym. But he shall fayle, nether shall he optayne hys purpose. After thys shall he set hys face vnto the. Iles, and take many of them. A prince shall stoppe hym, to do him a shame, beyde the confusyon that els shall come vnto him. Thus shall he tourne agayne to hys awne lande, stomble and fall, and be nomoze kounde: so he that came vpon hym & dyd hym violence, shall stande in hys place, haue a pleasaunt kyngdome: and after fewe dayes he shalbe destroyed, & that nether in wzath, ner i battell. In hys steade there shall aryse a vyle person, not holden wozthy of a kynges dignytie: this shall come in peaceably, and optayne the kyngdome wyth fayre wozdes: he shall fyght agaynst the armes of the myghtye (and destrope them) yee, and agaynst the prince of the couenaunt.

So after that he hath taken truce wyth him, he shall hãdle disceatfully: that he maye get vp, and ouercome hym with a small flocke: and so with craftynesse to get him to the fattest place of the lande, and to deale other wyse, thẽ ether his fathers oz graũdfathers dyd. Foz he shall destrope the thynge, that they had robbed & spoyled, yee, and all theyr substaũce: ymagenynge thoughtes agaynst the stronge holdes, and that foz a tyme. hys power and herte shalbe sterred vp wyth a greate armye agaynst the kinge of the south where thozowe the kynge of the south shalbe moued then vnto battell, with a greate & myghtye hoost also. Neuertheless, he shall not be able to stande, foz they shall conspyze against him. Yee, they that eate of his meate shall hurte hym: so that his hoost shall fall, & many be slayne downe.

These two kynges shalbe mynded to do myschefe, and talke of disceate at one table: but they shall not prospere, foz why, the ende shall not come yet, vnto the tyme apoynted *il.Mar.b.a * Then shall he go home agayne into hys awne lande with great good, and set his hert agaynst the holy couenaunt, he shalbe busye agaynst it, and then returne home. At the time apoynted he shall come agayne, and go towarde the south. So shall it happen other wyse then at the fyrst, yet ones agayne. And *Nu.xxiiii.d why? * ỹ chyppes with Italyans shall come vpon him, that he may be smyttẽ and turne agayne: that he may take indignaciõ against the couenaũt of holynesse, to medle agaynst it. Yee, he shall turne him, and drawe soch vnto him, as leaue the holy couenaunt.

He shall set myghtye men to vnhalowe ỹ Sanctuary of strength, to put downe the daylye offeringe, and to set vp the abhominable desolacyon. And soch as breake the couenaunt shall he flatter wyth fayre wozdes. But the people that wyll knowe their God, shall haue the ouerhande and prosper. Those also that haue vnderstandynge among the people shall enfourme the multitude: and foz a longe season, they shalbe persecuted wyth swearde, with fyre, wyth captiuite & wyth the takynge awaye of theyr goodes. Nowe when they fall, they shalbe sett vp wyth a lytle helpe: but many shall cleue vnto them faynedly.

Yee some of those which haue vnderstandyng shall be persecuted also, that they may be tryed, purifyed and clensed, tyll the tyme be out: foz there is yet another time appoynted. The kynge shall do what hym lyst * he *d.Thes.4 shall exalte and magnifye hym selfe agaynst all that is God. Yee, he shall speake marueylous thynges agaynst the God of all goddes wherin he shall prospere, so longe tyll the * wzath be fulfylled, foz the conclusyõ is de- * Apoc.xi.d uised alredy. He shall not regarde the God of hys fathers, but his lust shall be vpõ wemẽ. Yee, he shall not care foz eny God, foz he shall magnifye him selfe aboue all. In hys place shall he wozshype the myghtie stoute God: and the God whom his fathers knewe not, shall be honoure with golde and syluer, with pzecious stones and pleasaunt Jewels.

This shall be do, thozowe hys stroge fensed places, settinge vpe hys straunge God whom he confesseth and encreasinge his glorye. Soche as will receaue hym, & take hym foz God, he shall geue thẽ greate wozshyppe and power: yee, and make thẽ Lozdes of the multitude, and geue them the lande with rewardes. In the latter tyme shall the kynge of the south stryue wyth him: and the kynge of the nozthin lyke maner shall come against him with charettes, hozsmen and wt a greate nauy of shyppes. He shall come into the landes, destroye and go thozowe: he shall entre also into the fayre pleasaunt lãde: Many cyties and coũtres shall decaye * excepte Edõ, * Apo.xi.d Moab and the best of the chyldren of Ammon, whych shall escape from hys hande. He shall stretch fozth his handes vpon the countrees, & the lande of Egypte shall not escape hym. Foz thozowe his goynge in, he shall haue dominion ouer the treasures of syluer and golde, and ouer all the pzecious Jewels of Egypt, Libia and Ethiopia. * Neuertheless, the tydynges out of the East and the nozth shall trouble him, foz the whych cause he shall goo fozth to destroye and rote owte a greate multitude. The tentes of hys palace shall be pytched betwyxte the two sees, vpon the hyll of the noble Sanctuary, foz he * Apo.xiii. and.xv.c. shall come to his dethe, * and then shall no man helpe hym.

The.xij.Chapter.

The prophecieth the resurrecyon of the deed. The darcknesse of the prophecye of Daniel.

The tyme wyll come also, that the great pzince * Michael, which standeth on thy peoples side, shal aryse vp, foz * there shall come a tyme of trouble, soch as neuer was, sens there began to be eny people, vnto that same tyme. Then shall thy people be delyuered, yee, all those ỹ be founde wzytten in the boke. * Many of them that slepe in the dust of the earth, shall awake: some to the euerlastynge lyfe, some to perpetuall shame & repzofe. * The wyse (soch as haue taught other) shall glyster, as the shynynge of heauen: and those ỹ haue instructe the multitude vnto godlynesse, shalbe as ỹ starres, wozlde without ende.

And thou O Daniel, shut vp these wozdes, and seale the boke tyll the last time. Many shall go aboute here and there, and then shall knowledge increase. So I Daniel loked, & beholde, there stode (as it were) other two: one vpon thys shoze of the water, the other vpon yonder syde. And one of thẽ sayd vnto hym, which was clothed in lynen and stode aboue vpon the waters of the floude. How lõge shall it be to the ende of these wõderous wozckes?

I herde it well, but I vnderstode it not. Then sayde I: O my Lozd, what shall happen after that? he answered: Go thy waye Daniel, foz these wozdes shall be closed vp & sealed, tyll the last tyme: and many shalbe purifyed, clensed & tryed. (as it were wt fyre) But the vngodly shall lyue wyckedly * and those wicked (as many of them as they be) shall haue no vnderstãdynge. As foz soch as haue vnderstãding, they shall regarde it. The ende of the Prophecye of Daniel.

The booke of the Prophete Oseas.

The fyrst Chapter.

The tyme wherin Oseas prophecyed. Oseas by takynge an harlot to hys wyfe, signifyeth the Idolatrye of the people. The destruccion of the ofspringe of Jehu, & of the Israelytes, is prophecyed.

This is the wozde of the Lozde, that came vnto Oseas the sonne of Beery * in the dayes of Oseas, Joathan, Achas and Jezechias kynges of Judã: and in the tyme of Jeroboã sonne of Joas kynge of Israel. *4.reg.xiiij. rb.rbi. and.rbv.c.

Fyrst, when the Lozde spake vnto Oseas he sayde vnto hym. * Go thy waye, take an harlott to thy wyfe, and get chyldren by her: foz the lande hath commytted greate whozdome agaynst the Lozde. So he went, & toke Gomer the daughter of Deblaim: whych conceaued, and brought fozth a sonne. And the Lozde sayde vnto hym: call hys name Jesrael, foz * I wyll shortly auẽge the bloude of * Jesrael vpon the house of Jehu, & wyll bzynge the kyngdome of the house of Israel to an ende. Then wyll I breake the bowe of Israel, in the valley of Jesrael. * Leui.xxi.b. Ezec.xxiii.v. *iiij.re.xv.c. and.rbiii. and rbiii.b. *iij.re.xxi.b.

She conceaued yet agayne, and bare a daughter. And he sayde vnto hym. Call her name. Lozuhamah (that is, not optayninge mercy) * foz I wyll haue no pytie vpon the house of Israel, but fozget them, and put thẽ cleane out of remembzaunce. * Neuertheless, I wyll haue mercy vpon the house of Juda, and wyll saue thẽ, euen thozowe the Lozde theyr God. But I wyll not delyuer them thozowe eny bowe, swearde, battell, hozses oz hozsmen. *iiij.re.xvii. * Gen.xlix.b iiij. re.xix.g

Nowe, whẽ she had weaned Lozuhamah, she conceaued agayne, and bare a sonne. Then sayde he: call hys name, Loamy. Foz why? ye are not my people, therfoze will not I be your God. And though the nombze of the chyldren of Israel be as the lande of the see, whych can nether be measured ner tolde: yet in the place where it is sayde vnto thẽ * ye be not my people: euen there shall it be * Rom.ix.e. thus repozted of them * they be the chyldren of the lyuynge God. * Then shall the chyldren of Juda and the chyldren of Israel be gathered together agayne and chose them selues one head, and then departe out of the lande: foz greate shalbe the daye of Israel. *Iohn.i.a. * rv.xxvii.g

¶ The.iiij. Chapter.

¶ A complaynte agaynst the people and the prestes of Israel.

Heare the worde of the Lord, O A ye chyldren of Israel. For the Lorde must punysh, them that dwell in the lande. And why? There is no trewthe, there is no mercie, there is no knowledge of God in the lande: but swearyng, lyēge, manslaughter: theft & aduoutry haue gottē the ouerhande, and one bloudgyltinesse foloweth another. Therfore shall the land be in a miserable case, and all they that dwell therin, shall be roted out. The beastes in the felde, the foules in the ayre, & the fyshes in ỹ see shall dye. Yet is there none, ỹ wyll chastē nor reproue another. * For thy people rebuke the the prestes, * Mala.ii. whych shulde reformme other men.

Ephraim was vnto me, as a cowe ꝑ is vsed to go to plowe, therfore I loued hym, and fell vpon his fayre necke. I drowe Ephraim, Juda plowed, and Jacob played ꝑ hulbāde mā: Sowe vnto righteousnes, and reape the frutes of weldoinge: plowe vp your freshe lande, for it is tyme to seake the Lorde tyll he come and rayne righteousnesse vpon you. But you haue plowed vngodlynes: ye haue reped iniquytie, you haue eaten the frute of lyes. Seynge thou puttest thy cōfydence in thyne awne wayes, and leanest to the multitude of thy worthyes: there shall growe a sedicyon amonge thy people. All thy stronge cyties shalbe layed waste, euen as Salmana was destroyed with his kamplyers, thorowe him that was auenged of Arbell, in the daye of batayll, where the mother perysshed with her chyldren. Euen so shall it go with you (O Bethell) because of youre malicyous wickednesse. Lyke as the morynge goeth awaye, so shall the kynge of Israel passe.

This is the wozde of ỹ Lõzde, that came vnto Joell the sonne of Phatuel. Heare, O yee elders: ponder this well, all ye that dwell in the lan-de: yf euer there happened soch a thinge in youre dayes, oz in the dayes of youre fathers. Tell youre chyldren of it, and lett them shewe it vnto their chyldren, and so they to certifye theyr posterite therof. Loke what the caterpyller hath lefte, that hath the grashoper eate vp:

what the grashoper lefte, that hath the lo-B
custe eaten vp: and what the locuste hath left, that hath the blaskynge cõsumed. Wake vp ye dzonckardes, and wepe: mourne all ye wyne suppets, because of youre swete wyne, for it shall be taken awaye frõ youre mouth.
Yee, a myghtye and an vnnumerable people shall come vp into my lande: these haue teeth lyke the teeth of lyons, and chaftebones lyke
the lyonelles. * They shall make my vyne- *Deu.xxxij.b.
yarde waste, they shall pyll of the barckes of my fyggetrees, strype them bare, cast thẽ awaye, and make the braunches whyte.

Wake thy moone as a wyzgin doth that gyrdeth her selfe with sacke, because of her byrde grome. For the meate and dzynckof-fringe shalbe taken awaye from the house of the Lozde, and the prestes the Lozdes minysters shall mourne. The felde shalbe wasted, the lande shalbe in a mysserable case: for the cozne shalbe destroyed, the swete wyne shall come to cõfusyon, and the oyle vtterly dcso-late. The housbandmen and the wyne gardeners shall loke pyteously and make lamẽ-tacyon, foz the wheate, wyne and barly, and because the harueste vpon the felde is so clene destroyed. The grapegarderers shall make greate mone, when the vyneyarde and fyggetrees be so vtterly wasted. Yee, all the põgawnettes, palmetrees, appletrees, & the other trees

trees of the felde shall wyther awaye. Thus the merye cheare of the chyldren of men, shall come to confusyon.

Gyrde you, and make youre mone, O ye prestes, mourne ye mynystres of the aulter: goo your waye in, and slepe in sack cloth, O ye officiers of my God: for the meat & drinkofferinge shall be taken awaye frō the house of youre God. Proclayme a fastinge, call the cōgregacyon, gather the elders * and all the inhabitours of the lande together into the house of the Lorde your God, and crye vnto ỹ Lorde: alas, alas for thys daye. And why? the daye of the Lorde is at hāde, and cometh as a destroyer from the almyghtye. Shall not the meates be taken awaye before oure eyes, & the myrth also and ioye from the house of our God? The sede shall perysshe in the grounde, the garners shall lye waste, the flores shalbe broken downe, for ỹ corne shall be destroyed. O what a sygbynge make the kyne? the bullockes are very euell lykynge, because they haue no pasture: and the shepe are fampished awaye.

O Lorde, to the wyll I crye: for the fyre hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wyldernes, and the flame hath brent vp all the trees of the felde. Yee, the wylde beastes crye also vnto the: for the water riuers are dryed vp, and the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wyldernesse.

¶ The.ij. Chapter.

Blowe out the trōpette in Syon, and crye vpon my holy hyll, that all soche as dwell in ỹ lande, maye tremble at it: * for the daye of the Lorde commeth, and is harde at hande: a darcke daye, a gloompynge daye, a cloudy daye, yee, and a stormy daye, lyke as ỹ morynnge sprydeth out vpon ỹ hylles. Namely, a greate and myghtye people: soch as haue not bene sence the beginninge, nether shall be after them for euermore. Before him shall be a consumynge fyre, and behynde him a burnynge flame. The lande shalbe as a garden of pleasure before him, but behinde him shall it be a very waste wyldernesse, and there is no man, that shall escape hym: They are to loke vpon lyke barbed horses, & runne lyke horsmen. They skippe vp vpō the hylles, as it were the sounde of charettes: as the flame of fyre that consumeth the strawe, and as a myghtye people redy to the batayll.

The folke shalbe afrayed of hym, all faces shalbe as blacke as a pot: These shall rūne lyke gyauntes, and leape ouer the walles lyke men of warre. Euery man in his goinge shall kepe hys araye, and not goo out of hys path. There shall not one dryue another, but eche shall kepe his awne waye. They shall breake in at the wyndowes, & not be hurte: They shall come into the cytie, & runne vpō the walles. They shall clyme vp vpon the houses, and skyppe in at the wyndowes lyke a thefe. The earth shall quake before hym, yee, ỹ heauens shalbe moued. * The sunne & the moone shall be darckened, and the starres shall withdraw ther bryghtnes. The Lord shall shewe hys voyce before hys hoost, for his hoost is greate, stronge, and myghtye to fulfyll hys commaundement. Thys is that greate and marueylous fearfull daye of the Lorde. ‡ And who is able to abyde it?

Nowe therfore sayeth ỹ Lorde. * Turne you vnto me with all your hertes, with fastinge, weppynge and mournynge, rēte your hertes, and not youre clothes. Turne you vnto ỹ Lord your God, * for he is gracious and mercyfull, longe sufferynge and of great cōpassyon: and redy to pardone wyckednes. Then (no doute) he also shall turne, and forgeue, and after his chastenynge, he shall lett your increase remayne, for meat and drinckoffrynges vnto ỹ Lord your God? * Blowe out with the trōpette in Syon, proclayme a fastynge, call the congregacyon, and gather the people together: warne the congregacyō, gather the elders, brynge the chyldren & sucklynges together. Lett the brydegrome go forth of his chābre, and the bryde out of her closet. Lett the prestes serue the Lorde betwyxte ỹ porch and the aulter, wepinge and sayinge: be fauourable, O Lorde, be fauourable vnto thy people: let not thyne heritage be brought to soch confusyon, lest ỹ heathen be lordes therof. * Wherfore shulde they saye amonge the heathen: where is nowe theyr God.

Then shall the Lorde be gelous ouer his lande, and spare hys people: yee, the Lorde shall answere, and saye vnto his people: Beholde, I wyll sende you corne, wyne & ople, so that ye shall haue plenty of them: and I will nomore geue you ouer to be a reproffe amonge the heathen. Agayne, as for him of the north, I shall dryue him farre from you: and chute him out into a drye & waste lande, his face towarde the east see, and his hynder partes towarde the vtmost see. The stynche of him shall go vp, and his fylthy corrupcyō shall fall vpō him selfe, because he hath dealt so proudly. Feare not (O lande) but be glad and reioyce, for the Lorde will do great thinges. Be not ye afrayed nether (O ye beastes of the felde) for the pastures shalbe grene, and the trees shall beare their fruite: the fyggetrees and vyneyardes shall geue theyr increase.

Be glad then (O ye chyldren of Syon) & reioyce in the Lorde youre God, for he hath hath geuen you a teacher of ryghteousnesse: * & he it is that shall sende you downe showers of rayne, early and late in the fyrst moneth: so that the garners shalbe full of corne, and the prelles plenteous in wyne and ople. And as for the yeares that the greshoper, locuste, blastynge, and caterpiller (my greate hoost, which I sent amonge you) haue eaten vp, I shall restore them to you agayne. So ỹ ye shall haue ynough to eate, & be satisfyed: and prayse the name of the Lorde your God, that so marueylously hath dealte with you.

And my people shall neuer be confounded any more. Ye shall well knowe, that I am in ỹ myddest of Israell, and that I am youre God: yee, and that there is none other, and my people shall no more be brought to confusion.

* After this, will I poure out my spyrete vpon all flesh: and your sonnes and your daughters shall prophecy: your olde men shall dreame dreames, and youre yonge men shall se visyōs, yee, in those dayes I will poure out my spyrete vpon seruautes and maydens. I will shewe wonders in heauē aboue and tokens in the earth beneth: bloude and fyre, and the vapoure of smoke. The sunne shalbe turned into darckenes, and the mone into bloude: before the greate & notable daye of the Lord come. And the tyme shall come, that * whosoeuer calleth on the name of the Lorde, shalbe saued. For vpon the mounte Syon and at Jerusalem, there shalbe a salnacyon, lyke as ỹ Lorde hath promysed: yee, and amonge the other remnaunt, whom the Lorde shall call.

¶ The.iij. Chapter:

¶ Of the iudgement of God agaynst the enemyes of hys people.

For take hede: in those dayes and at the same tyme, when I turne agayne the captiuyte of Juda and Jerusalem: I shall gather all ye ople together, and brynge them in ỹ valley of Josaphat: and there will I reason with thē: because of my people and heritage of Israel: whō they haue scatred about in the nacyons: and parted my lāde: yee, they haue cast lottes for my people, the yonge mē haue they set in the bordel house, & solde ỹ damsels for wyne, that they myght haue to drincke. * Thou Tirus and Sidon and all ye borders of the Philistines: what haue ye to do wt me? Will ye dekye me? well, yf ye will nedes dekye me, I shall recompence you, euen vpon your heade, & ỹ rycht worthely: for ye haue taken awaye my syluer and golde, my fayre and goodly Jewels, and brought thē into your goddes houses. The chyldren also of Juda and Jerusalem haue ye solde vnto ỹ Grekes, ỹ ye myght brynge them farre from the borders of their awne countrees.

Beholde therfore, I wyll rayse them out of the place, where ye haue solde them, * and will rewarde you euen vpō your head. Your sonnes and youre daughters wyll I sell thorowe the handes of the chyldrē of Juda, and so they shall geue them forth to sell, vnto thē of Saba, a people of a farre countre: for the Lorde him selfe hath sayde it. Crye oute these thynges amonge the Gentyles, proclayme warre, wake vp the gyauntes, let thē drawe nye, let them come vp all ỹ lusty warryours of thē. * Make you swerdes of your plowshares, and speares of youre sycles & sythes. Let the weake man saye: I am stroge. Muster you, & come, all ye heathen roūde about: gather you together, there shall ỹ Lord laye all thy gyauntes to the grounde. Lett ỹ people aryse, & get thē to the valley of Josaphat for there will I sytt, & iudge all heathē roūde about. * Laye to your sythes, for ỹ harueste is rype: come, get you downe: the wyne presse is full, yee, ỹ wynepresses runne ouer, for their wickednes is waxen greate.

In the valley appoynted, there shalbe many, many people: for the daye of the Lorde is nye in the valley appoynted. * The sunne & moone shalbe darckened, & the starres shall withdraw their lyght. * The Lorde shall roare out of Syon, and crye out of Jerusalē, that the heauens and the earth shall quake withall. But the Lorde shalbe a defence vnto hys awne people, and a refuge for the chyldren of Israel. Thus shall ye knowe, that I the Lorde youre God dwell vpon my holy mounte of Syon. Then shall Jerusalem be holy, & there shall no straungers go thorowe her any more.

* & Then shall the mountaynes dropp swete wyne, and the hylles shall flowe with mylcke. All the ryuers of Juda shall haue water ynough, and out of the Lordes house there shall flowe a spryng, to water the broke of * Sitim: but Egypte shalbe layed waste, and Edom shalbe desolate: because they haue dealte so cruelly with ỹ chyldren of Juda, and shed innocent bloude in theyr lande. ¶ The tyme of the prophecy of Amos. The worde of the Lorde agaynst Israh, agaynst Tyre, agaynst Edom, and agaynst the sonnes of Ammon.

A THese are the sermons that were shewed vnto Amos, (which was one of the shepherdes at Thecua) vpō Israell, in the tyme of * Oſiah kynge of Juda, and in the tyme of * Jeroboam ꝑ sonne of Joah kynge of Israel, two yeare before the earth quake. And he sayde: * The Lorde shall roare oute of Sion, and shewe his voyce from Jerusalem: so that the pastures of the shepherdes shalbe in a myserable case, & the toppe of Charmel dryed vp. Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre and foure wyckednesses of * Damascus, I will not spare her: because they haue throshed Galaad with yron flayles. But I will sende a fyre into the house of Hazaell, the same shall consume the palaces of Benadab. Thus will I breake ꝑ
B barres of Damascus, and rote out the inhabyter from the felde of Auen, And him that holdeth the scepter, out of the pleasaūt house: so that the people shalbe dryuen out of kayre Siria, sayeth ꝑ Lorde. Thus sayeth ꝑ Lord: For thre and foure wickednesses of * Gaza, I will not spare her: because they make the presoners yet more captyue, and haue dryuē them into the lande of Edom. Therfore will I sende a fyre into ꝑ walles of Gaza, whych shall deuoure her houses. I will rote out thē that dwell at Asdod and him that holdeth ꝑ scepter of Ascalō, and stretche out myne hāde ouer Accaron, that the remnaunt of the Philistines shall perysshe, sayeth the Lorde.

C Thus sayeth the Lorde: For thre & foure wickednesses of the cytie of * Tyre, I wyll not spare her: because they haue increased the captiuyte of the Edomites, and haue not remembred the * brotherly couenaunt. Therfore, wyll I sende a fyre into the walles of Tyre, that shall consume her palaces. Thus sayeth the Lord: For thre and foure wickednesses of * Edom I wyll not spare hym, because ‡ he persecuted hys brother with the swerde, destroyed his mothers wombe, bare hatred very longe, and so kepte indignacion all waye by hym. Therfore wyll I sende a fyre into Theman, which shall deuoure the

Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre & foure wickednesses of the chyldren of * Ammon, I wyll not spare them: because they rypt vp the wemen greate wyth chylde in Galaad, to make the borders of their landes the wyder. Therfore, I will kyndle a fyre in ꝑ walles of Rabbath, that shall consume her palaces: with a greate crye, in the daye of batayll, in tempest and in the daye of storme: so that their kynge shall go into captiuyte he & hys princes together, sayeth the Lorde.

Therfore, wyll I sende a fyre into Moab, which shall cōsume the palaces of Carioth: so that Moab shall perysshe with noyse and the sounde of a shawme. I wyll rote out the iudge from amonge them, & slaye all hys princes with him, sayeth the Lorde. Therfore, will I sende a fyre into Juda, which shall consume the palaces of Jerusalem.

Thus sayeth ꝑ Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of Israel, I will not spare him
C because he hath solde the ryghteous for money, & the poore for shoes. They treade vpon poore mens heades, in the dust of the earth, & croke the wayes of the meke. Yet destroyed I the * Amorite before them, that was as hye as the Cedre trees, and as stronge as the okes: notwithstandynge I destroyed his frute from aboue and his rote from vnder:

¶ The reproueth the house of Israel of wyckednes.

A HEare, what the Lord speaketh vnto you (O ye chyldrē of Israel) namely, vnto all the trybes, whō I brought out of Egypt, and sayde:
* you only haue I accepted frō all the generacyons of the earth: therfore, will I visit you in all your wickednesses. Haye twayne walke together excepte they be agreed amonge them selues? * Doth a lyon roare in the wodde, except he haue a praye? Or crieth a lyons whelpe out of his denne, except he Crye they out Alarum with the trōpet in the cytie, and ꝑ people not afrayed? Commeth there eny plage in a cytie without it be the Lordes doynge? Nowe doth ꝑ Lorde God no maner of thinge, but he telleth his secrete before vnto hys seruauntes the prophetes. When a lyon roareth, who wyll not be afrayed? C Preach in the palaces at Asdod, and in ꝑ palaces of the lande of Egypt, and saye: gather you together vpon the mountaynes of Samaria, so shall ye se greate murther and violent oppressyon amōge thē, for why? they regarde not ꝑ thinge that is ryght, sayeth ꝑ Lorde: they gather together euell gottē goodes, and laye vp robbery in their houses:

Therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde God. This lande shalbe troubled and beleged ro-

A HEare thys worde ye fat kyne, that be vpon the hyll of Samaria: ye that do poore men wronge, and oppresse the nedy: ye that saye to your lordes: bryngе hyther, let vs drynke. A UPon the.xxiiii. daye of the.vi. moneth, in the seconde yeare of kynge Darius, the.xxi. daye of ỹ seuẽth moneth, came ỹ worde of ỹ Lord by the prophete Aggeus, sayẽge: speake to Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel prince of Juda, & to Jesua the sonne of Josedech the hye preste, & to the residue of ỹ people, and saye. * Who is left amõg you, ỹ sawe thys houſe in her fyrst bewtye? And now make youre prayer before God, that he maye haue mercy vpon vs: for soche thinges haue ye done. Shal he regard your perssonnes, thinke ye, sayeth the Lorde of hostes? ¶The threatenynges agaynst the prestes bepnge seducers of the people.

AND now (O ye prestes) this cōmaundement tousheth you: yf ye wyll not heare it, ner regard it, to geue ꝑ glory vnto my name, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes, *I will sende a curse vpon you, & will curse youre blessynges: yee curse them wyll I yf ye do not take hede. And ye shall knowe, that I haue sent thys commaundemēt vnto you: that my *couenaūt which I made with Leui, might stande sayeth the Lorde of hoostes.

I made a couenaunt of lyfe & peace wyth him: this I gaue him, that he myght stande in awe of me: and so he dyd feare me, ād had my name in reuerence. The lawe of truthe was in his mouth, ād there was no wickednesse founde in his lyppes. *Haue we not all one father? Hath not one God made vs? ‡ why doth euery one of vs then despise his awne brother, & so breake the couenaūt of oure fathers? Now hath Juda offended: yee, the abhominacion is dōne in Israel and in Jerusalē *for Juda hath defyled the Sanctuary of the Lorde, which he loued, and hath kepte the daughter of a straunge God. But the Lorde shal destroye the mā that doth this: (yee, both the master ād the scoler) out of the tabernacle of Jacob with hym that offreth vp meatoffryng vnto ꝑ Lorde of hoostes. ## ¶The.iii.Chapter.

¶Of the messenger of the Lorde John Baptist. Of the daye of the Lorde, and of Eliah.

BEholde, *I will sende my messaūger, whiche shall prepare the waye before me: ād the Lorde ‡whom ye wolde haue, shal soone come to his temple, yee, euē the messaunger of the couenaunt whom ye longe for.

Beholde, he commeth, saieth the Lorde of hoostes. But who may abyde the daye of his cōmyng? Who shalbe able to endure, when he appeareth? For he is like a goldsmythes fyre, ād lyke walshers sope. He shal syt him downe to trye and to clense the syluer, he shall pourge the chyldren of Leui, and purifye them lyke as golde and syluer: that they maye bringe meatofferinges vnto the Lorde in righteousnes. Then shall the offeryng of Juda and Jerusalem be acceptable vnto the Lorde, lyke as from the begynnynge ād in the yeares, a fore tyme. I wyll come and punysche you, ād I my selfe wyl be a swyfte wytnes agaynst the witches, agaynste the aduouterers, agaynst false swearers: yee, & agaynst those that wrongeously kepe backe the hyrelynges dewty: which vexe the wyddowes and the fatherlesse, and oppresse the straunger, and feare not me, saieth the Lorde of hoostes. ye vse falshed and disceate with me? yet ye saye wherin vse we disceate wt the? *In Tithes & heaue offeringes. * Therfore are ye cursed wyth penury, because ye dissemble with me, all the sorte of you.

*Bringe euery Tithe into my barne, that there maye be meat in myne house: and proue me withall (sayeth the Lorde of hoostes) yf I wyll not open the wyndowes of heauē vnto you, ād poure you out a blessyng with plenteousnesse. Yee, I shall reproue the consumer for your sakes, so ꝑ he shall not eate vp the frute of youre grounde, nether shall the vynyarde be barē in the felde, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: In so moch that all people shall saye, that ye be blessed, for ye shall be a pleasaūt lande, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes.

But they that feare God, saye thus one to another: the Lorde consydereth and heareth it. Yee, it is before him a memoryal boke, wrytten for soch as feare the Lorde, and remembre his name. And in the daye that I wyll make (sayth the Lorde of hoostes) they shalbe myne awne possession: and I will fauoure them, lyke as a man fauoureth hys awne sonne, that doth hym seruyce. ## The fyrst Chapter.

Josias holdeth passeouer. After his death is Jechonias hys sonne made kynge in hys steade: whom the kyng of Egypte putteth out, and setteth in hys brother Joachim. Jerusalem is destroyed, & Sedechias is taken.

And * Josias helde the feast of Easter in Jerusalem vnto the Lorde, & slewe ỹ Passeouer the xiiii. daye of the fyrst moneth. He set the Prestes also in ordre (accordynge to theyr dayly courses) beyng arayed in lōge garmētes in the tēple of the Lord. And he spake vnto ỹ Leuites ỹ holy mynysters of Israel, ỹ they shulde halowe them selues vnto ỹ Lord, to set ỹ holy arcke of the Lord, in the house ỹ kyng Salomon the sonne of Dauid had buylded, and sayde. Ye shall no more beare ỹ Arcke vpon youre shulders. Now serue youre Lorde, & take ỹ charge of hys people of Israel, after youre vyllages and youre trybes: accordynge as kynge Dauid ỹ kynge of Israel, hath ordened, & accordynge as Salomon hys sonne hath honorably prepared: ye, loke ỹ yee al do seruyce in the temple, accordynge to the ordrynge & distribucyon of ỹ principall men which are appoynted out of ỹ trybes, to do seruice for ỹ chyldren of Israel. * Kyll the Passeouer, & prepare offringes for your brethren, & do accordynge to ỹ cōmaundement of the Lord, which was geuen vnto Moses. And vnto ỹ people ỹ was foūde Josias gaue. xxx. thousande of shepe, lambes, kyddes, & goates, & thre thousande oxen. These the kynge (of his kynglye liberalite) gaue vnto the people, accordynge as he had promised: & to ỹ Prestes for ỹ Passeouer, he gaue two M. shepe, & an hundreth oxen. Moreouer, Jechonias, & Semeias, & Nathanael brethren, & Halabias, Jehiel, & Josabad gaue them to the Passeouer, fyue thousande shepe & fyue hundred bullockes.

And when these thynges were brought to passe, ỹ Prestes & the Leuites stode goodly in theyr ordre, & had the vnleuened bred thorow out ỹ trybes. And after ỹ ordrynge of ỹ principall men in the trybes, they offered vnto the Lorde in ỹ syght of the people accordyng * as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses, & so they rosted ỹ Easter lambe as accordyng was. As for ỹ thācke offrynges & the other, they dyght them in kettels and pottes, & set them before the people wt good wyll, & afterwarde before them selues, and the Prestes. For ỹ Prestes offred the fatt, vntyll it tyme was expyred, but ỹ Leuites prepared for thē selues & for theyr brethren the chyldren of Aaron. The holy syngers also ỹ chyldren of Asaph stode in theyr ordre, accordyng as Dauid deuysed. So dyd Asaph zachary & Iduthun, whych were appoynted by ỹ kynge. Moreouer ỹ porters & dore kepers stode by ỹ dores & ỹ diligently, so ỹ none went out of his stādynge & seruice: for theyr brethren (ỹ Leuites) prepared for them. Thus were all thynges perfourmed, that belonged to the offerynge of the Lorde. In ỹ daye they helde the Passeouer, and offred thankofferynges beside ỹ sacrifyce of the Lorde, accordyng to the cōmaundement of kyng Josias.

So the chyldren of Israel whych were then present helde an honorable Passeouer & ỹ feast of swete bread. vii. dayes lōge. Yee soch a Passeouer was not kepte in Israel, from ỹ tyme of the Prophet Samuel. And all ỹ kynges of Israel helde not soch an Easter, as this which kyng Josias helde, & the prestes, ỹ Leuites, ỹ Jewes & all Israel, of all them ỹ were at Jerusalem. And in the xviii. yere of ỹ raygne of Josias was this Passeouer kept. And wt a parfecte herte dyd kynge Josias ordre all his workes, before ỹ Lord, & the thynges ỹ were wryttē of hym in tymes past, cōcernyng those that synned & were vngodly agaynst ỹ Lord before all people, & that sought not ỹ worde of ỹ Lord vpon Israel. * After al these actes of kyng Josias, Pharao ỹ kyng of Egypte wēt vp and came towarde Carmis by Euphrates, & Josias went to mete hym. Then sent the kyng of Egypte vnto Josias saying: what haue I to do wt the, O kyng of Juda? I am not sent of ỹ Lord to fyght agaynst the, for my warre is vpon Euphrates, go thou thy waye home agayne in all ỹ haste. And Josias wolde not turne agayne vpon hys chare, but vnderstoke to fyght agaynst hym, & herkened not vnto ỹ worde of the prophet, which he tolde him out of ỹ mouth of God, but pyched a battayll agaynst hym in the felde of Mageddo. And ỹ princes prealled to kyng Josias. Then sayde ỹ kyng vnto his seruauntes. Cary me awaye out of the battayll, for I am sore wounded. And immediatly his seruauntes toke him awaye out of the front of the battayll. Then sat he vp vpon ỹ secōde charett, came to Jerusalem, dyed, & was buryed in his fathers sepulcre. And in al Jewry they mourned for Josias, yee the rulers also wt theyr wyues made lamētacion for hym vnto this daye. And this was done euer styll in Israel.

And he dyd euell also in the syght of the Lorde, & cared not for ꝑ wordes ꝑ were spoken vnto him * by the prophet Jeremy at the mouth of ꝑ Lord. And where he had made an othe vnto kyng Nabuchodonosor, he forswore him selfe, & fel from hym hauyng a stynneck & a hert, & transgressed all ꝑ statutes and ordynaunces of ꝑ Lorde God of Israel. The rulers also & heades of the people of ꝑ Lord dyd moch euell, & became vngodly, more then the heathen, beynge defyled in all maner of abhominaciōs. Yee & defiled ꝑ holy tēple of ꝑ Lorde at Jerusalem. And the God of theyr fathers sent his messaūgers vnto thē, to turne them backe & to call them agayne from theyr synnes: for he wolde fayne haue spared them for his holy tabernacles sake. Neuertheles, they had his messaungers in derysyon: & loke what God spake vnto thē by hys prophetes, they made but a sporte of it. This drew on so lōge, tyll ꝑ Lord was wroth wō his people for theyr vngodlynes, & tyll he caused the kynges of the Caldees to come vp, which slew theyr pōge men wō the swerde, yee euen ī the cōpasse of their holy tēple, & spared no body, nether ponge ner olde, nether mayden ner ponge man: but they were all delyuered into the power of the kynges of the Caldees, & all the holy vessels of the Lorde & the kynges treasures toke they, & caryed them vnto Babylon. * As for the house of the Lorde, they went vp in to it, & brent it, & brake downe ꝑ walles of Jerusalem, set fyre vpon her towres, destroyed all her noble buyldinges & brought them to naught, and the people that were not slayne with ꝑ swerde they caryed vnto Babylon.

* Jer. xxvi. and. xlii.d.

Thus became they presoners and bonde men of ꝑ kynge of Babylon, tyll they were delyuered & raygned for them selues, * whē ꝑ wordes of ꝑ Lorde were fulfylled, whych he promysed them by the mouth of the prophet Jeremy, and tyll the lāde had her rest: namely, all the tyme that it laye wayst, had it rest and quyetnes .lxxvii. yeares.

¶ The.ii. Chapter.

¶ Cyrus geueth lycence to the Jewes to returne to Jerusalem, and restoreth them the vesselles of the tēple. After that are there letters sende to Artaxerses, which accuse the Jewes for buyldynge of the cytye: and so is the buyldyng dryuen of vntyll the.ii. yeare of Darius.

NOw when kyng Cyrus raigned ouer the Perſians, & when ꝑ Lord wolde perfourme ꝑ worde that he had promised by the mouth of the prophet Jeremy: the Lord rayled vp ꝑ spyrite of Cyrus, the kynge of Persians, so that he caused thys writynge to be proclaymed thorow oute hys whole realme, sayinge: Thus sayeth the kynge of Persians: The Lorde of Israel that hye Lorde hath made me kynge of the lande, and cōmaunded me to buylde hym an house at Ierusalem in Iewry. If there be eny now of youre people, the Lord be with hym, and go vp with him to Ierusalem. And all they that dwell roun de aboute that place shall helpe them, whether it be with golde, wō syluer, wō gyftes, wō horses, and necessary catell, & all other thynges that are brought with a fre wyll to the house of the Lorde at Ierusalem.

II. Esdrall. xxvi.b. * I. Esd.ii.

Then the pryncipall men out of the trybes and vyllages of Juda and Beniamin stode vp: so dyd the prestes also and the Leuites (whom ꝑ Lorde had moued) to go vp, and to buylde the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem. And they that were aboute them, helped them with al maner of golde, and syluer, and catell also, and with many liberall gyftes, and thys dyd many one, whose mynde was stered vp ther to. * Kynge Cyrus also brought forth the vessels and ornamentes that were halowed vnto the Lorde, (whych Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon had caryed awaye from Jerusalem, and consecrated them to hys Idoll & ymage) and delyuered them to Mythrydatus hys treasurer, and by hym they were delyuered to Salmanasar ꝑ debite in Iewry. And this was ꝑ nōbre of them: Two thousand & .iiii. C. syluer boules .xxx. syluer basens .xxx. basens of golde .ii. M. and .iiii. C. vessels of syluer, & a thousande besyde. All ꝑ vessels of golde & syluer were .v. M. viii. C. & .lx. These were nōbred vnto Salmanasar, & to them ꝑ were come agayne wō hym to Jerusalem out of ꝑ captyuyte of Babylon. * Now in ꝑ tyme of kyng Artaxerses ꝑ kyng of Persia, these men. Balemus and Mithridatus, Sabellius, Rathimus, Balthemus, Semelius the Scribe, and other ꝑ dwelt in Samaria & in other places vnder ꝑ dompynō therof, wrote a letter vnto kynge Artaxerses, wherin they cōplayned vnto ꝑ kynge of them in Iewry & Jerusalem. The letter was made after thys maner.

I. Esd.iiii.b

¶ Syr, thy seruaūtes Rathimus the storye wryter, Sabellius the Scribe, & other iudges of the courte in Celosyria & Phenyces. Be it knowne & manyfest to oure Lorde ꝑ kyng, ꝑ the Jewes which are come vp from you vnto vs into ꝑ rebellious & wycked cytye, begynne to buylde it agayne, & the walles aboute it, & to sett vp the temple a new. Now yf thys cytye & ꝑ walles therof be set vp agayne, they shall not onely refuse to geue trybutes & taxes, but also rebell vtterly agaynst the kynge. And for so moch as they take thys in hāde now aboute ꝑ tēple, we thought it reason, to thynke no scorne of it, but to shewe it vnto oure Lorde the kyng, & to certyfye hym therof: to thintēt ꝑ yf it please the kyng, he may cause it to be sought in ꝑ bokes of olde: and ꝑ shalt fynde soche warnynge wrytten, & shalt vnderstāde, ꝑ thys cytye hath all waye bene rebelyous & dysobediēt, ꝑ it hath subdued kynges & cytyes, & that ꝑ Jewes whych dwell ther in, haue euer bene a rebellyous, obstynate, vnfaythfull, and fyghtynge people, for the which cause this cytie is walted. Wherfore now we certyfye oure Lorde the kynge, ꝑ yf thys cytye be buylded & occupyed agayne, & the walles therof set vp a new, ꝑ canst haue no passage into Celosyria & Phenices.

¶ Then wrote the kynge to Rathimus the storye wryter, to Balthemus, to Sabellius the Scribe, & to ꝑ other officiers & dwellers in Syria and Phenices, after thys maner: I haue red the epistle whych ꝑ sentest vnto me, and haue commaunded to make diligēt search, & haue founde, ꝑ the cytye hath euer rebelled kynges, ꝑ the same people are dysobedient, & haue caused moch warre, & that myghty kynges haue raygned in Jerusalē, which also haue rayled vp taxes of Syria and Phenices. Wherfore, I haue cōmaunded those people, ꝑ they shall not buylde the cytye, ꝑ they make no more in it, and ꝑ they proceade no forther wō the buyldynge: for so moch as it myght be the cause of warre, and displeasure vnto kynges.

Now when Rathymus and Sabellius the Scribe, & the rulers in the lāde had red ꝑ writynge of kyng Artaxerses, they gatt them together, & came in all ꝑ haste to Jerusalem wō an hoost of horsmē, and wō moch people of fote, & forbad thē to buylde. And so they left of from buyldynge of the tēple, vnto the secōd yeare of kynge Darius.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

¶ Darius maketh a feast. The thre sentences of the thre ponge men, of whych the fyrst is declared.

KYnge Darius made a great feast vnto his seruauntes, vnto all hys courte, & to all the officers of Medea and Persia, yee to all ꝑ debytes and rulers that were vnder hym, from India vnto Ethiopia, an hūdreth & .xxvii. coūtres. So when they had eaten & dronken beyng satysfyed, and were gone home agayne, Darius the kyng wente into his chambre, layed hym downe to slepe, and so awaked.

Then the thre ponge men, that kepte the kynges personne, & watched hys body, commened amonge them selues, & spake one to another: let euery one of vs saye some thynge, & loke whose sentēce is wyser & more excellēt then the other, vnto hym shall kynge Darius geue greate gyftes, & clothe hym with purple. He shall geue hym vessels of golde to dryncke in, clothes of golde & coue rynges: he shall make hym a costely charet & a brydle of golde, he shall geue hym a bonet of whyte sylke, & a cheyne of golde about hys neck: yee he shalbe the secōde & pryncipall next vnto kyng Darius, & that because of his wysdome, and shalbe called the kynges kynsman.

So, euery one wrote his meanyng, sealed it, & layed it vnder ꝑ kynges pelowe, & sayde: when ꝑ kyng aryseth, we wyll geue him oure wrytynges, & loke whose worde ꝑ kynge & hys cheke Lordes iudge to be ꝑ moost wysely spoken, ꝑ same shall haue ꝑ victory. One wrote: Wyne is a strōge thynge. The second wrote: The kyng is stronger. The thyrd wrote: Wemen haue yet more strenghte, but aboue all thynges the trueth beareth awaye ꝑ victory. Now when the kyng was rysen vp, they toke theyr wrytynges & delyuered them vnto hym, & so he red thē. Thē sent he forth to call al his cheke lordes, all ꝑ debytes & rulers of the cōtrees of Medea & Persia. And when they were set downe in ꝑ coūcell, ꝑ wrytynges were red before them. And he cōmaūded to call for ꝑ ponge men, ꝑ they myght declare theyr meanynges thē selues by mouth. So when they were sent for, & came in, ꝑ kyng sayde vnto them: shewe vs & make vs to vnderstande what ꝑ thynges are ꝑ ye haue wrytten.

Then beganne ꝑ fyrſt (which had ſpoken of the ſtrengthe of wyne) & ſayde: O ye men, *Wyne is maruelous ſtrōge, & ouercōmeth them ꝑ dryncke it: it dyſceaueth the mynde, & bryngeth both the pooze man & the kyng to bondage & vanyte. Thus doth it alſo with the bondman & with the free, with the pooze & ryche: it taketh awaye theyr vnderſtandyng, and maketh them careleſſe and mery, ſo ꝑ none of them remembreth any heuynes det or dewtye: It cauſeth a man to thynke alſo that ꝑ thynge which he doth, is honeſt & good: & remēbreth not ꝑ he is a kyng, nor ꝑ he is inauctoryte, & that he ought not do ſoch thynges. Moreouer, when men are dryncking, they forgett all frendſhyp, all brotherly faythfulnes & loue: but as ſoone as they are dronken, they drawe out ꝑ ſwerde & wyll fyght: & when they are layed downe from ꝑ wyne, & ſo ryſen vp agayne, they cannot tell what they dyd: iudge ye now, is not wyne the ſtrongeſt? For who wolde els take in hand to do ſoch thynges? And when he had ſpoken this, he helde his tonge.

¶ The.iiii. Chapter.

¶ The declaracyon of the.ii. laſt ſentences of the young men, prophecyed in the Chapter before: of which the laſt, that is, that verytie beareth the victorye in all thynges, is moſt commended & alowed. Darius wryteth letters to all ꝑ rulers vnder hym, that they ſhulde ayde zorobabel to the buyldynge of Jeruſalem.

Then ꝑ ſeconde (which had ſayde, that the kynge was ſtrōger) beganne to ſpeake, ſaying: O ye men, are not they ꝑ ſtrongeſt & moſt excellēt, ꝑ conquere the lande, & the ſee, & all that is in ꝑ ſee, and in the earth? Now is the kynge lorde of all theſe thynges, & hath dompyon of thē all: and loke what he commaundeth, it is done. If he ſende his mē forth a warfare, they go, & breake downe hylles, walles & towres. They are ſlayne, & ſlaye (other men) themſelues, & ouerpaſſe not the kynges worde. If they get ꝑ victory, they bryngе ꝑ kyng all ꝑ ſpoyle. Lyke wyſe, the other ꝑ medle not with warres & fyghtynge, but tyll the grounde: when they reape, they bryngе tribute vnto the kynge. And yf the kynge alone do but cōmaunde to kyll, they kyll: yf he cōmaunde to forgeue, they forgeue: yf he cōmaunde to ſmyte, they ſmyte: yf he byd dryue awaye, they dryue awaye: yf he cōmaunde to buylde, they buylde: yf he commaunde to breake downe, they breake downe: yf he cōmaunde to plante, they plante. The commen people & the rulers are obedient vnto hym. And the kynge in the meane ſeaſon ſytteth hym downe, eateth, and dryncketh, and taketh his reſt: then kepe they watch rounde aboute the kynge, & not one of them darre get hym out of ꝑ waye, to do his awne buſynes, but muſt be obediēt vnto ꝑ kynge at a worde. Judge ye now, O ye men, how ſhulde not he go farre aboue vnto whō men are thus obedient? And when he had ſpoken this, he helde his tonge. The thyrd, whoſe name was zorobabel, which had ſpoken of wemen & of trueth, began to ſaye after this maner: O ye men, it is not ꝑ greate kynge, it is not ꝑ multytude of men, nether is it wyne ꝑ excelleth: Who is it then ꝑ hath the lordſhyp ouer them? Haue not wemen borne the kynge, and all ꝑ people that rule thoſe thynges? Haue not wemen borne thē, and brought them vp, ꝑ plante the vynes, wherout the wyne cōmeth? They make garmentes for all men, they geue honour vnto all men, & without wemen can not men lyue. If they gather golde, & ſyluer, & all precious thynges, and ſe a fayre well fauoured woman, they leaue all to gether, and turne theyr eyes onely vnto the woman, & gape vpon her, & haue more deſyre vnto her, then vnto ꝑ ſyluer & golde, or any maner of precious thyng. * A man leaueth his father ꝑ brought hym vp, leaueth his awne natural countre, & cleaueth vnto the woman: yee he ieopardeth his lyfe with ꝑ woman, & remēbreth nether father, ner mother, ner coūtre. By thys thē ye muſt nedes knowe, that wemen haue the dompynon ouer you.

¶ *Gene.ii.k. Mat.xix.a. 1. Corin.vi.a. Ephe.v.g.

Doth it not greue you? A man taketh his ſwerde, & goeth hys waye to ſteale, to kyll, to murther, to ſayle vpon the ſee, and ſeeth a lyon, and goeth in the darckneſs: & when he hath ſtollen, diſceaued and robbed, he bryngeth it vnto his loue. Agayne, a man loueth hys wyfe better then father and mother: yee many one there be, ꝑ rēne out of theyr wyttes, & become bondmen for theyr wyues ſakes: many one alſo haue periſhed, haue bene ſlayne, & haue ſynned becauſe of wemen.

And now beleue me, I knowe a kynge which is greate in hys power, and all lādes ſtande in awe of hym, & no man darre laye hande vpon hym: yet dyd Ile, that Apame (the daughter of ꝑ great kyng Bartacus) the kynges concubyne, ſat beſyde the kynge vpon the ryght hande, & toke of hys crowne from hys head, & ſet it vpon her awne head, and ſmote the kyng wyth her left hande. Moreouer, the kynge loked vpon her wyth open mouth: yf ſhe laughed vpon hym, he laughed alſo: but yf ſhe toke any diſpleaſure wyth hym, ꝑ kynge was fayne to flatter her, & to geue her good wordes, tyll he had gotten her fauour agayne.

O ye men, are not wemen then ſtronger? Greate is ꝑ earth, & hye is ꝑ heauen. Who doth theſe thinges? Then ꝑ kyng & ꝑ Prices loked one vpon another. So he beganne to ſpeake of ꝑ trueth: O ye men, are not wemē ſtrōger? Greate is the earth, hye is the heauen, lwyft is ꝑ courſe of the ſunne, * he compaſeth the heauen rounde aboute, & fetcheth his courſe hys courſe agayne to hys awne place in one daye. Is he not excellēt that doth thys? Yee greate is the trueth, & ſtrōger then all thynges. All the earth calleth vpon ꝑ trueth, the heauen prayſeth it, all workes ihake & trēble at it, & wt it is no vnryghteous thynge. Wyne is vnryghteous: ꝑ kyng is vnryghteous: wemen are vnryghteous: all the chyldren of men are vnryghteous, yee all theyr workes are vnryghteous, and there is no trueth in them, in theyr vnryghteouſnes alſo ſhall they be deſtroyed & periſh. As for the trueth, * it endureth, & is all waye ſtrōge: it lyueth and conquereth for euermore worlde without ende.

Eccli.rl.a. Eſdr.cbiii.a.

The trueth accepteth no perſonnes, it putteth no differēce betwixte riche or poore, betwyxte the myghtye or ſymple, but doth ryght vnto euery man, whether they be euell or good, and all men are louingly dealt wt̄ all in ꝑ workes of it. In ꝑ iudgemēt of it there is no vnryghteous thynge, but ſtrength kyngdom & power & maieſty for euermore. Bleſſed be the God of trueth.

And with that he helde his tōge, and all the people cryed, & ſayde: Great is ꝑ trueth, & aboue all. Then ſayde ꝑ kyng vnto hym: Aſke what thou wylt, more then is appoynted in ꝑ wryttynge, and I ſhall geue it the, for thou art founde wyſer then thy compaynons: ꝑ ſhalt ſyt next me, and be my kynſman. Then ſayde he vnto the kynge: Remēbre thy promyſe & vowe, which thou haſt vowed & promyſed (in the daye when thou cameſt to the kyngdome) to buylde vp Jeruſalem, & to ſende agayne all ꝑ veſſels and Jewels, ꝑ were taken awaye out of Jeruſalem: which Cyrus ſeparated, whē he offred in Babylon, & wolde ſende them agayne. And thy mynde was to buylde vp the tēple which ꝑ Edomytes brent, when Jeruſalem was deſtroyed by ꝑ Chaldees. This onely (O kyng) is ꝑ thynge that I requyre, thys is ꝑ maieſty, which I deſyre and aſk of the: that thou perfourme the vowe, which thou wyth thyne awne mouth haſt made vnto ꝑ kynge of heauen.

Then Darius the kynge ſtode vp, and kyſſed him, * & wrote a letter vnto all ꝑ debytes and ſhreues, to all the Lordes and nobles, that they ſhulde cōueye him forth, and all them ꝑ wolde go vp with him. He wrote a letter alſo vnto all ꝑ Shreues that were in Celoſyria and Phenices, and vnto Lybanus, ꝑ they ſhuld drawe Cedre trees from Lybanus vnto Jeruſalem, to buylde the cytie withall. Moreouer he wrote vnto all ꝑ Jewes ꝑ were gone out of hys realme into Jewry becauſe of the fredome, ꝑ no officier no ruler, nor Shreue, ſhuld come to theyr dores, and ꝑ all theyr lande which they had cōquered, ſhulde be free & not tributary. And that ꝑ Edomytes ſhulde geue ouer ꝑ cytyes and villages of the Jewes, which they had taken in: yee & that they ſhulde yearly geue xx. talētes to ꝑ buylдynge of ꝑ tēple, vntyll the tyme that it were fynyſhed, and to the dayly halowyng of the brent offrynges (as it is commaunded) ten talētes yearly alſo. And ꝑ all they which come from Babylon to buylde the cytie, ſhuld haue fre lybertye, they & theyr chyldren, & all the Preaſtes.

*ii.Eſd.ii.b. *iii.Eſd.bi.b.

He wrote ꝑ greatneſſe alſo, & cōmaunded that ꝑ holy garment ſhulde be geuen them, wherin they mynyſtred: & wrote ꝑ cōmaundementes ſhulde be geuen to ꝑ Leuites, vntyll the daye, that the houſe were fynyſhed, and Jeruſalem buylded vp: & commaunded that all they that watched the cytye, ſhulde haue theyr porcyons & wages.

He gaue ouer alſo all the veſſels ꝑ Cyrus had ſeparated from Babylon: and all that Cyrus had geuen in cōmaundemēt, ꝑ ſame charged he alſo, that it ſhulde be done & ſent vnto Jeruſalē. Now when thys ponge man was gone forth, he turned his face towarde Jeruſalem, and prayſed ꝑ kyng of heauen, and ſayde: * Of the commeth the victory, of the cōmeth wyſdome and clearneſſe, and I am thy ſeruaūt. Bleſſed art thou, which haſt geuen me wyſdome: that wyll I prayſe, O Lord, thou God of oure fathers.

And ſo he toke the letters, & wente vnto Babylon. And when he came there, he tolde thys vnto all his brethren ꝑ were at Babylon, & they prayſed ꝑ God of theyr fathers, that he had geuen them refreſhyng & lybertе to go vp, and to buylde Jeruſalem & the temple (wherin the name of the Lord is called vpon) and they reioyſed with inſtrumētes and gladneſſe ſeuen dayes longe.

¶ The.v. Chapter.

¶ They that returne to Jeruſalem are nōbred. They begynne to laye the foundacyon of the temple, but are lett by the meanes of enemyes: and ſo is the buyldyng dyuen of by the ſpace of two yeares.

After thys were the prynципall men of all the villages choſen in the tribes and kynredes, that they ſhuld go with theyr wyues and chyldren, with theyr ſeruaūtes & maydens, with all theyr catell and ſubſtaūce. And Darius the kyng ſent with them a thouſande horſmen, to cōueye them ſafely vnto Jeruſalem, and theyr bretheren were glad, playeng vpon inſtrumentes, and ſyngynge. And theſe are ꝑ names of the men, wich wente vp out of the villages, accordyng to the tribes. The prestes that serued in the temple: The sonnes of Sel, the sonnes of Gasphar, the sonnes of Tobloch, the sonnes of Carie, the sonnes of Sud, the sonnes of Heliu, the sonnes of Sabaua, ỹ sõnes of Armacha, the sonnes of Acub, the sonnes of Utha, the sonnes of Cetha, the sonnes of Aggab, the sonnes of Obay, the sonnes of Anani, the sonnes of Canna, the sonnes of Geddu, the sonnes of An, the sonnes of Radin, the sonnes of Desanon, ỹ sõnes of Nechoba, the sonnes of Caseba, the sonnes of Goza, the sonnes of Ozul, the sonnes of Sinona, the sonnes of Atra, the sonnes of Hasten, the sonnes of Aliana, the sonnes of Manei, the sonnes of Nasisin, the sonnes of Accua, the sonnes of Agitta, the sonnes of Azui, the sonnes of Fauon, ỹ sõnes of Phalalon, the sonnes of Meeda, the sonnes of Susa, the sonnes of Cared, the sonnes of Barcus, the sonnes of Sarea, the sonnes of Coeli, the sonnes of Nasit, the sonnes of Agitta, the sonnes of Pedon, Salomon his sonnes, the sonnes of Asophot, ỹ sõnes of Phazida, the sonnes of Celi, the sonnes of Dedon, the sonnes of Gaddahel, ỹ sõnes of zapheus, the sonnes of Aggia, ỹ sõnes of Sacharet, the sõnes of Sabarthẽ, ỹ sõnes of Saroneth, the sonnes of Nallit, the sonnes of Ania, the sonnes of Salus, the sonnes of Addus, the sonnes of Suba, the sonnes of Enra, the sõnes of Rabotis, ỹ sõnes of Phalphat, the sonnes of Nalmon. All these ministred in the sanctuary, & were seruauntes of Salomon: euen. iiii. C. &. lxxii.

These folowynge are they, that went vp D from Thelmellat Thelarsa (whose prynces were Carmelam and Careth) & myght not shewe forth theyr cytyes and kynredes, how they were of Israel: The sonnes of Dalarus, the sonnes of Tuben, the sonnes of Nechodaicus. Of the prestes that executed ỹ office of the prestehode, and were not founde: The sonnes of Obia, the sonnes of Achilos, the sonnes of Addin, whych maryed one of the daughters of Phargelen, and were named after hym. The wrytyng of the same kynred was sought in the regyster of theyr generacyon, but it was not founde: and therfore were they forbydden to execute the office of the prestehode. Unto them sayde Nehemias and Attharas, that they shulde haue no porcyon in the Sanctuary, tyll there rose vp an hye Prest, that were well instruct in the playne clearnes and trueth. (Of all Israel) beside seruauntes and Foure hũdred and. xxxv Camels. Seuen thousand, &. xxxvi. horses. Two hundred thousande and. xlv. mules. Fyue. M. and. xxv. Asses.

E Their heades also & the rulers in the tribes, when they came to Jerusalem, & wolde buylde and set vp the tẽple of God agayne in his place, they gaue (after their abylitye, vnto the temple, to the treasure & to the seruice of the Sanctuary. xii. M. poundes of golde, fyue thousande of syluer, and an hundred prestes garmentes. And so dwelt the Prestes and the Leuytes, & the people that went out to Jerusalem, and in the countre there about, the syngers also & the porters, euery one of Israell in his awne lande.

1.Esd.iii.a * So when the seuenth moneth came, and when the chyldren of Israel were euery mã at his busynes, they came all wyth one consent into the courte, whyche was before the East dore. And there stode Jesua the sonne of Josedec and his brethren the Prestes, ãd zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel and hys brethren, settyng vp an aulter, to offre brẽt sacrifyces vpon it, as it is wrytten in the lawe of Moses.

There came people also of other coũtrees, and the heathen out of all lãdes to set vp ỹ aulter in his place, and offred sacrifyces ãd brent offrynges vnto the Lorde in the morynge. And so they helde the feast of tabernacles, * as it is commaunded in the lawe. And dayly offred they as accordynge was, and made ỹ sacrifyces appoynted, ỹ offrynges also of the Sabbathes & of the newe mones, and all holy feastes. * And al they that vowed offrynges vnto the Lorde, beganne at the newe mone of the. vii. moneth to offre vnto God, for the temple of the Lorde was not yet buylded. And they gaue vnto ỹ Masons and Carpenters, money, meate, & drynke with chearfulnesse. Unto them of Sidon also and Tyre they gaue carres, that they shulde cary Cedre trees frõ Libanus to be toystes & beames, ãd that they shulde make shyppes in the hauen of Joppe, accordynge as it was appoynted & ordeyned by Cyrus kynge of the Persians.

And in the seconde yeare they came into ỹ
1.Esd.xvii.b temple of God at Jerusalem. * In the secõd moneth begãne zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua the sonne of Josedec and their brethren the Prestes and Leuites, and al they that were come vnto Jerusalẽ out of the captiuite of Babylõ, & layed the foũdacion of the temple, in the newe mone of the second moneth in ỹ secõd yeare ỹ they were come into Jewry & Jerusalẽ. And they appointed ỹ Leuytes (ỹ were aboue. xx. yeare old) vnto ỹ seruice of ỹ Lord: so Jesua & his sonnes and his brethren, al the Leuites stode together, & perfourmed the lawe and ordynaunce in the house of the Lorde.

And the Prestes stode, & had their garmẽtes & trompettes, and the Leuytes the sonnes of Asaph had Cymbals, & geuynge thankes and prayses vnto the Lorde, accordyng
1.par.xvi.b *as Dauid the kynge of Israell had ordeyned. And the long ỹ they dyd synge vnto the Lorde, was after this maner. * O synge vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious, & his goodnes vpõ Israel endureth foreuer. And all ỹ people blewe out with trompettes, and song with loude voyce, prayling the Lorde together in ỹ rearing vp of the house of ỹ Lorde.
1.Esd.iii.b * There came also from among the Prestes and Leuytes the rulers & elders, accordyng to the tribes and kinredes (soch as had sene the house afore) to the buyldyng of thys tẽple with great crye and great mournyng, many also with trompettes ãd great ioye: In somoch, that the trompettes might not well be heard for the weppynge and mournyng. For the commẽ people blewe goodly vpon the trompetteg.
1.Esd.iiii.a * Then came the enemyes of the tribes of Juda and Beniamin, to knowe what that trompettyng and noyse of shawmes might be. And they perceaued ỹ it was they which were come agayne out of captiuyte, & wold buylde the temple vp a new vnto the Lord God of Israel. So they went to zorobabel and Jesua, ãd to the rulers of the vyllages, and sayd vnto thẽ. Shall we buylde wyth you also? For we lyke wise haue heard your Lorde, and we walke after the same maner, from the dayes of Asbazareth the kynge of Assiria, which brought vs hyther. Then zorobabell and Jesua and ỹ rulers of the vyllages of Israell sayde vnto them. It is not mete, that ye shuld buyld the temple of our God wt vs: we our selues alone wyll buylde vnto the Lorde, lyke * as Cyrus the Kynge of the Persians hath commaunded vs.
1.Esd.ii.a
But the Heathen in the lande layed them selues agaynst those ỹ were in Jewry, helde vp ỹ buylding from thẽ, layed wayte vpon them preuely, stopped such as brought any thynge to them, forbad them to buylde, and hyndered those that made thẽ passage, that the buyldyng shuld not be fynished: ãd this continued so longe as kynge Cyrus lyued: and so they put of the buyldyng for the space of two yeares, vntyl the raygne of kyng Darius.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

¶ Aggeus and zachary prophecye. They buylde the temple without let or hynderaunce, by the commaundement of Darius.

A NOtwithstandynge in ỹ secõde yeare of ỹ raygne of Darius, * Aggeus & zachary the sonne of Addo prophecyed vpon them in Jewry and Jerusalẽ, in the name of the God of Israell. * Then zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua the sonne of Josedec stode vp, and begaune to buylde the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, whẽ the Prophetes of the Lord helped them. At the same tyme came Sysennes the vnder Shreue in Syria and Phenices, wyth the landelordes ãd hys companyons, and sayd vnto thẽ: Who hath bydden and commaunded you to buylde the house, to make the rofe and al other thinges agayne? And who are the woorcke mẽ, that buyld them? Neuertheless the elders of the Jewes had soch grace of ỹ Lorde, that they wolde not be let (though they were prouoked therto) but buylded on styl, vnto the tyme that kynge Darius were certifyed therof, and an anſwere receaued from hym. The letter that these men sent vnto kynge Darius, was after this maner.

Sysennes the vnder Shreue in Syria & Phenyces, and the landlordes wyth theyr companyons, which are head rulers in Syria and Phenyces, sende their salutaciõ vnto Darius the kynge. We certifye the lorde the kyng, ỹ we came into ỹ lande of Jewry, and went to Jerusalẽ: where we founde thẽ buylding the great house of God & the temple, with great costely free stone and wõ goodly tymbre for ỹ walles: yee they make great haste with the woorcke, & helpe one another, and it goeth forth prosperously in their hãdes, and with great dilygence and worshyp is it made. Then asked we the elders, who had cõmaunded them to make vp the house and the buyldinge, ãd this we dyd, to the intent that we myght certifye the perfectly, & wryte vnto the, the names of those that were the rulers of the woorke. So they gaue vs this anſwere: We are the seruauntes of the Lorde, which made heauen and earth: ãd as for this house *: it hath bene buylded and set vp afore tyme by the great & myghtie kyng of Jsrael. But when our fathers prouoked God vnto wrath, and synned agaynste the God of Jsraell, * he gaue them ouer into the power of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon, the kynge of the Caldees, whych brake downe the house & brent it, & caryed awaye the people presoners vnto Babylon. * Neuertheles in the fyrst peare that kynge Cyrus raygned at Babilõ, Cyrus ỹ kyng wrote and commaunded to buylde vp thys house agayne: and al the ornamentes that Nabuchodonosor caryed awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babylon, and appropriated vnto his awne temple: these brought Cyrus forth agayne, & delyuered them to zorobabel and to Salmanasar the vnder Shreue, cõmaũdyng them ỹ they shulde bryng those same ornamẽtes agayne to Jerusalẽ into ỹ tẽple and to begynne frõ ỹ tyme forth, to buylde the temple agayne in his awne place. Then Salmanasar layed ỹ foũdaciõ of ỹ Lordes house at Jerusalem, ãd euer sence haue they buylded, & yet is it not ended. And therfore O kynge, yf thou thinckest it good, let it be sought in the Lybraryes & rolles of kynge Cyrus: yf it be foũde then, that it is done wỹ the councell & consent of kynge Cyrus, and yf oure lorde ỹ kynge be so mynded, let hym wryte vnto vs therof.

* Thẽ commaunded kyng Darius, to seke in the Lybraryes: ãd so at Egbathanis in a lytle cytie in Medea there was foũde soche a wrytynge: In the first peare of the raygne of Cyrus, the same kynge Cyrus commaũded that the house of the Lorde at Jerusalẽ shuld be buylded agayne (and odoures to be made there continually vnto ỹ Lord) whose heygth shalbe .x. cubites, and the bredeth, three score cubites, ãd foure square with thre hewen stones, with a loft of tymbre of the same countre, yee with a new loft, and the expenses therof to be geuen of the house of kynge Cyrus. And the ornamẽtes of golde and syluer, that Nabuchodonosor toke out of the house of the Lorde at Jerusalẽ, shalbe set agayne in the temple at Jerusalẽ, where they were afore. Sysennes also the vnder shreue in Syria and Phenices, the Princes and their companyons, & the other that be heade rulers in Syria & Phenices, shall not medle nor haue any thig to do with ỹ place.

I Cyrus haue commaunded also, ỹ they shal buylde the house of ỹ Lorde whole vp ãd haue ordeyned them, to helpe those that become out of captiuyte: tyl the house of the Lorde be finished: ãd out of the trybute and taxing that is yearly raysed vp in Syria & Phenices, diligently to geue them a certayne summe to the offeringe of the Lord: & the same to be delyuered vnto zorobabel the ofycer, that he therwithal maye ordeyne oxẽ, rammes, lambes, and corne, salt, wyne and oyle, and that cõtinually euery peare: after the expences * which the Prestes that be at Jerusalẽ, shew to be made dayly: thys shall be geuen vnto them without delaye, ỹ they maye offer sacrifyces dayly to ỹ hyest God, for the kynge and for his seruauntes, and to praye for theyr lyues. Let it be proclaymed also on euery syde, that whosoeuer breaketh or despyseth this cõmaundemẽt of the king, shalbe hanged vpon a galows (made of his awne good) ãd all his goodes shalbe seasoned vnto ỹ king. The Lord therfore (whose name is there called vpon) rote out and destroye all the kynges ãd people, that vndertake by violẽce to hinder ỹ same, or to deale vncurteously wyth the house of the Lord at Jerusalem. I Darius the kinge haue ordeyned, that these thynges shalbe done with al dilygence.

C The. vii. Chapter.

C The temple is fynished and dedycate: and the feast of vnleuended breade is holden.

A THen Sysennes the vndershreues in Celosyria, and Phenices, and the other Landlordes wyth their companyons, obeyed the thinges ỹ kynge Darius had ordeyned, and were dilygent in ỹ holy woorckes, and were felowe helpers with the olde rulers of the Jewes. And so the woorcke of the Sanctuary wente forth and prospered, when Aggeus ãd zachary prophecyed. And they perfourmed all thinges thorow ỹ cõmaundement of the Lorde God of Jsrael, and after the deuyce of Cyrus, Darius and Artaxerses kynges of Persia.

B And thus was oure house fynished vnto ỹ xxiii. daye of the moneth Adder, in the .vi. peare of kynge Darius. And the chyldrẽ of Jsrael the prestes and the Leuites, and the other that were come out of captyuyte, and soche as were ioyned vnto them, dyd accordynge as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses. And in the dedicacion of the temple: they offred an hũdred oxen, two hundred rammes, foure hundred lambes, & twelue goates, for the synnes of all ỹ people of Jsraell, after ỹ

C nombre of the trybes of Jsrael. The prestes also & the Leuites stode arayed in theyr prestly garmẽtes, after the trybes, ouer all the worckes of the Lorde God of Jsraell accordinge to the boke of Moses, and the porters by all the dores.

And the chyldren of Jsrael (with those ỹ were come out of captiuyte) helde the passeouer the fourtene daye of the fyrst moneth, when the prestes and the Leuites were sanctifyed. They ỹ came out of captyuite, were not all sanctifyed together: but the Leuites were all sanctifyed together, and so al they that came out of captiuyte, killed the easter lambe, for theyr brethren, for the prestes ãd for them selues. And the chyldren of Jsrael

D that came out of captyuyte, & escaped from al the abhominacions of ỹ heathen, sought the Lorde, and kepte the feast of vnleuened bread seuen dayes longe, eatynge and drynkynge and were mery before the Lord: that the Lorde had turned the deuyce of ỹ kynge of Assyria, and cõforted their handes to the woorckes of the Lorde God of Jsraell.

C The. viii. Chapter.

C Esdras causeth the people to assemble and come together, and then readeth them the lawe. They kepe the feaste of Tabernacles.

A AND after hym * when Artaxerses the kyng of the Persians raygned, there wente vnto hym Esdras the sonne of

*i. Esd. viii. d.

Sarayas, the sõne of Azarias, the sonne of Helchiah, the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Sadoch, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amarias, the sonne of Azarias, the sõne of Boccus, the sõne of Abysu, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron the fyrst preste. This Esdras wente vp from Babylon (for he had good vnderstandynge in the lawe of Moses, that was geuẽ of the Lorde God of Jsrael, to be taught ãd done in dede.) And the kynge fauoured him and dyd him great worshyppe and honoure after all hys desyres. There went vp wyth hym also certayne of the chyldrẽ of Jsrael, of the prestes, of the Leuites, of the singers, porters and minystres of the temple at Jerusalem.

In the seuẽth yeare of the raygne of kinge Artaxerses, i the fyueth moneth, that is in the seuenth yeare of the raygne, they wẽt from Babylon in the new moone of the .v. moneth, & came the hye waye to Jerusalem after his commaũdement, lyke as the Lord had prospered theyr iourney. For in these Esdras gat great instruccion, that he shulde leaue none of the thynges behinde, which are in the lawe and commaundementes of God. And he taught whole Jsrael all righteousnes and iudgement.

Then came the Secretaries of kyng Artaxerses, ãd delyuered the wrytynges (that were come frõ Artaxerses the kynge) to Esdras ỹ preste & reder of the lawe of ỹ Lorde: And thys is the coppe of the letter: Kynge Artaxerses sendeth his gretynge vnto Esdras the preste and reder of the lawe of the Lorde. Of frendshyppe and good wyl I haue ordeyned and charged, yf there be eny of the Jewes, of the prestes & Leuptes in my realme, which desyreth and is contẽt to go with the vnto Jerusalem, ỹ he maye doit. Therfore, yf eny be mynded to beare the cõpany, let them come together, and go with ỹ (lyke as I am content and my seuen frendes, my councelers) to se what they do at Jerusalẽ and in Jewry, & kepe the thynges accordyng as thou hast in the lawe of the Lorde: ãd to bryng the gyftes vnto God the Lorde of Jsrael, that I & my frendes haue promysed to Jerusalem, & all the syluer ãd golde that is in the countre of Babylon, vnto the Lord to Jerusalem, with the thyng that is geuen for the people in the Lordes temple at Jerusalem. Yee, that the same syluer and golde maye be gathered, and oxen, rammes, shepe and goates and other that belonge to these thynges: and that they maye offer sacrifyces vnto the Lorde, vpon the aulter of their Lorde, which is at Jerusalem.

And whatsoeuer thou and thy brethren wyll do with the syluer ãd golde, that do after thy mynde, accordynge to ỹ cõmaundement ment of the Lord thy God, & lykewise, with the holy vessels that are geuen the, for ꝑ seruyce of the house of ꝑ Lord thy God: & other thinges whatsoeuer is necessary for ꝑ to the worcke of the temple, that shalbe geuen the of ꝑ kiges treasure & loke what thou w̄ thy brethren wyll do with the golde ād syluer, that do after the wyll of the Lorde. And I kynge Artarerses haue commaūded the kepers of the treasures in Syria and Phenyces, that whatsoeuer Esdras the prestе and reader of the lawe of the Lorde doth wyrte, it shalbe geuē hym: tyll an hundred talētes of syluer, ād of golde in lyke maner. Of corne also an hundred measures, ād tyll an hūdred vessels of wyne, & other plētyous thynges without nombre. Let all thinges be done after the lawe of the hyest God, that the wrath of God aryse not in the realme of the kynge, and of his sonnes. I commaūde you also, ꝑ ye requyre no taxe ner trybute of the prestes, Leuytes, syngers, and ministers of the temple, ner of the wryters: & that no mā haue auctorite to medle eny thyng against thē. As for the (O Esdras) set thou iudges ād arbytrers in the whole lande of Syria & Phenices, after the wysdome of God: and learne all soch as are ignorant in the lawe of God thy Lorde, and let all them that offende agaynst the lawe, be punyshed: whether it be with death, with payne, to be condemned in money, or to be banished.

*i. Esd. viii. a Then sayde Esdras the wryter. * Blessed be ꝑ God of our fathers, that hath geuē so good a mynde and wyll into the hert of ꝑ kynge, to magnifye his house that is at Ierusalem, ād hath made me to be accepted in the syght of the kyng, of his councell, of hys frendes & of his nobles. And so I was stedfast in my mynde, accordyng as ꝑ Lord my God helped me, & I chose out men of Israel *i. Esd. viii. b to go vp with me. * And these are ꝑ heades, (after their kynredes & houses of theyr fathers) that went vp with me from Babylon, out of the kingdome of Artaxerses: Of the sonnes of Phares, Gersonius. Of ꝑ sonnes of Siemarith, Amenus. Of the sonnes of Dauid Accus, the sonne of Cecilia.

Of the sonnes of Pharos, zachary: & with him there turned agayne an hūdred & fyftie men. Of the sonnes of the captaine of Moabylon, zaraei, & with him. ii. C. ād. l. mē. Of the sonnes of zachnes, Iechonias zecholy, & with hym two hūdred and fyftie men. Of the sonnes of Salamaallias, Gotholye, ād lxx. with him. Of the sonnes of zaphacia, zarias Mihely, ād wyth hym foure score. Of the sonnes of Iob, Abdias Ieheli, and with hym two hundred and twelue men. Of the sonnes of Bania, Salimoth ꝑ sōnes of Iosaphia, and wyth hym an hundred and three score mē. Of ꝑ sonnes of Beer, zachari Bebei, ād wyth hym two hundred & .viii. men. Of the sōnes of Esead, Iohannes Ezechā, & with him an hundred and tenne men. Of ꝑ sonnes of Adonicam those that were ꝑ last, and these are theyr names, Eliphalam the sonne of Gebel ād Semeias, and with hym lxx. men. All these called I together by the water Thia, where we pitched oure tentes thre dayes, and there I mustered them.

D *i. Esd. viii. c * As for the sonnes of the prestes & Leuites, I founde none there. Then sent I vnto Eleazer, and Eccelom, and Maimā, & Maiobam, and Enaathan, ād Samea, & Iozibimathan, Eunagan, zachari, Mosollamū (these were the leaders and men of experiēce) and I sent them worde, that they shulde come vnto Loddeus, which was by the place of the treasury, & commaūded them that they shulde speake vnto Loddeus ād to hys brethren and to those that were in the treasury, to sende vs soch men, as myght execute the prestes offyce in the house of the Lorde our God. And with the myghtie hāde of our Lorde God, they brought vnto vs men of good experience, from amonge the sōnes of Moolius the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel, Sebebeiam and the sonnes and hys brethrē Albin & Amin, of whome there were. xviii. From amonge the chyldren of the sonnes of Cananeus, and their sonnes were xx. men. And of them that serued in the temple, whom Dauid had ordeyned, & the principal men that ministred for the worcke vnto the Leuytes in the temple two hundred and twentye men, whose names are all tokened vp in wryttynge.

*i. Esd. viii. d * Then commaūded I a fastynge vnto the ponge men before the Lorde, that I myght desyre of hym a prosperous iourney and a good waye for vs, yee for vs, for oure chyldren and for the catell, because of the layenges awayte, and I durst not requyre of the kyng men of horse and of fote, to cōueye vs safely agaynst our enemies, for we had said vnto the kynge, that the power of the Lord our God shulde be with them, that seke him with theyr whole hert. And therfore we besought God our Lorde earnestly because of these thynges, & he was mercyfull vnto vs, and hearde our prayer. And I separated frō amonge the rulers of the people, and frō the prestes of the temple. xii. mē and Sebeia & Asania, and ten men of theyr brethrē wyth them. And I weyed them the golde and the syluer and all the prestly ornamentes of the house of our God, whych the kyng, and hys councell, and his Princes, and whole Israel had geuē. And when I had weyed it, I gaue them an hundred and fyfty talētes in syluer, and an hūdred talētes of syluer vessell, an hundred talētes of golde, and of golden vessell seuen tymes twentye, and vessels of other other metal (yee, of good metal) twelue glysterynge as the golde, and saide vnto them: ye are holy vnto the Lorde, and the vessels are holy, and the gold and the syluer is promysed vnto the Lorde God of oure fathers. Be dyligent now and kepe it, vntyll the tyme that ye deliuer it to the rulers of the people, to the prestes, to the Leuites, and to the principall men of the cities of Israel in Ierusalem, and in the chambre of the house of oure God.

*i. Esd. viii. d * So, the prestes and the Leuites which receaued of me the golde, the syluer and the vessell, brought it into Ierusalē into ꝑ temple of ꝑ Lorde. And from the ryuer of Thia we bracke vp the twelueth daye of the first moneth, tyll we came to Ierusalē. And whē the thyrde daye was past, they weyed gold, and siluer was delyuered in the house of the Lorde the fourth daye, vnto Marimoth the sonne of Ioz the prest, and wyth hym was Eleazar the sonne of Phineas, & with them were Iosabdus ꝑ sonnes of Iesnet, Medias and the sonne of Banus, and certayne of the Leuites to the nombre and to the wayght: & the wayght of them was wrytten vp the same tyme. As for those that were come out of captiuyte, they offred sacrifice vnto ꝑ Lord the God of Israel: euen twelue oxen for all Israel. lxxxvi. rammes lxxii. shepe. xii. goates for synne, twelue lyne for a thākoffring, all to the sacrifice of the Lord. And ꝑ kynges commissiō delyuered they vnto the stewardes and debytes of the kyng, and to the vnderthreues in Celosyria and Phenices.

*i. Esd. ix. a * Nowe, when these thynges were done, the rulers came vnto me, and sayd: The generacyō of Israel, the Princes, the Prestes, and Leuytes, the straunge people & indwellers of the lande, haue not put awaye theyr vnclennesse, from the Cananites, Hethytes Pherezytes, from the Moabites, Egipciās, and Edomytes. For both they & theyr sonnes haue myngled thē selues with ꝑ daughters of them, and the holy sede is mixte with the outlandysh Heathen, & sens the begynnynge of their raygne haue the rulers & heades bene partetakers of theyr wyckednesse.

If *i. Esd. ix. a * As soone as I had hearde these thinges, immediatly I rente my holy garmentes, & pulled out the heare of my head & my beerd, and sat me downe sorowfull and heuy. So all they that were moued thorow the word of the God of Israell, came vnto me: & I sat still, full of heynesse vntyl the euenyng sacrifice. Then stode I vp from fastynge, hauyng rente clothes & the holy garment, kneled downe vpon my knees, helde out my hādes vnto ꝑ Lorde, and sayd: O Lorde, I am confoūded and ashamed before thy face, for our synnes are become many vpon our heades, and our wyckednesses are exalted vnto the heauen: for syns the tyme of our fathers we are in great synne vnto thys daye. And for the synnes of vs and oure fathers, we w̄ our brethren and with our prestes haue bene delyuered vnto the kinges of the earth, into the sword, and into captiuyte, and became a spoyle with confusion and shame vnto this daye. And now, O Lorde God, how greate is the mercy that we haue gotten of the: in ꝑ thou hast left vs a rote and a name in ꝑ place of thy Sanctuary, to discouer oure lyght in the house of ꝑ Lord our God, & hast geuē vs meat at all tymes of our mynistracyon. And when we were in captiuyte, we were not forsakē of the Lord our God: but he māde the kynges of Persia gracyous & fauourable vnto vs, so that they gaue vs vytayles and meate, yee and leaue to buylde vp ꝑ temple of our Lorde God agayne, to repayre the walled places of Spō, and to dwell in Iewry and Ierusalem. And now, O Lord, what shall we saye haynge all these thynges in possessyon? For we haue broken thy commaundementes, which thou gauest vnto vs by the hādes of thy seruauntes ꝑ prophetes, sayynge: The lande that ye go vnto and that is geuen you for an heritage to haue in possessyō, is defyled with the vnclēnes and fylthynes of the Heathen, & with their abhominacyō haue they polute dit all together. Therfore, shall ye not ioyne your daughters, vnto theyr sonnes, ner mary youre sōnes vnto their daughters. Moreouer, ye shall neuer seke to make peace with them, ꝑ ye maye increase & eate the best in the land, and that ye maye deuyde the inheritaūce of the lande vnto youre chyldrē for euermore. As for the thyng that now happeneth vnto vs it commeth all for our wycked worckes and great sinnes, yet hast thou geuē vs soch a rote, ꝑ we are come agayne into our awne lande, & we are so wycked that we haue broken thy statutes & commaundemētes agayne, and myngled oure selues with the vnclēnes of the outlandith Heathen. O Lord, art thou angrie with vs: wylt thou rote vs cleane out: that our rote ād name remayne no more: O Lord God of Israel thou art true for our rote endureth yet vnto thys prestē daye. And beholde, now are we before thee in our sinnes, now can we not stāde before the in them.

*i. Esd. x. a * And whē Esdras with this prayer had knowledged the synne, weppyng, and lyenge flatt vpon the grounde before the tēple, there gathered vnto hym frō Ierusalē a great multytude of men and wemen, of yonge men and maydens, for there was a very greate weppynge & mournige in the congregacyon. So whē Iechonias the sonne of Ieheli one of the chyldrē of Israell cryed, he sayd vnto Esdras: we haue synned against the Lorde, because because we haue maried outlandish wemen of the Heathen. Now art ꝓ ouer all Israel. We wyll sweare an othe therfore vnto the Lorde, ꝓ we shall put awaye all our wyues which we haue taken of the Heathen, wyth theyr chyldrē: lyke as it is appoynted ꝓ by oure fore elders. Stande vp then, opē thou it, & declare it playnely vnto vs, accordyng to the lawe of the Lorde: for ꝓ matter belōgeth vnto the, and we wyll helpe the, quyte thy selfe manly. So Esdras arose, and toke an othe of the rulers of the prestes, ād of the Leuytes, and of Israell, to do after these thynges: and they sware.

¶The.ix.Chapter.

*i.Esdr.f.b. Then Esdras stode vp from the court of the temple without, and wente into the chamber of Jonathas the sonne of Nasabus, and remayned there, ād dyd eate no meate, nor dronke drynke, for the multitude of the wyckednes of the people. And there was made a proclamacion in all Jewry and at Jerusalē, for all soch as were gathered at Jerusalē out of captiuite, that whosoeuer came not to Jerusalem within two or three dayes (accordynge to the iudgemēt of the olde lordes of ꝓ councel) his goodes shulde be taken from hym, and be excluded from the congregacion of the captiuite. And in thre dayes were all they of the trybe of Juda & Beniamin gathered together at Jerusalem, the twētyeth daye of the nynth moneth. And the whole multitude sat tremblyng in the courte of the temple, for it was winter. So Esdras arose vp, and said vnto thē: ye haue done vnrighteously, in that ye haue taken outlandishe wyues to mariage and so to increase the synnes of Israel. And nowe knowledge the same, and geue prayse vnto the Lorde God of our fathers, ād perfourme his wyll, departynge from the heathen of the lande, and from the outlandyshe wyues. Then cryed the whole multitude wt loude voyce, and sayd: lyke as thou hast spoken, so wyll we do: but for so moch as ꝓ people are many, and the wynter here, we may not stande without the house: agayne, thys worcke is not a thynge, that can be finished in a daye or two, for we be many that haue synned in these thynges. Ordeyne therfore that the rulers of the multytude and they ꝓ dwell with vs, and as many as haue outlādyshe wyues, the prestes also and iudges of euery place maye stāde in the tyme appoynted, tyll they swage the wrath of the Lorde in thys busynes.

Then Jonathas the sonne of Ezely, and Ozias and Thecā receaued ꝓ charge of this matter, ād Bozorzamus, and Leius, & Sabatheus helpethem therto. After this, all they stode vp that were come out of captyuite. And Esdras the preste chose vnto him the principall men from amōge the fathers accordyng to their names, & in the newmone of the tenth moneth they sat together, to examē this matter. And so the matter was a determyng (concernyng the men that had outlandysh wyues) vntyl the newmone of the fyrst moneth. And of ꝓ prestes that had myxte thē selues with outlandyshe wyues, there were founde. * Of the sonnes of Jesu the sonne of Josedec and his brethren, Mazeas, Eleazar, Jozibus & Joadeus, wyche offred thē selues to put awaye their wyues, and to offre a ramme for theyr ignorauunce. And of the sonnes of Semmeri, Wasleas, & Esles, and Jeelech Azarias. Of the sonnes of Rosera, Limolias, Hilmaen, Nathanea, Jussio, Jeddus, and Tallas. And of the Leuytes Josabdus, Semeis, and Colnis, Caletas, Facteas, Colnas, and Elionas. Of ꝓ syngers of the Sanctuary, Eliarib, zackarus. Of the porters, Sallumus ād Tolbanes. And of Israel, of the children of Rozo, Osi, and Remias, and Geddias, and Melchias, Michelus, Eleazarus, Jemmebias & Bannas. And the childrē of Jolamā, Chanias, zachari, Jeizrelus, Joddius, Erimoth and Elias. And of ꝓ sonnes of Jathoim, Eliadas, Liasamus, and zochias, Larimoth, Sabdis, and Tebedias. And of the sonnes of zebes, Johannes, Amanias, zabdias, and Emmeus. And of ꝓ sōnes of Wannus, Olāmus, Maluchus, Jeddus, Jasub, Asabus, & Jerimoth. And of ꝓ sonnes of Addin, Naatus, and Mooslias, and Caleus, ād Raanas Maasuas, Mathathias, Besel, Wannus, & Manasses.

And of the sonnes of Naue, Nones, Akeas, Melchias, Sameas, Simō, Beniamin Malchus ād Marras. And of the sonnes of Asom, Carianeus, Mathathias, Bannus, Eliphalach, Manasses, Semei. Of the sonnes of Bannus, Jeremy, Moodias, Abzamas, Johel, Baneas, Peliaas, Jona, Marimoth, Eliasib, Mathaneus, Eliasis, Ozias, Dielus, Semebius, zambzis, & Joseph. Of the sonnes of Mobeus, Idelus, Mathathias, Sabadus, zecheda, Sedmi, Jesseus, and Baneas. All these had taken outlādish wemen to mariage, & they put them awaye with theyr chyldren. The prestes and Leuites, and all they that were of Israell, dwelt at Jerusalē and thorowout all the lande, in the newmoone of the seuenth moneth, and the chyldren of Israell were in their dwellynges. And the whole multitude came together vpon the flooze at the East syde of ꝓ holy porte of the tēple. And they spake vnto Esdras the hye preste ād reader, ỹe wolde bringe the lawe of Moses, which was geue of the of the Lorde God of Israel. So Esdras ꝓ hye Prest brought ꝓ lawe vnto the whole multitude, to mā & womā, & to all Prestes, that they might heare the lawe, * in ꝓ newmone of the. viii. moneth. And he red in the flore that is before ꝓ holy porte of the temple, from the morynyng early vnto the euenyng, before men and wemē. And they applyed their mynde all vnto the lawe.

¶ And Esdras ꝓ Prest & reader of the lawe stode vp vpō a pulpit of wood, which was made therfore: & vpō his ryght hāde there stode by hi Mathathias, Samus, Anianias, Azarias, Urias, Ozechias: and Balsamus: Upon hys lefte hand stode Faldeus, Misael, Malachias, Abulcas, Sabus, Nabadias & zachary. Thē toke Esdras ꝓ boke before the whole multitude, for he was the pryncipall, ād had in moste honour of them all. And when he had red out the lawe, they stode all straycht vpon their fete. So Esdras praysed ꝓ Lord ꝓ moost hye God, the Almyghty God of Hostes. And all ꝓ people answered: Amē: & helde vp their hādes, fell downe flat vpon ꝓ earth, & praysed the Lord. And Jesus, Beneas, Sarebias, Jaddimus, Accubus, Sabbatheus, Calithes, Azarias, Jozadus, Ananias, & Philias the Leuites lyft their hādes vpwarde, & bowed their faces to ꝓ grounde, & praysed ꝓ Lord: Those were they whych taught ꝓ lawe of the Lord, & red the lawe of the Lord, in the cōgregacyon: & euery man set them before that vnderstode the lawe. Thē spake Atharates vnto Esdras the hye Prest & reder, & to the Leuites that taught the multytude, saying: This daye is holy vnto the Lorde: & all they that had heard the lawe, wepte So Esdras sayde: *Departe youre waye then, & eate the best, & drynke the swetest, & sende gyftes vnto them that haue nothig: for thys daye is holy vnto ꝓ Lord, & be not ye sory, for the Lorde wyll bring you to honoure. Then wente they their waye euerychone, and dyd eate and drinke, & were mery, and sent rewardes vnto them that had nothing, that they also myght eate wyth gladnesse: for they were exceedingly reioyced, thorow the wordes that were red vnto them in the lawe: And so they were all gathered together at Jerusalem to holde the feast, accordyng to the couenaunt of the Lorde God of Israel.

The seconde boke of the Prophete* Esdras (the sōne of Saraias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Helchia, ꝓ sonne of Sallum, the sōne of Sadoc, ꝓ sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Achia, the sōne of Phinees, ꝓ sonne of Hely Amerias, the sōne of Azarias, ꝓ sonne of Maraioth, the sonne of Sarahias, the sonne of Uzi, ꝓ sonne of Boccus, ꝓ sonne of Abisu, ꝓ sonne of Phinees, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron, of the trybe of Leui) whych was prisoner in the lande of Medes, in the rayngne of Artaxerses kynge of Persia.

*Esa.lxiii.a * And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: go thy waye, & shew my people their synfull dedes, and their chyldren their wyckednesses, whych they haue done agaynst me, that they may tell theyr chylders chyldrē the same: for the synnes of their fathers are increased in them. And why? they haue forgotten me, & haue offred vnto straunge goddes. Am not I euen he, ꝓ brought thē out of the lāde of Egypte, frō the house of bōdage? But they haue prouoked me vnto wrath, and despysed my councels. Pull thou out then the hearre of thy heade, & cast all euell ouer them, for they haue not bene obedient vnto my lawe.

It is a people without lernynge & nourtoure. How longe shall I forbeare them, vnto whom I haue done so moche good? *Many kynges haue I destroyed for their sakes: ‡Pharao wyth hys seruauntes & all his power haue I smytten downe & slayne: All ỹ nacyōs haue I destroyed & roted out before thē, and in the East haue I brought two landes & people to naught, euen Tyre and Sydon, and haue slayne all their enemyes. Speake thou therfore vnto them, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lord: *I led you thorow the see, & haue geuē you sure stretes sence the beginyng. ‡I gaue you Moses to be youre captayne, & Aaron to be the preest: *I gaue you lyght i a pyller of fyre, & greate wonders haue I done amonge you: yet haue ye forgotten me, sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayth the almyghty Lorde: I gaue you quayles to eate, & tentes for your succoure:

I Eldras receaued a charge of the Lorde vpon the mouſt Oreb, that I ſhuld go vnto Iſraell. But when I came vnto Iſraell they ſet me at naught, and depiſed the commaundemēt of the Lord. And therfore I ſaye vnto you, O ye heathen that heare and vnderſtāde: Loke for youre ſhepherde, he ſhall geue you euerlaſtinge reſt, for he is nye at hād, that ſhall come in the ende of ꝓ worlde. Be readye to the rewarde of the kingdome, for the euerlaſtynge lyght ſhall ſhyne vpon you for euermore. Fle the ſhadowe of thys worlde, receaue the ioyfulnes of youre glory. The nombre of thy chyldren whom thou longedeſt for, is fulfylled: beſeche the power of the Lorde, that thy people which haue bene called from the begynnynge, maye be halowed.

* I Eldras ſawe vpon the mount Sion a great people, whom I coulde not nombre and they all prayſed the Lorde with ſonges of thankesgeuynge. And in the myddeſt of them there was a yonge man of an hye ſtature, more excellent then all they, and vpon euery one of theyr heades he ſet a crowne, & was euer higher and higher, which I marueled at greatly. So I aſked the aūgel, and ſayd: Syr, what are theſe? He anſwered ād ſaide vnto me: Theſe be they, that haue put of the mortall clothynge and put on the immortall, and haue confeſſed ād knowleged the name of God. Now are they crowned, & receaue the rewarde.

Then ſayde I vnto the aungell: what pōge perſonne is it, that crowneth them, and geueth them the palmes in theyr handes? So he anſwered, and ſayde vnto me: It is the ſonne of God, whō they haue knowledged in the worlde. Then beganne I greatly to commende them, that ſtode ſo ſtyrdy for the name of ꝓ Lorde. And ſo the aūgell ſayde vnto me: Go thy waye, & tell my people, what maner of thynges & how greate wonders of the Lorde thy God, thou haſt ſene.

maundedst to buylde a cyte vnto thy name, and to offre vp incense and sacrifyce vnto ṕ therin. Thys was done now many yeares. Then the inhabyters of the cyte forsoke the and in all thynges dyd euen as Adam and all his generacyons had done: foz they also had a wicked herte.

And so thou gauest thy cyte ouer into the D hādes of thyne enemyes. Are they of Babylon then better ād moze righteous then thy people, that they shall therfoze haue the dominyon of Syon? Foz when I came there and sawe theyr vngodlynes, and so greate wyckednesse, that it could not be nombzed: yee, whē my soule sawe so many euel doers (in the thyzty yeare) my herte fayled me, foz I sawe, how thou suffrest them in soch vngodlynes & sparest the wicked doers: but thyne awne people hast thou roted out and preserued thyne enemyes, & thys hast thou not shewed me.

I cannot perceaue how thys happeneth. Do they of Babylon then better, then they of Syō? Oz is there any other people, that knoweth the, saupnge the people of Israel? Oz what generacyon hath so beleued thy couenauntes, as Jacob? And yet theyr rewarde appeareth not, ād theyr labour hath no frute. Foz I haue gone here & there thozow the heathen, and I se that they be rich and wealthy, and thynke not vpō thy commaundementes. Wepe thou therfoze oure wyckednesse now in the balaūce, and theirs also that dwell in the wozlde, and so shall thy name be no where founde but in Israel. Oz where is there a people vpō earthe, that hath not synned before ṕ? Oz what people hath so kepte thy commādementes? Thou shalt finde, that Israel by name hath kepte thy preceptes, but not the other people and Heathen.

¶ The fourth Chapter.

¶ The Angell reproueth Eldras, because he semed to enter into the profounde iudgementes of God.

AND the Angell that was sent vn-
A to me (whose name was Uriell) gaue me an answere, & sayd: Thy hert hath taken to moch vpō it in thys wozlde, & ṕ thynckest to comprehēde the waye of the Hyest. Then said I: Yee, my Lozde. And he answered me, and sayde: I am sent to shewe the thze wayes, and to sett fozth thze symplytudes, before the: wherof yf thou canst declare me one, I wyll shewe the also the waye, that thou desyrest to se: and I shall shewe the from whence the wicked herte commeth. And I sayde: Tell on my Lozde. Then sayde he vnto me: Go thy waye, wcye me the weyght of the fyre, oz measure me the blast of the wide, oz call me agayne agayne the daye that is past. Then answered I and sayde: What mā bozne is able to do ṕ? Why requirest thou soch of me? And he sayde vnto me: If I shulde aske the, how depe dwelliges are in ṕ see? Oz how great water springes are vpō the firmamēt? Oz how great water sprynges are in the beginnynge of the depe? Oz which are the outgoinges of paradyse? Paraduēture thou woldest saye vnto me: I neuer wente downe yet into ṕ depe nozhel, nether dyd I euer clyme vp into heauen. Neuertheless, now haue I asked the but only of fyre and winde and of the daye, where thozow thou hast trauayled, and from the which thou canst not be separated: and yet canst thou geue me no answere of them.

He sayd moreouer vnto me: Thyne awne thynges, & soch as are growne vp wt the, canst thou not knowe: how shuld thy vessel then be able to comprehēde the waye of the Hyest, and now out wardly in the corrupte wozlde, to vnderstāde the corruptiō that is cuidēt in my sight? Then sayd I vnto hym: It were better that we were not at all, then that we shulde lyue in wyckednesse, & to suf-
23 fre, & not to know wherfoze. He answered Judic.ii.c. me, & sayd: I wente in a wood, & * the trees
i.par.xxix.c toke soch a deuyce ād sayd: Come let vs go, and fyght agaynst the see, that it maye departe awaye before vs, and that we maye make vs yet moze woddes.

The floudes of the see also in lyke maner toke thys deuyce, ād sayde: Come, let vs go vp, and fyght agaynst the trees of the wodd that we maye make oure lande the wyder. The thought and deuyce of the wodde was but vayne and nothinge wozth, foz the fyre came and consumed the wodd. The thought of the floudes of the see came lyke wyse to naught also, foz the sāde stode vp and stopped them.

If thou were iudge now betwixte these two, whom woldest thou iustifie, oz whom woldest thou condemne? I answered & said: Uerely it is a folysh thought that they both haue deuysed. For the grounde is geuen vnto the wodd, & the see also hath hys place to beare his floudes. Then answered he me, ād sayde: Thou hast geuen a ryght iudgement, why iudgest thou not thy selfe also? Foz lyke as the ground is geuen vnto the wodd, and the see to his floudes: euen so * they ṕ dwell
*Esa.xlb.c vpon earth, may vnderstāde nothinge, but Iohn.iii.c. that which is vpon earth: and he that dwel-Cosin.iii.b leth aboue the heauēs, may only vnderstād the thynges, ṕ are aboue the heauens. Then answered I, and sayd: I beseche ṕ, O Lozd, let me haue vnderstandynge: foz it was not my mynde to be curyous of thy hye thiges, but of soch as we dayly medle withall, namely, wherfoze that Israel is blasphemed of the Heathē, and foz what cause the people (whom thou euer hast loued) is geuen ouer, to be punysshed of vngodly nacyons: & why ṕ lawe of our fathers is bzought to naught and the writtен couenauntes come to none effecte, and we passe awaye out of ṕ worlde as the gresshoppers, ād our lyfe is a very fearre, & we are not wozthy to optayne mercy. What wil he do then vnto his name, which is called vpon ouer vs? Of these thinges haue I asked question.

Then answered he me, & sayd: The moze
C thou searchest, the moze thou shalt maruell foz the wozld hasteth fast to passe awaye, & cannot comprehende the thynges, ṕ are promysed foz the righteous ī tyme to come, foz *thys wozlde is full of vnrighteousnes ād
*i.Ioh.b.c weaknes.

But as concernynge the thinges wherof thou askest me, I will tell the. The euell is sowen, but the destruccion therof is not yet come. Yf the euell now that is sowen, be not turned vpsyde downe, and yf the place where the euell is sowne, passe not awaye, then cānot the thynge come ṕ is sowen vō good. Foz the corne of euell sede hath bene sowen in the hert of man from the begynnyng, and how moch vngodlynes hath he bzought vp vnto thys tyme? and how moch shal he yet bzyng fozth, vntyll he come into the barne?

Pondze now by thy selfe, whē the corne of euell sede is cutt downe, how greate a barne shall it fyll? I answered and sayd, How and whē shal these thinges come to passe? Wherfoze are our yeares fewe & euell? And he answered me, sayinge: Haste not thou to moch vpō the Hyest, foz thy hastynes to be aboue him is but vaine, thou makest to moch a do. Did not the soules also of ṕ righteous aske question of these thynges in theyr holynes sayīg: * How longe shall I hope of thys fashyon? Whē cōmeth the frute of my barne,
* Apo.vi.b and my rewarde? And vpō this Jeremiel ṕ Archāgel gaue thē answere, and sayd: Euē whē the nombze of the sedes is fylled ī you, foz he hath weyed the wozlde ī the balaūce: in measure and nombze hath he measured ṕ tyme, & moueth it not, vntyll the same measure be fulfylled. Then answered I & sayde: O Lozd, Lozde, now are we all full of synne, and foz our sake paraduēture it is not, the barne of the ryghteous shall not be fylled, because of the synnes of them that dwel vpon the earth.

D So he answered me, & sayd: Go thy waye to a womā wyth chyld, and aske of her whē she hath fulfylled her nyne monethes, yf her childebed maye kepe ṕ bzyth anylōger with in her. Then sayde I: No Lozd, that can she not. And he sayde vnto me: In hell ṕ secret places of soules are lyke the preuy chamber of a woman. Foz lyke as a woman that trauayleth, maketh haste, when the tyme & necessyte of the byrth is at hande. Euen so doth the haste to delyuer it that is commytted vnto her. Loke what thou desyrest to se, it shalbe shewed the from the begynnynge. Then answered I, and sayde: If I haue founde fauoure in thy syght, and yf it be possyble, and yf I be mete therfore, shewe me then, whether there be more to come then is past, or more past then is for to come. What is past, I knowe: but what is for to come, I knowe not.

And he sayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon the ryght syde, and I shall expounde the symylitude vnto the. So I stode, and behold, an whote burnynge ouen wēte ouer before me: and it happened that when the flamme was gone by, the smoke had ꝑ vpper hāde. After thys there went ouer before me a watery cloude, & sent downe moch rayne wyth a stormе: & whē the stormy rayne was past the droppes remayned styll. Then sayde he vnto me: lyke as the rayne is more then the droppes, and as the fyre exceadeth the smoke, euen so the measure of the thynges that are past, hath the vpperhande. Then wente the droppes and the smoke aboue: ād I prayed ād sayde: May I lyue (thynkest thou) vntyll that tyme? Or what shal happen in those dayes? He answered me, ād sayde: As for the tokens wherof ꝑ askest me. I maye tell the of them in parte: but as touchynge thy lyfe. I may not shewe the, for I am not sent therfore.

¶ The.v. Chapter.

¶ Esdras and the Angell commen together.

NEuertheles, as concernīg the tokens, marke thys: Beholde, the dayes shall come, that they which dwell vpon earthe, shalbe takē in a great nōbre, & the waye of the trueth shalbe hyd, and the lande shalbe baren frō fayth: but * iniquyte shall haue the vpperhande, lyke as thou hast sene now, ād as thou hast heard longe agoo. And the lāde that thou seist now to haue rule, shalt thou shortly se waste. But yf God graūte the to lyue, thou shalt se after the thyrd trompet, that ꝑ sunne shall sodēly shyne agayne in the nyght, & the moone thre tymes i the daye, and bloud shall droppe out of wodd, and the stone shall geue his voyce, & the people shalbe vnquyete: and euen he shall rule, whō they hope not that dwell vpon earth, and the foules shall flyt, & the Sodomytysh see shal cast out his fish, and make a noyse in the nyght, whych many shal not knowe, but they shal all heare the voyce therof.

There shalbe a confusyon also in many places, & the fyre shalbe oft sent agayne, ād the wylde beastes shall go theyr waye, and menstruous wemen shall beare monsters, & salt waters shalbe founde in the swete: one frende shall fyght against another: then shal all witt and vnderstādyng be hyd and put asyde into theyr secrete places, and shalbe sought of many, and yet not be founde: then shall vnryghteousnes and voluptuousnes haue the vpperhande vpon earth. One land also shall aske another, and saye: Is ryghtousnes gone thorow the? And it shal saye No. At the same tyme shall men hope, but nothyng optayne: they shall laboure, but theyr wayes shall not prosper.

To shewe the soche tokens I haue leue, & yf thou wylt prayе agayne, & wepe as now and fast seuen dayes, thou shalt heare yet greater thinges. Then I awaked, and a fearfulnes wente thorow all my body, and myanynde was feble and carefull, so that I almost sowned withall. So the aūgel that was come to talke with me, helde me, comforted me, and set me vpon my fete.

And in the seonde nyght it happened, that Salathiel the captayne of the people came vnto me, saying: Where hast thou bene? and why is thy countenannce so heuy? Knowest thou not, that Israel is commytted vnto ꝑ, in the lande of theyr captyuite? Up then ād eate, and forsake vs not, as ꝑ shepherde that leaueth hys flocke in the handes of wycked wolues. Then sayde I vnto hym: Go thy waye fro me, and come not nye me: and he hearde it, ād as I sayd: so wēte he hys waye fro me. And so I fasted seuen dayes, mournynge and weppynge, lyke as Uriel the aūgell commaunded me. And after seuē dayes it happened, that ꝑ thoughtes of my herte were very grenous vnto me agayne, ād my soule receaued ꝑ spyrete of vnderstandynge, and I begāne to talke with the moost hiest agayne and sayde: O Lorde, Lorde, of euery wood of the earth ād of all the trees therof, thou hast chosen the one onely vyneyarde: & of all landes of the whole worlde thou hast chosen one ꝑt: and of all floures of the grounde thou hast chosen the one lylye: and of all the depthes of the see thou hast fylled the one ryuer: ād of all buylded cytyes thou hast holowed Sion vnto thy selfe: ād of all ꝑ foules that are created, thou hast named the one doue: & of all the catell that are made thou hast prouyded the one shepe, & amōg all the multytudes of folckes thou hast gotten the one people, & vnto thys people whō thou louedest, thou gauest a lawe, that is proued of all.

And now, O Lorde, why hast thou geuen this one people ouer vnto many? and vpon the one rote thou hast prepared other and why hast thou scatred thy one only people amonge many? which treade them downe, yee whych haue euer withstande thy promyses, and neuer beleued thy couenaūtes?

And

And though thou werest enemye vnto thy people, yet shuldest thou punych them with thyne awne hōdes. Now whē I had spokē, these wordes ꝑ Angel ꝑ came to me ꝑ nyght afore, was sent vnto me, & sayde vnto me: Heare me, and herken to the thynge that I saye, and I shal tell the more. And I sayde: Speake on my Lorde. Then sayde he vnto me. Thou art sore vexed & troubled for Israels sake. Louest thou that people better then hym that made thē? And I sayd: No Lorde, but of very greate & compassyon haue I spoken. For my reynes payne me euery houre, because I wolde haue experiēce of ꝑ waye of the most hyest, ād to seke out parte of hys iudgement. And he sayde vnto me: ꝑ ꝑ mayest not. And I sayde: wherfore Lorde, where vnto was I borne then? Or why was not my mothers chyldebed then my graue? So had I not sene ꝑ mysery & trouble of Jacob, and the trauayle of my people of Israel.

And he sayd vnto me: Nombre the thynges that are not yet come: gather me together the droppes, ꝑ are scatred abrode: make me the flours grene agayne, ꝑ are withered: open me the thynge that is closed: and bryngе me forth the wyndes, that are shut vp: Shewe me the ymage of a voyce, and then shall I declare the thynge, that thou labourest to knowe. And I sayde: O Lorde, Lorde, who maye knowe these thinges, but he that hath not hys dwellynge with men? As for me, I am vnwyse: how may I then speake of these thynges whereof thou askest me? Then sayde he vnto me: like as ꝑ canst do none of these thynges that I haue spokē of, euen so canst thou not fynde out my iudgement, or in the ende the loue that I haue promyled vnto my people. And I sayd: Behold, O Lorde, yet art thou nye vnto them that haue no ende: and what shall they do, ꝑ haue benе before me, or we that be now, or they that shall come after vs? And he sayde vnto me: I wyll lyken my iudgement vnto a ryngе. Lyke as there is no slacknesse of ꝑ last, euē so is there no swyftnesse of ꝑ fyrst. So I answered and sayd: couldest thou not make those (that haue benе made, & be now, and that are for to come) in one, that thou myghtest shewe thy iudgement the sooner? Then answered he me, and sayde: The creature maye not haste aboue ꝑ maker, neither maye the worlde holde them at once, that shalbe created.

And I sayde: How hast thou sayde then vnto thy seruaunte, that thou lyuynge maker, hast made the creature lyuynge at once & the creature bare it? euē so myght it now also beare them that be present, atōce. And he sayde vnto me: Aske the childebed of a woman, & saye vnto her: If thou bryngest forth chyldren, why doest thou it not to gether, but one after another? Praye her therfore, to bryngе forth ten children at once. And I sayde: she cannot, but must do it one after another.

Then sayde he vnto me: Euen so haue I geuē a childebed vnto the earth, for those ꝑ be sowen vpō it by processe of tyme. For lyke as a yonge child maye not bryng forth ꝑ thynges that belonge to the aged: euē so haue I ordened the worlde which I made.

And I asked and sayde: Seyng thou hast now geuen me a waye, I will speake before the: for oure mother of whom thou hast tolde me, is yet yonge, & now she draweth nye vnto age. He answered me, and sayde: Aske a woman that beareth chyldren, & she shall tell ꝑ. Saye vnto her: wherfore are not they (whom thou hast now brought forth) lyke those that were before ꝑ, but lesse of stature And she shal answere the: They that be borne in the youth of strēgth, are of one fassyō and they that are borne in the tyme of age, (when the chyldebed fayleth) are other wyse. Consydre now thy selfe, how that ye are lesse of stature, then those that were before you, and so are they that come after you, lesse then ye: as the creatures which now begynne to be old, & haue passed ouer ꝑ strēgth of youth. Then sayde I: Lorde I beseche ꝑ, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syght, shewe thy seruaunt, by whom doest thou viset thy creature?

¶ The.vi. Chapter.

¶ The Angell instructeth Esdras, and geueth hym answere to hys questyons.

AND he sayde vnto me. In the beginnynge when ꝑ grounde was made: before the worlde stode, or euer the wyndes blew, before it thondred and lyghtened, or euer ꝑ foundacyōs of Paradyse were layed, before the fayre flourcs were sene, or euer the moueable powers were stablysshed, before the innumerable multitude of angels were gathered together, or euer the hyghnesses of the ayre were lyfted vp, afore ꝑ measures of the firmament were named, or euer ꝑ chymneys in Syon were hote, ād or the presente peares were sought out, and or euer the inuēcyons of them that now synne, were put asyde, before they were sealed that now gather fayth for a treasure: then dyd I cōsydre and pondre all these thynges, and they all were made thorow me, and thorow none other: by me also they be ended, and by none other. Then answered I & sayd: which shall be ꝑ partyng asunder of ꝑ tymes? Or when shalbe the ende of the fyrst, & the begynninge of it ꝑ folowеth? And he sayd vnto me: From Abraham vnto Isaac, when Jacob and Esau were borne of hym, Jacobs hande helde fyrst the hele of Esau: for Esau is the ende of thys worlde and Jacob is the begynnynge of it that folowerth. The hande of man betwixte the hele and the hande. Other question (Esdras) aske thou not.

I answered then, & sayd: O Lord, Lord, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syght, I beseche the, shewe thy seruaunt the ende of thy tokens, wherof thou shewdest me parte the last nyght. So he answered ād sayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete, and heare the perfecte voyce and soūde. There shall come a greate moeyon, but the place where thou standest shall not be moued. And therfore when thou hearest ꝑ wordes, be not afraied: for of the ende shall the worde and foundacyon of the earth be vnderstāde. And why? the word therof trembleth and quaketh, for it knoweth, that it must be chaunged at the B ende. And it happened, ꝑ whē I had hearde it, I stode vp vpon my fete, and herkened: & behold, there was a voyce that spake, and ꝑ sounde of it was lyke ꝑ sounde of many waters, and it sayde: Beholde, the dayes come, that I will begynne to drawe nye, & to vysett them that dwell vpon earth, and wil begynne to make inquysicion of them, what they be that haue hurt equyte with vnrighteousnes, and when the lowe estate of Syō shalbe fulfylled: and when the worlde, that shal vanysh awaye, shalbe ouersealed, then wyll I do these tokens.

The bookes shalbe opened before the firmamēt, and they shall se all together, & the chyldrē of a pere olde shal speake with their voyces: the wemen with chylde shall bring forth vntymely childrē of thre or foure monethes olde, and they shall lyue, and be raysed vp: & sodenly shall the sowen places appeare as the vnsowen, the full store houses shall sodenly be founde emptye, & the trompet shall geue a soūde, which whē euery mā heareth, they shalbe hastely afrayed. * At ꝑ tyme shall frendes fyght one agaynst another lyke enemyes, and the earth shall stande in feare with them. * Which. viii. a Mat. x. c

The sprynges of the welles shall stande styll, and in thre houres they shall not rēne. Whosoeuer remayneth from all these thinges that I haue told the, shall escape, ād se my saluacyon, and the ende of your worlde And the men that haue receaued, shall se it, they that haue not tasted death, from theyr byrth, and the hert of the indwellers shalbe chaūged, & turned into another meanynge: for euell shalbe put out, and dysceate shalbe quenched. As for fayth, it shall florysh, corrupcyon shalbe ouercome: & ꝑ trueth, which hath bene so longe without frute, shalbe declared. And it happened when he talked wme, that I loked demurely vpon hym, before whom I stode, and these wordes sayde he vnto me: I am come to shewe the, the tyme of the nyght for to come.

If thou wilt praye yet more, and fast seuen dayes agayne, I shal tell the more thinges, and greater then before: for thy voyce is heard before the Hyest: for why? ꝑ myghtye hath sene thy ryghteous dealynge, he hath sene also thy chastite, which thou hast had euer sence thy youth: and therfore hath he sent me to shew the all these thynges, ād to saye vnto the: Be of good comforte, and feare not, and haste not with ꝑ tymes that are past to thyncke vayne thynges, and make not hast of the latter tymes. C

And it happened after this, that I wepte agayne, and fasted seuen dayes in lyke maner, ꝑ I myght fulfyll ꝑ thre wekes: which he told me. In ꝑ eyght nyght was my hert vexed with in me agayne, & I begāne to speake before ꝑ Hyest, for my spyrete was greatly sett on fyre, & my soule was i dystresse, & I sayd: O Lord, thou spakest vnto thy creature frō the begynnyng (euē the fyrst daye) and saydest. * Let heauen & earth be made, and thy worde was a perfecte worcke. And then was there the spyrete, and ꝑ darcknesses were yet on euery syde, and sylence: there was no mans voyce as yet from ꝑ. Then commaūdedst ꝑ a fayre lyght to come forth out of thy treasures, that thy worck myght appeare and be sene. * Gene. i

Upon the seconde daye thou madest the spyrete of the firmament, and cōmaūdedst it to part a sunder, and to make a deuysiō betwixte the waters, that the one part myght remayne aboue: and the other beneth. Upō the thyrde daye thou broughtest to passe, ꝑ the waters were gathered i the seuēth part of ꝑ earth: Sixe partes hast thou dryed vp, and kepte them, to thyntent ꝑ men myght sowe & occuppe hus bādrye therin. As soone as thy worde went forth, the worcke was made. For imedyatly there was greate innumerable frute, and many dyuerse pleasures & delyces of tēptacyon, floures of chaungeable couloure and smell, and this was done the thyrde daye. D

* Upon the .iiii. daye ꝑ commaundedst ꝑ the Sunne shuld geue his shyne, & the moone her lyght: ꝑ starres dydest thou set in order and gauest them a charge: to do seruyce euen vnto man, that was for to be made. * Gene. i. d * Wen. iiii. c

Upon ꝑ fyrst daye thou saydest vnto the seuēth part (where the * waters were gathered) that they shulde bryng forth diuerse beastes, foules and fyshes. And so it came to passe, that the domme water and without soule, brought forth lyuynge beastes, at ꝑ commaundemēt of God, that all people myght prayse thy wonderous worckes. * Gene. i. e

Then dydest thou preserue two soules, the one

one thou calledst Enoch and the other Leuiathan, ād dydest separate the one frō the other: for the seuēth parte (namely, where ꝑ water was gathered together) myght not holde them bothe. Unto Enoch thou gauest one parte, which was dryed vp the thyrde daye, that he shulde dwell i the same parte, wherin are a thousand hilles. But vnto Leuiathā thou gauest the seuenth part, namely the moyst, and hast kepte hym to deuoure what thou wylt, and whan. Upon the sixte daye thou gauest commaundemēt vnto the earth, that before the, it shulde bryng forth beastes, catell, and all that crepe, and (beysides this) Adā also, whō thou madest Lorde of all thy creatures, Of hym come we all, & the people also, whom thou hast chosen specially vnto thy selfe. All thys haue I sayde now & spoken before ꝑ, that I myght shewe how that the worlde is made for oure sakes As for the other people which also come of Adā thou hast sayd that they are nothyng, but be lyke a spetle, & hast lyckened ꝑ aboundaūce of them vnto a droppe (that falleth) from the rofe of the house.

And now, O Lorde, the Heathen whych haue euer bene reputed as nothynge, haue begōne to be lordes ouer vs, and to deuoure vs: but we thy people (whom thou hast called the fyrst borne, thy only begotten, & thy feruent louer) are geuen into theyr handes and power. Yf the worlde now be made for our sakes, why haue we not the inheritaunce in possession with the worlde? How longe shall thys endure?

The. vii. Chapter.

The Angel sheweth Esdras many thynges to come.

AND it happened after that I had spoken our these wordes, there was sent vnto me an Angell, which had bene by me also the nightes afore, and he said vnto me: Up Esdras, and heare the wordes ꝑ I am come to tel the. And I sayd: speake on Lord my God. Then sayd he vnto me. The see is set in a wyde place, that it myght be depe and greate: but the entraūce is narow and small lyke a ryuer. For who wolde go into the see, to loke vpon it, and to rule it? If he wente not thorow ꝑ narow, how myght he come into the brode?

Item another: A cyte is buylded and set vpon a brode felde, and is full of all goodes the entraunce is narow & sodayne, lyke as yf there were a fyre at the ryght hād, and a depe water at the left and as it were onely one strayte path betwixte thē both, so smal that there coulde but one man go there.

Yf thys cyte now were geuē to an heyre, & he neuer wēte thorow the parelous waye, how wolde he receaue his enheritaūce? And I sayde: It is so Lorde, Then sayd he: Euē so is Israel also a porcion. And why? for their sakes haue I made the worlde: & whē Adam transgressed my statutes, then was the thyng iudged ꝑ was done. Then were the entraunces of the worlde made narow, ful of sorow & trauayle. They are but few & euell, full of perels and laboure. For the entraunces of the fore worlde were wyde and sure, and brought immortall frute.

If they now which are entred into thys worlde, maye not cōprehende these strayte and vayne thinges, moch lesse maye they cōprehende and vnderstande the secrete thynges: Why disquietest thou thy selfe thē, seing thou art but a corruptible man? And what woldest thou knowe, where as thou art but mortall? And why hast thou not receaued into thyne herte the thyng that is for to come, but that is present?

Then sayd I: O Lord Lord, * thou hast ordeyned i thy lawe, ꝑ the ryghteous shuld inherete these thynges, but that ꝑ vnfaythfull and vngodly shulde perysshe. Neuertheless, the righteous shall suffre strayte thinges, and hope for wyde: for they that haue lyued vngodly and suffred strayte thynges shall not se the wyde. * Deu. viii. a

And he sayde vnto me: There is no iudge aboue God, and none that hath vnderstandynge aboue the Hyest. For there be many that perysh, because they despyse the lawe of God ꝑ is sett before them. For God hath geuen strayte commaundement to soch as come, that they knowe what they do, and how they shuld lyue: and yf they kepte this they shuld not be punysshed.

Neuertheless, they were not obedient vnto hym, but spake agaynst hym: ymagyned vayne thynges, and purposed to synne, and sayd moreouer, that there was no God, and that God regarded it not. Hys wayes haue they not knowne, his lawe haue they despysed, and denyed hys promyses: in hys statutes & ordynaūces haue they not bene faythfull and stedfast, and haue not perfourmed hys worckes.

And therfore Esdras: vnto the full, plenty: and to the emptye, emptynesse. Beholde the tyme shall come, that these tokēs which I haue tolde the, shall come to passe, ād the bryde shal appeare, and the earth that now passeth awaye, shalbe shewed: and whosoeuer is delyuered frō the forsayde euels, shall se my wonders. For my sonne Jesus shalbe openly declared, with those that be with hi: & they that remayne, shall be mery in foure hundred yeares.

After these same yeares shall my sonne Chryst dye, & all men that haue lyfe, and ꝑ worlde shalbe turned into the olde sylēce seuen dayes, lyke as in the fore iudgementes, so ꝑ no man shall remayne. And after seuen delyes, the woꝛld that yet awaked not, shal be rayſed vp, and ſhall dye coꝛrupte. And ꝓ earth ſhall reſtoꝛe thoſe ꝓ haue ſlepte in her, and ſo ſhall the duſt thoſe that dwell in ſilẽce, and the ſecrete place ſhal delyuer thoſe ꝓ be commypted vnto thẽ. And the moſt hyeſt ſhall be openly declared vpon ꝓ ſeate of iudgemẽt, and all myſery ſhall vanyſh awaye, & longe ſuffryng ſhalbe gathered together. But the iudgemẽt ſhall cõtinue, the treuth ſhall remayne, and fayth ſhal waxe ſtrong, the woꝛcke ſhall folowe, & the rewarde ſhal be ſhewed: the ryghteouſnes ſhall watch, & the vnryghteouſneſſes ſhall beare no rule.

*Ge.xviii.d. ‡Eſod.xxxii. Then ſayde I: * Abꝛaham prayed fyrſt foꝛ the Sodomytes, ‡& Moſes foꝛ ꝓ fathers that ſinned in the wyldernes, ād he that came after hym foꝛ Iſrael, in ꝓ tyme of Achas and Samuel: and * Dauid foꝛ the deſtruccyon ‡and Salomon foꝛ them that came into the Sanctuary, *and helyas foꝛ thoſe ꝓ receaued rayne, & foꝛ ꝓ deed, that he myght lyue, and Ezechias foꝛ the people in the tyme of Sennacheryb: and diuerſe other lyke maner, which haue prayed foꝛ many.

*ii.re.xviiiib ‡ii.Par.b.c *iii.re.xviii.a James.b.c.

Euen ſo now, ſeyng the coꝛrupte is growne vp, & wyckednes increaſed, and the ryghteous haue prayed foꝛ the vngodly, wherfoꝛe ſhall it not be ſo nowalſo?

He anſwered me, and ſayd: Thys preſent woꝛld is not the ende, there remaineth moch honoure in it, therfoꝛe haue they prayed foꝛ the weake. But the daye of dome ſhalbe the ende of thys tyme, and the begynning of the immoꝛtalite foꝛ to come, wherin all coꝛrupcyon vanyſhed, all voluptcouſnes is louſed all myſbeleue taken awaye, ryghteouſnes growne, and the verye ſpꝛonge vp. Then ſhall no man be able to ſaue hym that is deſtroyed, ner to oppreſſe hym ꝓ hath gotten ꝓ victoꝛy. I anſwered then, and ſayd: This is my firſt and laſt ſayig: ꝓ it had bene better, not to haue geuen the earthe vnto Adã: oꝛ els when it was geuen hym, to kepe hym ꝓ he ſhuld not ſynne. Foꝛ what profit is it foꝛ men now in thys preſent tyme to lyue in heupnes, & after death to loke foꝛ punyſchmẽt. O thou Adam, what haſt thou done? Foꝛ though it was thou that ſynned, ꝓ art not fallen alone, but we all that come of ꝓ. Foꝛ what profit is it vnto vs, yf there be prompſed vs an immoꝛtall tyme, where as we medle wyth deadly woꝛckes? and that there is promiſed vs an euerlaſtyng hope, where as our ſelues are euel & vayne, and ꝓ there are layed vp foꝛ vs dwellynges of health & fredome, where as we haue lyued euell, & ꝓ the woꝛchyppe of the hyeſt is kepte to defende them, which haue leda pacyent lyfe, where as we haue walcked in the moſt wycked wayes of all? And that there ſhalbe ſhewed a paradyſe, wholes frute endureth foꝛ euer, wherin is fredome and medycyne, where as we ſhall not go in: foꝛ we haue walcked in vnpleaſaunt places: And that the faces of them, which haue abſteyned, ſhall ſhyne aboue the ſtarres, where as oure faces ſhalbe black and darcke: Foꝛ whyle we lyued & dyd vnryghteouſly, we conſyderednot that we ſhuld ſuffre therfoꝛe after deeth?

Then anſwered he me, and ſayde: Thys is the conſyderacion ād thought of the batayle, which man hath vpon earth: that yf he be ouercome, he ſhall ſuffre as thou haſt ſayde. But yf he gett the victoꝛy, he ſhall receaue the thynge that I ſaye. Foꝛ thys is ꝓ lyfe, wher of Moſes ſpake vnto the people, whyle he lyued, ſayinge: * Chooſe the lyfe, that ꝓ mayeſt lyue. Neuertheles, they beleued hym not, nether ꝓ pꝛophetes after hym. No ner me which haue ſpoken vnto them ꝓ heupnes ſhulde not reach vnto them to theyr deſtruccyon, lyke as ioye is foꝛ to come ouer thoſe that haue ſuffred them ſelues to be enfourmed in ſaluacyon.

*Deu.xxx.a

I anſwered then, ād ſayde: I knowe Lorde, that the hyeſt is mercyfull, in that he hath mercy vpon them, whych are not yet in the woꝛlde, and vpon thoſe alſo that walcke in his lawe: and that * he is pacient and lõge ſufferynge towarde thoſe that haue ſynned in theyr woꝛckes, and that he is liberall to geue where as it requyreth: and that he is of great mercy, foꝛ he multyplied hys louinge kyndneſſe towarde thoſe that are preſent and that are paſt, ād to them whych are foꝛ to come. Foꝛ yf he multiplye not hys mercyes, the woꝛlde ſhall not be made lyuynge, wyth thoſe that dwell therin. He geueth alſo, foꝛ yf he gaue not of hys goodnes, that they whych haue done euell, myght be caſed from theyr wyckednes, the ten thouſande parte of men ſhulde not be made lyuynge. And yf the iudge foꝛgaue not thoſe that be healed wꝫ hys woꝛde, & yf he wold deſtroye ꝓ multytude that ſtryueth, there ſhulde be very fewe left in an innumerable multytude.

¶ The.viii. Chapter.

¶ Eldras prayeth God rather to loke vpon hys awne mercye, then on the ſynnes of the people.

AND he anſwered me, ſayinge. The moſt hyeſt made thys woꝛlde foꝛ many, but the woꝛlde to come foꝛ fewe. I will tell the a ſymylitude, Eldras: As when thou aſkeſt the earth, it ſhall ſaye vnto ꝓ, that it geueth moch moulde, whereof earthen veſſels are made, but litle of it that golde commeth of. Euẽ ſo is it with the woꝛcke of thys woꝛld. * There be many created, but fewe ſhall be preſerued. Then anſwered I and ſayde: Then ſwalowe vp the wytt (thou ſoule) and deuoure the vnderſtanvnderſtandyng, foꝛ thou art argreed to herken and to geue eare, and wyllynge to pꝛophecie: foꝛ thou haſt no lõger ſpace geuen ꝓ, but onely to lyue. O Lord, wilt thou not gene thy ſeruaũt leaue, that we maye pꝛaye before the, and that thou mayeſt geue ſede vnto oure herte, & buylde oure vnderſtãdyng, that there maye come frute of it: & that euery one which is coꝛrupte, and beareth ꝓ ſtate and place of a man, maye lyue?

Foꝛ thou art alone, & we all are one woꝛckmanſhype of thy hãdes, lyke as thou haſt ſayd, and lyke as the body is faſhioned now in the mothers wõbe, & thou geueſt the mẽbꝛes, and thy creature is preſerued in fyꝛeãd water: & ix. monethes doth thy woꝛke ſuffre thy creature, which is faſhioned in her: but the thing that preſerued, and it that is preſerued, ſhal both be kepte together: and whẽ tyme is, the wombe delyuereth the thynge that is kepte and growne in her.

Foꝛ thou haſt commaunded ꝓ bꝛeſtes to geue mylck vnto the frute, that the thynge which is created and faſſioned, maye be noꝛiſhed foꝛ a tyme: and then thou diſpoſeſt & oꝛdeyneſt it with thy mercy, bꝛyngeſt it vp wꝫ thy ryghteouſnes, nurtureſt it in thy law, & reſourmeſt it with thy vnderſtanding, moꝛtifieſt it as thy creature, & makeſt it lyuige as thy woꝛcke. Seynge then that thou deſtroyedſt hi, which with ſo great labours is created and faſhyoned thoꝛowe thy commaundemẽt, thou couldeſt lyghtly oꝛdeyne, alſo, that the thinge which is made, myght be preſerued.

B And this I ſpeake now of all men in generall: as ꝓ knoweſt: but of thy people: foꝛ whoſe ſake I am ſoꝛy: and of thy inheritaũce: foꝛ whoſe cauſe I mourne: and of Iſrael, foꝛ whom I am wofull: and foꝛ Jacob, foꝛ whoſe ſake I am greued, therfoꝛe begynne I to pꝛaye before the, foꝛ my ſelfe & foꝛ the, foꝛ I ſe the fall of vs, euen of vs, that dwell vpon earth. But I haue herde the ſwyftnes of the iudge, which is to come: therfoꝛe heare my voyce, and vnderſtande my woꝛdes, and I ſhall ſpeake before the.

This is the begynninge of the woꝛdes of Eldras, before he was receaued: O Lorde, thou that dwelleſt in euerlaſtingneſſe, whoſe eyes are lyft vp i the ayre, whoſe ſtoole is exceading hye, whoſe glory & maieſty maye not be compꝛehended, before whom the hoſtes of heauen ſtande with tremblyng, whoſe kepinge is turned in wynde & fyre, whoſe woꝛde is true, whoſe talcknynge is ſtedfaſt, whoſe commaundement is ſtronge, whoſe oꝛdinaunce is fearfull, whoſe loke diꝛeth vp the depthes, whoſe wrath maketh the mountaynes to melt awaye, and whoſe treuth beareth wytnes: O heare the pꝛayer of thy ſeruaunt, and marck wyth thyne eares the petition of thy creature.

Foꝛ whyle I lyue, I wyll ſpeake, and ſo longe as I haue vnderſtandyng, I wyll anſwere. O loke not vpon the ſynnes of thy people, whych ſeruy in the trueth. Haue no reſpecte vnto the wicked ſtudies of the heathen, but to the deſire of thoſe that kepe thy teſtymonyes wyth ſoꝛowes. Thyncke not vpõ thoſe that haue walked faynedly before the, but vpon them, which with will haue knowne thy feare.

Let it not be thy wyll to deſtroye them, which haue had beaſtly maners, but to loke vpõ thẽ that haue clearly taught thy lawe. Take thou no indignaciõ at thẽ, which are woꝛſe then beaſtes: but loue them, that all waye put theyr truſt in thy ryghteouſnes & glozy: foꝛ we & oure fathers haue all the ſame ſyckneſ and dyſeaſe, but becauſe of oure ſynnes thou ſhalt be called mercyfull.

Foꝛ yf thou haſt mercy vpon vs, ꝓ ſhalt be called mercyfull, where as we haue no woꝛckes of ryghteouſnes: foꝛ ꝓ ryghteous whych haue layed vp many good woꝛckes together, ſhal out of theyr dedes receaue rewarde. Foꝛ what is mã, that thou ſhuldeſt take diſpleaſure at him? Oꝛ what is the coꝛruptible moꝛtall generaciõ, that thou ſhuldeſt be ſo rough towarde hym?

* Foꝛ of a truthe there is no man amõge them that be bozne, but he hath dealt wyckedly: and amõge the faythfull there is none, which hath not done amyſſe. Foꝛ in thys (O Lord) thy ryghteouſnes and thy goodnes ſhalbe pꝛayſed and declared, yf thou be mercyfull vnto them, which are not ryche in good woꝛckes.

*ii.Par.b. i.Johñ.i.b.

Then anſwered he me and ſayde: Some thynges haſt thou ſpokẽ a ryght, and accoꝛding vnto thy woꝛdes it ſhall be. Foꝛ I wil not verely conſyder the woꝛckes of them, which haue ſynned before death, before the iudgement, before deſtruccion, but * I wyll reioyſe ouer the woꝛcke and thought of the ryghteous. I will remẽbꝛe alſo the pylgremage, the holy makynge and the rewarde. Lyke as I haue ſpoken now, ſo ſhal it come to paſſe. Foꝛ as the huſbande man ſoweth moche ſede vpon the groũde, and planteth many trees, and yet alwaye the thynge that is ſowne oꝛ planted is not all kepte ſafe, nether doth it all take rote: Euẽ ſo is it wꝫ thẽ that are ſowne in the woꝛlde, they ſhall not all be preſerued.

I anſwered then and ſayde: If I haue founde grace, thẽ let me ſpeake. Like as the huſbande mans ſede periſheth, yf it receaue not rayne in due ſeaſon, oꝛ yf there come to moch rayne vpõ it: Euen ſo perycheth man alſo, which is created with thy handes, and is lyke vnto thyne awne ymage and to thy ſelfe, foꝛ whoſe ſake thou haſt made all thẽ ges, and lykened hym vnto the husbande mans sede. Be not wroth at vs, O Lorde, but spare thy people, and haue mercy vpon thyne awne inherytaunce: O be mercyfull vnto thy creature.

D Then answered he me & sayde. Thynges present are for the present, and thinges to come for soch as be to come. For thou lackest yet moch, seynge þ mayest loue my creature aboue me: I haue oft tymes drawne nye vnto the, but neuer to the vnryghteous. In this also thou art maruelous before þ hyest in that thou hast humbled thy selfe, as it becommeth the, and hast not regarded thyne awne selfe, that thou art had in soch honoure amõge þ ryghteous. Therfore shal great wretchednes and misery come vpon thẽ, that in the latter tyme shall dwell in the worlde because they haue walcked in greate pryde.

But vnderstand thou for thy selfe, and seke out glory for soch as be lyke the: for vnto you is paradyse opened, the tre of lyfe is planted, the tyme to come is prepared, plenteousnes made ready, a cyte is buylded for you, & a rest is prepared, yee perfecte goodnes and wysdome. The rote of euell is marched from you, þ weaknes, and moth is hyd frõ you, & into hell flyeth corrupcion in forgetfulnes. Sorowes are vanyshed awaye, and in the ende is shewed the treasure of immortalite. And therfore aske thou nomore questions concernynge the multitude of thẽ that perishe. For they haue taken libertye: despysed the hyest, thought scorne of his lawe, and forsaken his wayes.

Moreouer, they haue troden downe hys
*psal.xliii.a ryghteous, and *sayde in theyr herte, that there is no God, yee and that wyttingly, for they dye. For lyke as the thynge that I haue spoken of, is made ready for you: Euẽ so is thyrst & payne prepared for them. For it was not hys wyll that man shulde come to naught, but they which be created haue defyled the name of hym that made them, and are vnthãckfull vnto hym, which prepared lyfe for them. And therfore is my iudgemẽt now at hand. These thinges haue I not shewed vnto all men, but vnto fewe, namely vnto the, and to soch as be lyke the.

Then answered I and sayd: Beholde O Lorde, now hast thou shewed me the multitude of the tokens, which thou wylt begyn to do at the last: but at what tyme & when, thou hast not shewed me.

¶The.ix.Chapter.

¶Esdras hath diuyons shewed vnto hym.

A Nd answered me then and sayd: Measure thou þ tyme diligẽtly in it selfe, when thou seyst that one parte of the tokens come to passe, whych I haue tolde þ before: so shalt thou vnderstande, that it is the very same tyme, wherin the Hyest will begynne to vyset the worlde, which he made. And whẽ there shalbe sene earth quake and vproare of the people i the worlde, thẽ shalt thou well vnderstande, that the most hyest spake of those thynges, from the dayes that were before the, euen from the begynnynge.

For lyke as all that is made in the world hath a begynnyng and ende, and the ende is manyfest: Euẽ so the tymes also of þ Hyest haue playne begynnynges in wonders and sygnes, and the ende in worckyng and in tokens. And euery one that shalbe saued, and shall be able to escape by hys workes and by faith, wherin ye haue beleued, shall be preserued from the sayde parels, and shal se my saueoure in my lande, and wythin my borders, for I haue halowed me frõ the world. Thẽ shal they be in carefulnesse, which now haue abused my wayes: and they þ haue cast thẽ oute despitefully, shall dwell in paynes.

For soch as in theyr lyfe haue receaued benefytes, and haue not knowne me, & they that haue abhorred my lawe, whyle they had yet fredome, and whẽ they had yet open leysure of amendement and couersyon, and vnderstode not, but despysed it: þ same must knowe it after death in paine. And therfore be thou nomore carefull, how the vngodly shalbe punished, & how the ryghteous shalbe saued, and whose the worlde is, & for whõ the worlde, and when it is. Then answered W
I and sayde: * I haue talcked before & now * iiii.es. biii.b
I speake, ād will speake also her after, that there be many moo of them whych perysh, thẽ shalbe saued, lyke as the flouде is greater then the droppes.

And he answered me, sayinge: lyke as the felde is, so is also the sede: as the flourcs be, so are the coulours also: soch as the worckman is, soch is also the worcke: and as the husband mã is hym selfe, so is hys husbandrye also, for it was the tyme of the worlde. And when I prepared for them that are now, or euer the worlde was made, where in they shulde dwell, then was there no man that wythstode me. Now when euery one was, and the maker also in the worlde which is now prepared, and the moneth that ceaseth not, and the lawe whych is vnsearcheable, they maners were corrupte. So I consydred the worlde, & beholde, there was parell, because of the thoughtes that were come in to it. And I saw, and spared them greatly, and haue kepte me a wynebery of the grapes, and a plante from amonge many generacyons. Let the multitude perysh then, whych are growne vp in vayne, and lett my grape and wynebery be kepte: euen my plante: for wyth greate laboure haue I made it vp.

C So I went my waye and came into the felde which is called Ardath (lyke as he cõmaunded me) and there I sat amonge the flowres, & dyd eate of the herbes of the felde, and the meate of þ same satisfied me. ## ¶The.x.Chapter.

¶Esdras and the woman that appeareth vnto hym commen together.

A Nd it happened that when my sonne wente into hys chamber he fell downe, and dyed: then ouerthrewe we all þ lyghtes, and all my neyghbours rose vp to comforte me. Then toke I my rest vnto the seconde daye at nyght: and whẽ they had all rested, that they might comforte me, I rested and also rose vp by nyght, and fled, & am come hyther in to thys felde, as thou seyst: and am purposed not to come in the citye, but to remayne here, and neyther to eate ner dryncke, but continually to mourne and to fast, vntyll I dye.

Then let I my meditacions & thoughtes fall, that I was in, & spake to her in displeasure: Thou foolysh woman, seyst thou not oure heupnes and mournyng, & what happeneth vnto vs: how Syon oure mother is all wofull and sory, and how she is cleane brought downe and in mysery? seyng we be all now in heupnes, & make oure mone (for we be all sorowfull.) As for þ heupnes that thou takest, it is but for one sonne. Demãde the earth, & she shall tell the, that it is the which ought (by reason) to mourne, for the fall of so many that growe vpon her.
For from the begynnynge all mẽ are borne of hir, and other shall come: & beholde, they walke all most all in to destruccion, and many of them shalbe roted out.

Who shulde then (by reason) make more mournynge, then she, that hath lost so great a multitude? & not thou, which art sory, but for one. But yf thou woldest saye vnto me: My mournynge is not lyke the mournynge of the earth, for I haue lost the frute of my body, which I bare wt heupnes: but þ earth is accordinge to the maner of the earth, and the present multitude goeth againe vnto her as it is come to passe. Then saye I vnto the: lyke as thou hast borne with trauayle & sorowe, euẽ so þ earth also frõ the begynnyng geueth her frute vnto man, for hym þ made her. B And she sayde vnto me: that wyll I not do, I wyll not go in to the cytye, but heare will I dye. So I commened moze with her and sayde: Do not so, but be counceled, and folowe me: foz how many falles hath Syõ? We of good comforte because of the sozowe of Jerusalem. Foz thou seyst that our Sanctuary is layed waste, oure aulter broken, oure temple destroyed, oure playenge of instrumentes and syngynge layed howne, the thãkesgeuynge put to silence, our myzth is vanyshed awaye, the lyght of oure candelstick is quẽched, the arcke of the couenaunt is taken from vs, all oure holy thynges are defyled, and the name that is called vpon ouer vs, is dishonoured: oure childzẽ are put to shame, oure pzestes are bzent, oure Leuites are caried awaye into captiuite, our virgins are defyled, and oure wyues rauished, oure ryghteous mẽ spoyled, and oure chyldzen destroyed, oure yonge men are bzought in bondage, and oure stronge worthyes are become weake: and Syõ (which seale is the greatest of all) is lowsed vp from her worshyp: foz she is delyuered into the handes of them that hate vs.

And therfoze shake of thy great heuynes, and put awaye the multitude of sozowes: þ the myghtye maye be mercyfull vnto the, & that the hyest maye geue the rest from thy laboure and trauaile. And it happened, that when I was talkyng with her, her face dyd shyne and glyster, so that I was afrayed of her, and mused what it myght be. And immedyatly she cast oute a greate voyce, very fearfull, so that the earth shoke at the noyse of the woman: and I loked, and beholde, the womã, appeared vnto me nomoze: but there was a citie builded, & a place was shewed from the grounde and foundacyon.

C Then was I afrayed, and cryed wyth loude voyce, and sayde: where is Uziel the *iiii.ec.iiii.a angell, * which came to me at the fyzst? Foz he hath caused me to come in many consideracyons and hye thoughtes, and myne ende is turned to cozrupciõ, and my pzayer to rebuke. And as I was speakynge these wozdes, he came vnto me, and loked vpon me, & I laye as one that had bene deed, and myne vnderstanding was altered, and he toke me by the ryght hande, and cõfozted me, and set me vpon my fete, and sayde vnto me: what ayleth the? and why is thine vnderstãding vexed? and the vnderstanding of thy herte, & wherfoze art thou sozy? And I sayd: Because thou hast fozsake me: and I haue done *iiii.ed.ix.a * accozdinge vnto thy wozdes, I wente in to the felde, and there haue I sene thynges that I am not able to expzesse. He sayde vnto me: Stande vp and be manly, and I shal geue the exhoztacion.

Then sayd I: speake vnto me my Lozd fozsake me not, lest I dye in vayne: foz I haue sene that I knewe not, and herde that I do not knowe. Oz shal my vnderstandinge be disceaued, & my mynde? But now I beseche the, that thou wylt shewe thy seruaũt of this wõder. He answered me therto & sayd: heare me, and I shall enfourme the, and tell the wherfoze thou art afrayed, foz the hyest hath opened many secrete thinges vnto the.

He hath sene that thy waye is ryght, and that thou takest sozowe cõtinually foz thy people, and makest greate lamentacyon foz Syon: and therfoze vnderstande the vision which thou sawest a lytle whyle agoo after this maner: Thou sawest a woman mournynge, and thou hast comfozted her: Neuertheles now seyst thou the lykenes of þ womã nomoze, but thou thoughtest there was a citie buylded: and like as she tolde þ of the fall of her sonne, so is this the answere: The woman whom thou sawest, is Syon, and where as she tolde the, that she hath bene thyztye yeares vnfrutefull and barẽ, those are the .xxx. yeares, wherin there was no offerynge made in her.

But after .xxx. yeares Salomõ buylded D her, & offred, and then bare the barẽ a sonne. And where as she tolde þ: that she nozysshed hym with laboure, that was the dwellynge of Jerusalem. But where as she tolde the þ her sonne dyed whã she came into her chamber, that is the fall of Jerusalem. And thou sawest her lykenesse, how she mourned foz her sonne: and what els happened vnto her, I haue shewed þ. And now God seyth, that thou art sozy in thy mynde, and suffrest frõ thy herte foz her, & so hath he shewed the her clearnesse, and the kayznes of her bewtye.

And therfoze I bad the remayne in þ felde where no house is builded. Foz I knewe that the hyest wolde shew this vnto the, therfore I commaunded the to goo into the felde, where no foundacion ner buyldinge is. Foz in the place where the hyest wyll shewe hys citye, there shall be no mans buylding. And therfoze feare not, and let not thyne hert be afrayed, but go thy waye in, and se the glorious and fayze buyldinge, and how greate it is, and how greate thou thinckest it after the measure of thine eyes, and thẽ shalt thou heare as moch as thine eares maye compzehende. Foz þ art blessed aboue many other, and art called with the hyest, as the fewe. But tomozow at nyght thou shalt remayne here, and so shall the hyest shewe the visyõs of hye thynges, which he wyll do vnto thẽ, that dwell vpõ earth in the last dayes. So I slepte the same nyght lyke as he commaunded me.

The

C The.xi.Chapter.

C In this chapter and in the .ii. next ensuynge, he entreateth of certen bysyons and of the interpzetacyons therof.

A When I sawe I a dzeame: and behold there came vp from the see an Aegle which had .xii. wynges and thze heades: And I sawe, and beholde, he spzed hys wynges ouer all the earth, and all the wyndes of the ayze blew in thẽ, and so they were put together agayne. And I behelde, & out of hys fethers there grew other lytle cõtrary fethers: the heades rested, the head in the myddest was greater then the other, yet rested it with the residue.

Mozeouer I sawe, that the Aegle flew wh hys wynges, and raygned vpon earth, and ouer all them that dwell vpõ the earth: and I sawe that all thinges vnder heauen were subiecte vnto hym, & no man spake against hym, no not one creature vpõ earth. I sawe also that the Aegle stode vp vpon hys clawes, & gaue a soũde with his fethers, and a voyce sayinge after this maner: watch not all together, slepe euery man in hys awne place, and watch foz a tyme, but let the heades be pzeserued at the last. Neuertheles I sawe, that the voyce wente not oute of hys heades, but from the myddest of hys body. And I nombzed hys cõtrary fethers, and beholde, there were eyght of them. And I loked, and beholde vpon the ryght syde there arose one fether, & raygned ouer all þ earth. And it happened, that when it raygned the ende of it came, and the place therof appeared nomoze. So the nexte folowynge stode
B vp, and raygned, and had greate tyme: and it happened, that when it raygned, the ende of it came also lyke as the fyzst, so that it appeared nomoze.

Then came there a voyce vnto it, & sayd Heare thou that hast kepte in þ earth so longe, thys I saye vnto the, before thou begynnest to appeare nomoze: There shall none after the atteyne vnto thy tyme. Then arose the thyzd, and raygned as the other afoze, & appeared nomoze also. So went it with all the residue one after another, so that euery one raygned, and then appeared nomoze.

Then I loked, and beholde, in pzocesse of tyme þ fethers that folowed were set vp vpon the ryght syde, that they myght rule also: & some of thẽ ruled, but within a whyle they appeared nomoze: foz some of thẽ were set vp, but ruled not. After this I loked, and beholde the .xii. fethers appeared nomoze, and the two wynges: & there was nomoze vpon þ Aegles body, but two heades that rested, and syze fethers. Thẽ sawe I also, that the syze fethers were parted in two, and remained vnder the head, that was vpõ the ryght syde, foz the foure continued in theyz place.

So I loked, & behold, they that were vnder C the wynges, thought to set vp thẽ selues, & to haue the rule. Then was there one set vp but shoztly it appeared nomoze, & the secõde was sooner awaye then the fyzst. And I beheld & lo, þ two thought also by thẽ selues to raygne: & when they so thought, beholde, there waked one of the heades that were at rest, namely, it that was in the myddest, foz that was the greater of þ two heades. And thẽ I sawe, that the two heades were filled with him, and þ head was turned wyth thẽ that were by hym, and dyd eate vp the two vnder wynges, that wolde haue raygned.

But this head put þ whole earth in feare, & bare rule in it, ouer all those þ dwelt vpon earth wh moch laboure, and he had þ gouernaũce of the wozlde, ouer all the foules that haue bene. After this I loked, & beholde, the head that was in þ myddest sodenly appeare nomoze, lyke as þ wynges: then came the two heades, which ruled vpon earth, & ouer those þ dwelt therin. And I behelde, & lo, the head vpon the ryght syde, deuoured it that was vpon þ left syde. And I herde a voyce, which sayde vnto me: loke before þ, and consydze the thyng that thou seyst. Thẽ I sawe and beholde, as it were a lyõ þ roareth, rennynge hastely out of the wod, & he sent out a mãs voyce vnto the Aegle, & sayd: Heare thou, I will talke with the, & the hyest shal saye vnto þ: Is it not thou þ hast þ victozy of the foure beastes, whom I made to raygne vpon earth & in my wozlde, and þ the ende of theyz tymes myght come thozow the?

And the fourth came, and ouerwanne all D the beastes that were past, and had power ouer the wozlde with great fearfulnes, and ouer the whole cõpasse of the earth with the most wicked laboure, & so longe time dwelt he vpon the earth with disceate, & the earth hast thou iudged not with trueth. Foz thou hast troubled the meke, thou hast hurte the peaceable & qupete, thou hast loued lyers, & destroyed þ dwellinges of thẽ that bzought fozth frute, and hast cast downe the walles of soch as dyd the no harme. Therfoze is thy wzongeous dealyng and blasphemye come vp vnto the hyest, and thy pzyde vnto the myghty. The hyest also hath loked vpon þ pzoude tymes, and beholde, they are ended, and theyz abhominaciõs are fulfylled. And therfoze appeare nomoze thou Aegle, & thy hozrible wynges, and thy wycked fethers, & thy vngracious heades, and thy sinfull clawes, and all thy vayne body: that the earth maye be refreshed, and come agayne to herselfe, whã she is delyuered from thy violence, and that she maye hope foz the iudgemẽt and mercy of hym that made her.

C The.xii.Chapter.

And it

AND it happened when the Lȳ spake these wordes vnto ꝑ Aegle, I sawe, & beholde, the head that afore had the vpperhand, appeared nomore: nether dyd ꝑ foure wynges appeare any more, that came to him, and were set vp to raygne: and their kyngdome was small and full of vproure. And I saw, and beholde, they appeared no more, and the whole body of the Aegle was brēt, and the earth was in greate feare. Thē awaked I out of the trauce of my mynde, & from greate feare, & sayde vnto my spreche: Lo, this hast thou geuen me in that thou serchest out ꝑ wayes of the Hyest: lo, yet am I weery in my mynde, & very weake in my spirite, and lytle strēgth is there in me, for ꝑ greate feare ꝑ I receaued this nyght. Therfore wyll I now beseche the Hyest, that he wyll cōforte me vnto the ende: and I sayde, Lorde Lorde, yf I haue founde grace before thy syght, and yf I am iustified with the before many other, and yf my prayer be come vp before thy face, comforte me thē, and shewe me thy seruaunt the interpretacion and playne differēce of thys horrible syght, that thou mayest perfectly cōforte my soule: for thou hast iudged me worthy, to shewe me the last of tymes.

And he sayde vnto me: thys is the interpretacyon of thys syght. The Aegle whom thou sawest come vp frō the see, is the kyng dome* which was sene in the vysyon of thy brother Daniel, but it was not expounded * Dani.vii.c
23 vnto hym, for now I declare it vnto ꝑ. Beholde, ꝑ dayes come, that there shall ryse vp a kyngdome vpon earth, and it shalbe feared aboue all the kyngdomes that were before it. In ꝑ same kyngdome shal.xii. Kynges raygne, one after another. For the secōde shall begynne to raygne, and shall haue more tyme then the other twelue: and thys do the twelue wynges signifie, which thou sawest. As for ꝑ voyce that spake, and that thou sawest go out from the heades, but not from the body, it betokeneth, that after the tyme of ꝑ kyngdome there shal aryse great strypynges, and it shall stande in parell of fallyng: neuertheles it shall not yet fall, but shalbe set into his begynnyng. And ꝑ eyght vnder wynges whych thou sawest hāge vnto the wynges of hym, be token, that in him there shall aryse eyght kynges, whose tyme shalbe but small, and theyr yeares swyft, & two of thē shall beare. But when the myddest tyme commeth, there shalbe foure kepte in the tyme, whē his tyme begynneth to come ꝑ it maye be ended, but two shalbe kepte vnto the ende.

¶ And where as thou sawest thre heades reskynge, this is the interpretacyō: In his last shall the Hyest rayse vp thre kyngdomes, & call many agayne into thē, & they shall haue the dominion of the earth, and of those that dwell therin, wt moch labour aboue all those that were before thē. Therfore are they called ꝑ heades of the Aegle: for it is they that shall bryngе forth hys wyckednes agayne, and that shal perfourme and fynish his last. And where as ꝑ sawest, that ꝑ greate head appeared nomore, it signifieth, that one of them shall dye vpon his bed, and yet wt payne, for the two that remayne, shalbe slayne with the swerde. For the swerde of thē one shall deuoure the other, but at ꝑ last shall he fall therow the swerde hym selfe.

And where as ꝑ sawest two vnderwynges vpon the head that is on the ryght syde, it signifieth that it is they, whome ꝑ Hyest hath kepte vnto theyr ende: thys is a small kyngdome, and full of trouble. The Lyon whō thou sawest rysinge vp out of ꝑ wodd, and roarynge, and speakynge vnto the Aegle, & rebukynge him for hys vnryghteousnesse, is the wynde, which ꝑ Hyest hath kepte for them, & for theyr wyckednesse vnto the ende: he shall reproue thē, and rēte them asunder before them. For he shall set thē lyuynge before the iudgement, and shall rebuke them: for the residue of my people shall he deliuer with trouble those that he preserued ouer myne endes: and he shall make thē ioyfull vntyll the commyng of the daye of iudgement, wherof I haue spoken vnto the frō the begynnynge. This is the dreame ꝑ thou sawest, & thys is the interpretacyon. Thou onely hast bene mete to knowe the secrete of the Hyest.

Therfore write all these thynges ꝑ thou hast sene in a boke, and hyde thē, and teach thē the wyse ‖ the people, whose hertes thou knowest maye comprehende and kepe these secretes. But wayte ꝑ here thy selfe yet seuen dayes moo, that it maye be shewed the, whatsoeuer it pleaseth the Hyest to declare vnto the, and with that he went his waye.

And when all the people perceaued, that the seuen dayes were past, and I not come agayne into the cytie, they gathered thē all together from the least vnto ꝑ most, and came vnto me, and sayde: what haue we offended the? & what euell haue we done agaynst the, that thou forsakest vs, and syttest here in thys place? For of all people thou onely art left vs, as a grape of the vyne, and as a candell in a darcke place, & as an hauē & ship preserued from the tēpest. Haue we not els aduersite ynough, but thou must forsake vs Were it not better for vs, that we had bene brent wyth Syon? For we are not better, then they that dyed there: and they wepte wt loude voyce. Thē answered I them & sayd: Be of good comforte O Israell, and be not heuy thou house of Jacob: for ꝑ Hyest hath you in you in remembraūce, and the mighty hath not forgotte you in temptacion. As for me, I haue not forsakē you, nether am I departed from you, but am come into thys place to praye, because of the mysery of Israell: ꝑ I myght seke mercy for the lowe estate of youre Sāctuary. And now go youre waye home euery mā, and after these dayes wyll I come vnto you. So the people went their waye in to the cytye, lyke as I commaūded them: but I remained styll in the felde seuen dayes, as the Angell bad me, and dyd eate onely of the floures of the felde, and had my meate of the herbes in those dayes.

¶ The.xiii. Chapter.

AND it happened after the seuen daies, that I dreamed a dreame by nyght. And beholde, there arose a wynde from the see, that it moued all the floudes therof. And I loked, & beholde, the mā was strong and increased wyth the cloudes of heauen. and whē he turned his countenaūce to consider, all the thinges trēbled that were sene vnder hym: and whē the voyce went out of hys mouth, all they brent that herde hym, lyke as the earth when it feleth the fyre.

After these I sawe, & beholde, there was gathered together a multitude of mē out of nombre from the foure wyndes of the heauen, to fyghte agaynst the man, that came oute from the see. And I loked, and beholde he graued hym selfe a greate mountayne, & flew vp vpon it. But I wolde haue sene the border or place, wherout the hyll was grauen, and I coulde not.

I sawe after these, that all they which came to fyght agaynst him, were sore afrayed and yet durst they fight. Neuertheles, when he sawe the fearsnesse and violēce of the people, he nether lyft vp his hāde ner held swerde, ner eny weapē: but onely (As I sawe) he sent out of hys mouth as it had bene a blast of fyre, and out of hys lyppes the wynde of the flamme: and out of his tonge he cast out sparkes and stormes, & they were all myxte together: the blast of fyre, the wynde of the flammes, and the greate storme, & fell with a ruslhe vpon the people, which was prepared to fyght and brent them vp euerychone: so that of the innumerable multitude there was nothynge sene, but onely dust & smoke. When I saw this, I was afrayed.

W After warde sawe I the same man come downe from the mountayne, and callyng vnto hym another peaceable people: and there came moche people vnto hi: some were glad some were sory, some of them were bounde, so that they were caried and brought forth.

Then was I sych thorow greate feare, and I awaked, and sayde: thou hast shewed thy seruaunt all thy wonders from the beginnyng, and hast counted me worthy, that thou mightest receaue my prayer, shewe me now yet the interpretacion of this dreame. For thus I conclude in my vnderstandyng: Wo vnto thē that shal be left i those dayes ād moch more wo vnto thē that are not left behynde: for they that were not left, were in heuynes.

Now vnderstande I the thinges that are layed vp in the latter dayes which shal happē vnto them, and to those that are not left behinde. Therfore are they come into great parelles, and many necessities, lyke as these dreames declare. Yet is it ealier, ꝑ he which suffreth hurte, come in these, then to passe awaye as a cloude out of ꝑ worlde, & now to se the thynges that shall happen in the last.

Then answered he me, & sayde. The interpretacion of the syght shall I shewe the, and I will open vnto the, the thinge ꝑ thou hast required. For thou hast spoke of them that are left behynde, and thys is the interpretacion. He that taketh awaye the parell in that tyme, hath kept him selfe. They that be fallen into harme, are soch as haue workes and fayth vnto ꝑ Most myghtie. Knowe this therfore, that they which be left behinde are more blessed, thē they that be dead This is the meanynge of the vysyō. Where as thou sawest a man commynge vp from ꝑ depe of the see, the same is he whom God the Hyest hath kepte a greate season, which by his awne selfe shal delyuer his creature, and he shal ordre thē that are left behinde. And where as ꝑ sawest, that out of hys mouth there came a blast of wynde, fyre & storme, and how that he lyft vp nether swerde nor weapen, but that the ruthynge in of hym destroyed the whole multitude that came to fyght agaīst him: it signifieth, that ꝑ dayes come, whā God will delyuer them that are ¶ vpon earth, and in a traunce of mynde shall he come vpon them, that dwell in the earth. And one shall vndertake to fyght agaynst another, one cyte againſt another, one place agaynst another * one people agaynst another, and one realme againſt another. Whē this commeth to passe, thē shall the tokens come, that I shewed the before: and thē shal my sōne be declared, whō thou sawest clime vp as a man. And when all the people heare hys voyce, euery man shall in their awne lande leaue the battayll that they haue one agaynst another, & an innumerable multytude shalbe gathered together, as they that be wyllinge to come, & to ouercome him by fyghting. But he shall stāde vpō the toppe of the mount Syon. Neuertheless Syon shall come, and shalbe shewed, beynge prepared and buylded for all men, lyke as thou sawest the hyll grauē forth without any hādes, *mat.xvi.xiii.

des. But my lonne shal rebuke the people þ are come, for their wickednes, with the tempest, and for theyr euell ymaginacions: and theyr paines wherwith they shalbe punyshed, are lyckened vnto the flamme: and with out any labour, shall he destroye thē, euen by the lawe, which is compared vnto the fyre.

And where as thou sawest, that he gathered another peaceable people vnto him: tho se are þ ten tribes which were caried awaye preſoners out of their awne lande, * in the tyme of Oseas the kyng, whom Salmanasar the kynge of Assyria toke preſoner, and carped them ouer the water, & so came they into another lande.

* iiii. Regū. xvii.a

But they gaue them thys councell, that they shulde leaue the multitude of the heathen, and to go forth into a farther countre, where neuer mankynde dwelt: that they myght there kepe their statutes, which they neuer kepte in theyr awne lāde. And so they entred in at the narow passages of þ water of Euphrates, and God shewed tokens for them, * and held styll the floude tyll they were passed ouer: for thorow þ coūtre there was a greate waye, namely of a yeare and a halfe iourney, for the same regyon is called Asareth. Thē dwelt they there vnto þ latter tyme: and whē they come forth agayne, the Hyest shall holde styl the sprynges of the streame agayne, that they may go thorow, therfore sawest thou þ multitude with peace. And they that be left behynde of thy people, are those that be founde within my border. Now whē he destroyeth the multytude that is gathered together, he shal defēde his people that remayne, and thē shall he shew them greate wonders.

* Exo. xiii.c Iosue.iii.d

Then sayde I: O Lord, Lorde, shewe me this, wherfore haue I sene the mā comming vp from the depe of the see? And he sayd vnto me: Like as thou cāst nether seke out nor knowe these thynges that āre in the depe of the see, euen so mayest thou not se my sonne, or those that be with hym, but i the tyme of the daye. Thys is the interpretacyon of the dreame whych þ sawest, therfore thou onely art here lyghtened: for thou hast forsakē thyne awne lawe, and applyed thy diligence vnto myne, and sought it. * Thy lyfe hast thou ordred in wysdome, & * hast called vnderstandyng thy mother and therfore haue I shewed the, the treasure of the Hyest. After thre dayes I wyll shew the more, & talke with þ at more large, yee heuy and wonderous thynges wyll I declare vnto the.

‡iiii.Re.iii.a. * Pro.viii.a.

Then wēt I forth into the felde, geuyng prayse & thankes greatly vnto God, because of hys wōders which he dyd in tyme, and because he gouerneth the same, and seche as is in tyme, and there I satt thre dayes.

¶ The.xiiii. Chapter.

¶ God appeareth vnto Esdras in the bush, and sheweth hym what he shall do.

VPō the thyrd daye I sat vnder an oke tree, then came there a voyce vnto me out of the bush, & sayde: Esdras, Esdras. And I sayde: here am I Lorde, and stode vp vpon my fete. Then spake he vnto me: * In the vnlyd dyd I appeare vnto Moses, & talked with hym whē my people serued i Egypte, and I sent hym, and led my people out of Egypte, and brought him vpon the mount Syon, where I held hym by me a longe season, and tolde hym my wonderous workes, and shewed hym the secretes of the tymes and the ende, and commaūded hym, saying: These wordes shalt thou declare, & not hyde them. And now I saye vnto the, that thou laye vp in thine herte the dreames that thou hast sene, and þ interpretacyōs whych I haue shewed the: for þ shalt be receaued of all, thou shalt be turned and remayne with my coūcel, and with soch as be lyke the, vntyll the tymes be ended. For þ worlde hath lost hys youth, and the tymes begine to waxe olde. For the tyme is deuided into twelue partes, and ten partes of it are gone all ready, and half of þ tenth parte: yet remayneth there þ which is after the half of the tenth parte.

* Exo.iii.a

Therfore, prepare and ordre thy house, and reforme thy people: comforte soch of them as be i trouble: and tell now of the destrucciō: let go from the mortall thoughtes: cast awaye the burthens of man: put of the weake nature: laye vp in some places the thoughtes that are most heuy vnto the, and haste the to flye from these tymes: for soch euel and wickednesse as thou hast now sene happē, shall they do yet moch worse. * For the weaker that the worlde ād the tyme is, the more shall synne and wickednesse increase in them that dwell vpon earth. For the trueth is fled farre awaye, & lesynge is hard at hande. For now hasteth the vision to come me that thou hast sene.

* malach. i. Johan.

Then answered I before the, and sayde: Beholde Lord, I wyll go as thou hast commaūded me, and reforme the people which are present. But they that shall be borne after warde, who wyll exhorte or rebuke them? Thus the worlde is set in darcknes: & they that dwell therin, are without lyght: for thy lawe is kyndled, because no mā knoweth the thinges that are done of the, or that shalbe done. If I haue founde grace before the, sēde the holy goost into me, and I shall wryte all that hath bene done in the worlde sens the begynnyng, which was written in thy lawe, that mē maye fynde the path, and that they which will lyue in þ latter dayes, maye lyue.

And he

And he answered me, sayinge: God thy waye, gather the people together, and saye vnto them, that they seke þ not for fourtye dayes, but loke thou gather þ many bore trees, & take with the Sarea, Dabria, Selemia, Ecanus and Asiel, these fyue, whych are ready to wryte swyftly, & come hyther, and I shall lyght a candle of vnderstādynge in thyne hert, which shall not be put out, tyll the thynges be perfourmed which thou shalt begynne to wryte. And thē shalt thou declare some thynges openly vnto the perfecte, and some thynges shalt thou shew secretly vnto the wyse. To morow this houre shalt thou begynne to wryte.

C Then wente I forth (as he commaunded me) and gathered all the people together, and sayde: Heare these wordes O Israel, Oure fathers at þ begynnynge were straūgers in Egypte, from whence they were delyuered, & receaued the lawe of lyfe * which they kepte not, which ye also haue transgressed after them. Then was thys lande & the lande of Syon parted amonge you by lott to possesse. But your fathers & ye your selues also haue done vnryghteousnes, and haue not kepte the wayes which the Hyest commaunded you. And for so moch as he is a ryghteous iudge, he toke from you in tyme þ thynge þ he had geuen you. And now are ye here & youre brethren amonge you. Therfore yf so be that ye wyll subdue your awne vnderstandyng, and reforme youre herte, ye shall be kepte alyue, & after death shall ye optayne mercy. For after death shall the iudgemēt come, when we shall lyue agayne: and then shall the names of the ryghteous be manyfest, and the workes of the vngodly shall be declared. Let no man therfore come now vnto me, ner aske eny questyon at me these fourtye dayes.

* Deu.iiii.a. Ezec.iii.a. Apoca.i.b.

D So I toke the fyue men (as he cōmaūded me) and we wente in to the felde, & remayned there. The next daye a voyce called me sayinge: Esdras * open thy mouth, & drynke þ I geue the. Then opened I my mouth, & beholde, he reached me a full cuppe, which was full as it were with water, but the colour of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it and dranke. And when I had dronken it, my hert had vnderstādyng, & wysdome grewe in my brest: for my spryte was kepte in remēbraunce, and my mouth was opened and shut nomore. The Hyest gaue vnderstādynge vnto the fyue men, that they wrote the hye thynges of þ nyght, which they vnderstode not. But in the nyght they dyd eate bred: as for me, I spake in the daye & held not my tonge by nyght. In. xl. dayes, they wrote two hundred and foure bokes.

And it happened when the fourtye dayes were fulfylled, that þ Hyest spake, saying:

The fyrst that thou hast wrytten, speake openly, þ the worthy & vnworthy maye rede it. But kepe the. lxx. last, that thou mayest shew it onely to soch as be wyse amōge thy people. For in them is þ sprynge of vnderstandynge, the fountayne of wysdome, and the streame of knowledge. And I dyd so.

¶ The.xv. Chapter.

¶ The punyshment that euell people shal haue, which God commaundeth Esdras to shew vnto them.

BEholde, speake thou in the eares of my people the wordes of prophecie, which I wyll put in thy mouth, sayeth the Lorde: and cause thē to be wrytten in a letter, for it is the trueth. Feare not the ymaginacyons agaynst the, Let not þ vnfaythfulnes of them trouble the, that speake agaynst the. For all the vnfaythfull shall dye in theyr vnfaythfulnes. Beholde sayeth the Lorde, I wyll brynge plages vpon the worlde, the swerde, honger, death and destruccion, for wyckednes hath the vpper hand in all the earth, and theyr shamefull workes are fulfylled.

Therfore sayeth the Lorde: I wyll holde my tonge nomore vnto theyr wyckednesse, whych they do so vngodly: nether wyll I suffre them in the thynges, that they deale with all so wyckedly. Beholde * þ innocent bloud of the troubled cryeth vnto me, & the soules of the ryghteous complayne contynually: and therfore (sayeth þ Lord) I wyll surely auenge, & receaue vnto me all the innocent bloude from amonge them.

* Apoca.i.b. and.xix.a.

* Beholde, my people, is led as a flock of shepe to be slayne, I wyll not suffre them now to dwell in Egypte, but wyll brynge them out with a myghtye hād & a stretched out arme, & smyte it with plages as afore and wyll destroye all þ lande of it. Egypte shall mourne, and the foundacyōs of it shalbe smytten with the plage and punyshmēt, that God shall brynge vpon it.

* Psal.xlviii. c. Roma.viii.c. i.Cor.xiii.b.

They that tyll the grounde, shall mourne: for theyr sedes shall be destroyed thorow the blastynge and hayle, and an horrible starre. Wo worth the worlde and them that dwell therin, for the swerde and theyr destruccyon draweth nye, and one people shall stande vp to fyght agaynst another, and swerdes in theyr hādes. For men shall be vnstedfast, & some shall do violence vnto other: they shall not regarde theyr kyng and prynces, the wayes of theyr doynges and handelynges in theyr power. A man shall desyre to go into the cytye, and shall not be able. For because of theyr prydе the cytyes shalbe brought in feare, the houses shal shake, and men shalbe afrayed. A man shall haue no pytye vpon hys neyghbour, but one shall pzouoke another vnto battayll to spoyle theyr goodes because of the honger of bzed, and because of the greate trouble.

D Beholde, I gather and call together all the kynges of the earth which are from the vpzyling, from the South, from the East and Lybanus to turne vnto them, & restoze the thynges ꝑ they haue geuen them. Lyke as they do yet thys daye vnto my chosen, so wyll I do also, & recõpense them in theyr bosome. Thus sayeth the Lozd God: my ryght hãd shall not spare the synners, & my swerde shall not ceasse ouer them, that shed the innocẽt bloud vpon earth. The feare is gone out from hys wzath, & hath consumed the foundacyõs of ꝑ earth, & the synners lyke the straw ꝑ is kyndled. Wo wzoth them that synne, & kepe not my cõmaundemẽtes, sayeth the Lozde. I wyll not spare them, Go youre waye ye chyldzen from violence defyle not my Sãctuary: foz the Lozd knoweth all them that synne agaynst hym, & therfoze delyuered he them vnto death and destruccyon: Foz now are the plages come vpon ꝑ wozlde, & ye shall remayne in them. Foz God shall not delyuer you, because ye haue synned agaynst hym.

E Beholde, an hozryble vysyon commeth from the East, where generacyõs of Dzagons shall come out, and ꝑ people of ꝑ Arabes with many charettes, and ꝑ multytude of them shalbe as ꝑ wynde vpon earth, that all they which heare them ragynge in theyr wzath, maye feare and be afrayed, and as the wylde bozes oute of the wod, so shall they go out, and wyth greate power shall they come, and stãde fyghtynge wyth them and shall waste the pozcyon of the lande of the Assyzians.

And then shall the Dzagõs haue the vpper hande, not remẽbzynge theyr byzth, and shall turne aboute swearynge together in greate power, to persecute them. But these shalbe afrayed, & kepe sylẽce at theyr power and shall fle: and one out of the lande of the Assyzians shal besege them, & consume one of them, & in theyr hoost shall be feare and dzede, and stryke amonge theyr kynges.

F Beholde cloudes from ꝑ East, and from the Nozth vnto the South, and they are very hozryble to loke vpon, full of wzath & stozme. They shall smyte one vpon another, & they shall smyte at the greate starre vpon earth and theyr starre, and the bloude shalbe from the swerde vnto the bely, and the smoke of man vnto the Camels lytter: And there shalbe great fearfulnes & tremblyng vpon earth, and they ꝑ se the wzath, shal be afrayed, and a tremblynge shall come vpon them.

And then shall there come greate rayues from the South, & from the Nozth, & parte from the West, and from the stozmy wynde from the East, & shall shut them vp agayne and ꝑ cloude whych he rayled vp in wzath, & the starre to cause feare towarde the East & West wynde, shalbe destroyed: & the great cloudes shalbe lyft vp, & the myghtye cloudes full of wzath, and the starre, that they maye make all the earth afrayed and them that dwell therin, & that they maye poure oute ouer all places an hozryble starre, fyze and hayle, and fyenge swordes, & many waters: that all felbes maye be full, and all ryuers, & they shall bzeake downe the cytyes and walles, mountaynes & hylles, all trees, wood, & the grasse of ꝑ medowes, & all theyr frute. And they shall go sledfast vnto Babylon, and make her afrayed, they shall come to her & besege her: ꝑ starre & all wzath shall they poure out vpon her.

G Then shall the dust & smoke go vp vnto the heauen, and all they that be aboute her, shall bewayle her: & they that remayne vnder her, shall do seruyce vnto them that haue put her in feare. And thou Asia ꝑ comfozteste thy selfe also vpon ꝑ hope of Babylon, and art a wozshyp of her personne: Wo be vnto the thou wzetch, because ꝑ hast made thy selfe lyke vnto her, and hast deckte thy daughters in whozdome, that they myght triumphe & please thy louers, whych haue alwaye delyzed to committe whozdome wt her: thou hast folowed the abhominable cyte in all her wozckes and inuẽcyons.

Therfoze sayeth God: I wyll sende plages vpon ꝑ, wyddowhode, powerte, honger, warres, and pestylence, to waste thy houses with destruccyon, & death, and the glozye of thy power shall be dzyed vp as a floure, when the heate rysyth that is sent ouer the: Thou shalt be syck as a pooze wyfe ꝑ is plaged & beaten of wemen: so that the myghtie and louer shall not be able to receaue the. Wolde I so hate ꝑ sayeth ꝑ Lozd? If thou haddest not alwaye slayne my chosen, exaltinge ꝑ stroke of thy hãdes, and sayde ouer theyr death, when ꝑ wast dzõcken: sett fozth the bewtye of thy countenaunce.

H Therewarde of thy whozdome shalbe recompensed the in thy bosome, therfoze shalt thou receaue rewarde.

Lyke as thou hast done vntomy chosen (sayeth ꝑ Lozde) euen so shall God do vnto the, and shall delyuer ꝑ into the plage. Thy chyldzen shall dye of hõger, and thou shalt fall thozow the swerde. Thy cytyes shalbe bzoken downe, & all thyne shall perish with the swerde in the feld. They that be in the mountaynes shall dye of honger, and eate their awne flesh, & dzincke their awne bloud foz very hõger of bzed and thyrst of water.

Thou

Thou vnhapple shalt come thozow the see, and receaue plages agayne.

In the passage they shall cast downe the slayne cytye, and shall rote out one parte of thy lande, and consume the pozcion of glorye. They shall treade the downe lyke stubble, and they shall be thy fyze, and shall consume the: thy cyties and thy lãde, thy wood and thy frutefull trees shall they burne vp with the fyze. Thy chyldzen shall they cary awaye captyue, and loke what thou hast, they shall spoyle it, and marre the bewtye of thy face.

¶ The. xvi. Chapter.

¶ The Heathen shall be punyshed.

A Wo be vnto the Babylon & Asia, wo be vnto the Egypt and Syria: gyrde youre selues with clothes of sack & hearre, and mourne youre chyldzen, be sozy, foz youre destruccyon is at hand. A swerde is sent vpon you, and who wyll turne it back? A fyze is kyndled amonge you, & who wyll quench it? Plages are sent vnto you, and what is he that wyll dzyue them awaye? Maye eny man dzyue awaye an hongrie lyon in the wod? Oz maye eny man quench the fyze in stubble, whan it hath begonne to burne? Maye one turne agayne the arowe, that is shot of a stzõg archer. The myghtye Lozd sendeth ꝑ plages, & what is he ꝑ wyll dzyue thẽ awaye? The fyze is kyndled and gone fozth in his wzath, & what is he that wyll quench it? He shall cast lyghteninges, and who shall not feare? He shall thonder, & who shall not be afrayed: The Lozd shall thzeaten, & who shall not vtterly be beaten to poulder at his pzesence? The earth quaketh, & the foundacions therof: the see arysyth vp with waues from the depe, and the floudes of it are vnquiete & the fyshes therof also befoze the Lozde, and befoze the glozy of his power. Foz stronge is his ryght hand that holdeth ꝑ bowe, his arowes that he shoteth, are sharpe, and shall not mysse, when they begynne to be shot into the endes of the wozlde.

B Beholde, the plages are sent, & shall not turne agayne, tyll they come vpon earth. The fyze is kyndled, & shall not be put oute tyll it consume ꝑ foundaciõs of ꝑ earth. Lyke as an arowe which is shot of a myghtye archer, returneth not backwarde: euen so the plages ꝑ shall be sent vpon earth, shall not turne agayne. Woismẽ, woismẽ, who will deliuer me in those dayes? The beginninge of sozowes & greate mourninge: the beginninge of darth and greate death, the beginninge of warres, and ꝑ powers shall stand in feare: the beginninge of euels, and they shall tremble euery one. What shall I do in these thinges, when ꝑ plages come? Beholde, hõger & plage, trouble & angupsh are sent, as scourges foz amendement. But foz all these thiges they shall not turne frõ their wyckednesse, ner be all waye myndefull of the scourges.

C Beholde, victayles shalbe so good cheape vpon earth, that they shall thinke them selues to be in good case: and euen then shall myschefe growe vpon earth, warres, darth and great disquietnes. Foz many of them that dwell vpon earth shall perish of hõger, and ꝑ other that escape the honger, shall the swerde destroye: & the deed shalbe cast oute as donge, & there shalbe no man to confozte them. Foz the earth shalbe wasted, and ꝑ cyties shalbe cast downe: there shalbe no man left to tyll the earth & to sowe it. The trees shall geue frute, and who shall plucke them of & gather them? The grapes shall be rype, & who shall treade them? Foz all places shalbe desolate of men, so ꝑ one man shall desyze to se another, oz to heare his voyce. Foz of one whole cytie there shalbe ten left, and two in the felde, which shall hyde them selues in the thycke bulshes, and in ꝑ clyfes of stones: lyke as when there remayne thze oz foure olyues vpon ꝑ olyue tre, oz as whẽ a vineyarde is gathered, there are left some grapes, of them that diligently sought thorow the vineyarde.

D Euen so in those dayes there shalbe thze oz foure left, foz them ꝑ search their houses with the swerde. And the earth shalbe left waste, and ꝑ feldes therof shall ware olde: and her wayes and all her pathes shall growe full of thornes, because no man shall trauayle there thozow. The daughters shall mourne, hauing no bzydegromes: the wemen make lamẽtacyon, hauing no husbandes, their daughters shall mourne, hauing no helpe of their bzydegrome. In the warres shall they be destroyed, and their husbãdes shall perish of hõger. O ye seruaũtes of the Lozde, heare these thynges, and marck them. Beholde, ꝑ wozde of the Lozde, Oz receaue it: beholde the plages dzawnye, & are not slack in tariẽge. Lyke as a trauaylinge woman, which after ꝑ .ix. moneth bzingeth fozth a sonne, when ꝑ houre of the byzth is come, an houre two oz thze a foze that the paynes come vpon her body, and when the chylde commeth to the byzth, they tary not the twynckling of an eye. Euen so shall not the plages be slack to come vpon earth, and the wozlde shall mourne, and sozowes shall come vpon it on euery syde.

E O my people, heare my wozde, make you redy to the battayll: and in all euell be euen as pylgrems vpon earth. * He that selleth, let hym be as he that flyeth his waye: and he that byeth as one that will lese. Who so occupieth marchaundies, as he that wynneth not: & he that buyldeth, as he that shall not dwell therin: he ỹ soweth, as one that shall not reape: he ỹ twysteth the vyneyarde, as he ỹ shall not gather the grapes: they that mary, as they ỹ shall get no chyldren: and they that mary not: as the wyddowes: and therfore * they that labour, labour in vayne. For straungers shal reape theyr frutes, & spoyle their goodes, ouerthrowe their houses, & take their chyldren captyue, for in captyuyte & honger shall they get chyldren. And they that occupie theyr marchaundies with robbery, how longe decke they theyr cyties, theyr houses, theyr possessiõs, & persones: ỹ more wyll I punysh thẽ for theyr synnes, sayeth the Lord. Lyke as an whore enuyeth an honest woman, so shall ryghteousnes hate inyquyte, when she decketh her selfe, and shall accuse her to her face, when he cõmeth that defendeth, which shall make inquisycyon for all synne vpon earth. And therfore be not ye lyke therunto, ner to the worckes therof: for or euer it be lõge, iniquite shalbe taken awaye out of the earth, and ryghteousnes shall raygne amonge you.

* Psal. cxviii. a. Prou. x. c. Eccle. vi. b.

I Let not the synner saye, that he hath not synned: for coles of fyre shall burne vpõ his head, which sayeth before ỹ Lord God and his glory: I haue not synned. Beholde, the Lord knoweth all ỹ worckes of men, theyr ymaginacyons, theyr thoughtes and theyr hertes. * For he spake but ỹ worde: lett the earth be made, and it was made: lett ỹ heauen be made, and it was made. In his worde were the starres made, & he knoweth the nõbre of them. He searcheth the grounde of the depe, and the treasures therof: he hath measured the see, and what it conteyneth. He hath shut ỹ see in ỹ myddest of ỹ waters, & with his worde hath he hanged the earth vpon ỹ waters. He spredeth out the heauen lyke a vawte, vpon ỹ waters hath he founded it. In ỹ deserte & dreye wyldernes hath he made sprynges of water, and poles vpon the toppe of ỹ mountaynes, that ỹ floudes myght poure downe from the stony rockes to water the earth. He made man, & put his herte in the myddest of the body, and gaue hym breth, lyfe and vnderstãdyng, yee and the spirite of ỹ Almyghtye God, which made all thynges, and hath searched ỹ ground of all the secretes of the earth.

* Gene. i. a.

He knoweth youre ymaginacyons & in- G uencyõs, and what ye thynke when ye synne, and wolde hyde youre synnes. Therfore hath the Lorde searched and sought out all your worckes, & he shall bewraye you all. And when your synnes are brought forth, ye shalbe ashamed before mẽ, & youre awne synnes shalbe youre accusers in that daye. What wyll ye do? Or how wyll yee hyde your synnes before God and his Aungels? Beholde, God him selfe is the iudge, feare him, leaue of from youre synnes, and forget youre vnryghteousnesses, & medle nomore with thẽ: so shall God leade you forth, and delyuer you from all trouble For beholde, the heate of a great multytude is kyndled ouer you, & they shall take awaye certayne of you, & fede ỹ vyle with Idols: & they that consent vnto them, shalbe had in dirysyon laughed to scorne, & troden vnder fote.

For vnto the places there shalbe a place, H and in the next cyties a greate insurrecyon vpon those that feare ỹ Lorde. They shall be lyke mad men, they shall spare no man: they shall spoyle and waste soch as feare the Lord, theyr goodes shall they take frõ thẽ, and shutte them out of theyr houses. Then shall it be knowne who are my cholẽ, & they shalbe tryed as the golde in the fyre. Heare O ye my beloued, sayth ỹ Lorde: beholde, the dayes of trouble are at hãde, but I wyll deliuer you from ỹ same. Be not ye afrayed dispayre not, for God is youre captayne.

Whoso kepeth my commaundementes and preceptes (sayeth the Lorde God) let not your synnes weye you downe, and lett not youre vnrighteousnesse be lyft vp. Wo be vnto them that are subdued vnto theyr synnes, and tangled in theyr wyckednesse: lyke as a felde is hedged in with busshes, and the path therof couered with thornes, ỹ no man maye trauayle thorow: and so is he taken, and cast in the fyre, and brent.

The ende of the .iiii. boke of Esdras.

The boke of Tobias.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

¶ Tobias beynge taken prysoner, forsaketh not the lawe of truthe. The mercy and charyte of Tobias and the maners of hym in hys youthe. He taketh Hannah to wyfe, by whome he hath a sonne named Tobias. He succoureth Gabell with money. He is fayne to flye, but after the deeth of Sennacherib they retourne agayne.

A TObias was of the tribe and cy- A tie of Nephtali, which lyeth in ỹ hye coũtrees of Galile aboue Naason the waye towarde the West, haynge ỹ cytie of Nephet vpon the left syde.

Though he was taken presonner in the dayes of Salmanasar kyng of ỹ Assyrias neuertheles beynge in captyuite, he forsoke not the waye of trueth: In so moch ỹ what soeuer he myght get, he parted it dayly wt his felow presoners & brethren, that were of his kynred. And though he were yonger then all in ỹ tribe of Nephtali, yet dyd not he behaue hym selfe chyldyshly in hys worckes. And when all the other went to the golden calues, whych Jeroboam the kynge of Israel had made, he hym selfe alone fled all theyr companies, and gat him to Jerusalem vnto the temple of the Lorde, and there worshypped the Lord God of Israel, faythfully offerynge of all his fyrst frutes & tythes, so that in ỹ thyrde peare he mynystred all the thytes vnto the straungers and conuertes. These and soch lyke thynges dyd he obserue accordinge to ỹ lawe of God, when he was yet but ponge.

B But when he was a man, he toke oute of B his awne tribe a wyfe called Anna, and of her he begat a sonne, whom he called after his awne name, and taught hym from hys youth vp, to feare God, & to refrayne from all synne.

Now when he with hys wyfe, hys sonne and with all his kynred was come in captiuite vnto the cytie of Niniue, what tyme as they all dyd eate of the meates of the heathen, he kepte his soule, and was neuer defyled in theyr meates. And for so moch as he was myndefull of the Lorde in all his hert, God gaue hym fauoure in the syght of Salmanasar ỹ kynge, which gaue hym power to go where he wolde, and so had he lyberte to do what soeuer hym lyst.

C So wente Tobias vnto all them ỹ were C in presõ, and conforted them, & gaue them wholsome exortacyõs. And when he came to Rages a cytie of the Medes, hauyng ten talentes of syluer (of the thynges where wt ỹ kyng had honoured hym) & sawe among a greate company of people of hys kynred, one Gabelus (which was of hys awne tribe) beyng in necessite, he gaue hym the sayd weyght of syluer vnder an hãd wrytynge.

After a longe season when Salmanasar the kynge was deed, and Sennacherib hys sonne reygned in his steade, which hated the chyldren of Israel. Tobias wẽt daylie thorow out all his kynred, and cõforted them, & gaue of hys goodes to euery one of them, as moch as he myght: he fed the hõgrie, clothed the naked, and buried ỹ deed and slayne, and that diligently.

And when Sennacherib the kynge came D
agayne and fled out of Jewry (what tyme as God punyshed hym for hys blasphemy) and in hys wrath slew many of the chyldren of Israel. Tobias buried their bodies. But when it was tolde the kyng, he cõmaunded to slaye him, & toke awaye all his goodes. Neuertheles, Tobias with his sonne and wt his wyfe fled his waye, and was hyd naked, for there were many that loued hym. But after .xlv. dayes ỹ kynge was slayne of his awne sonnes. Then came Tobias agayne to his house, and all his goodes were restored vnto hym.

¶ The .ii. Chapter.

¶ Tobias hydeth soche of his frendes as feare God, to a banquet or feast. He is reproued of his frendes. He feareth God moare then the kynge. He becommeth blynde by the permyssyon and sufferaunce of God. Hys kynsfolckes mocke hym.

AFter these thynges vpon a solempne A daye of ỹ Lorde Tobias made a good feast in his house, and sayde vnto his sonne: Goo thy waye & bryng hyther some of oure tribe, soch as feare god, ỹ they maye make mery with vs. And when he was gone, he came agayne, & tolde his father that one of ỹ chyldren of Israel laye slayne vpõ the strete. And immediatly he leapte from his table, left the feast, came fastynge to the deed coarse, toke hym and bare him preuely in to his house, that when the Sunne was downe, he myght safely burye hym. And when he had hyd the coarse, he dyd eate hys meate with mourninge & feare, remẽbrynge the wordes, that the Lorde sayeth by ỹ prophet Amos: youre hye feastes shalbe turned to sorowe and heupnes.

But when ỹ Sunne was downe, he wẽt B his waye & buried hym. Then all his neyghbours reproued hym, saying: It is not lõge, sens it was cõmaunded to slaye the because of this matter, and hast scarce escaped the daunger of death, and buryest thou the deed agayne? Neuertheles, Tobias fearige God moare then ỹ kyng, toke the bodyes of the slayne, and hyd them in his house, & buryed them at mydnyght.

It happened vpon a daye, that he had bu- C ryed ỹ deed, and was wery, cam home, and layed hym downe by the wall & slepte. And whyle he was aslepe, there fell downe vpon hys eyes warme donge out of the swalowes nest, so that he was blynde. This temptacyon dyd God suffre to happen vnto hym, that they which came after, myght haue an example of his pacience, lyke as of holy Job. For in so moch as he euer feared God from his youth vp, & kepte his cõmaundemẽtes, he grudged not agaynst God, that ꝑ plage of blyndnes chaũsed vnto hym, but remayned stedfast in the feare of God, and thãked God all the dayes of his lyfe.

D For lyke as blessed Job was had in derisyon of kynges, euen so was he laughed to scorne of his elders and kynsfolkes, which sayde vnto hym: where is thy hope, for the which ꝑ hast done allmes & buryed ꝑ dede? But Tobias rebuked them, & spake: Saye not so, for we are the chyldren of holy men, and loke for the lyfe, which God shall geue vnto them, ꝑ neuer turne theyr beleue from him. Anna his wyfe wente daylye to the weuinge worcke: & loke what lyuynge she coulde get with the laboure of her handes, she brought it. And it happened ꝑ she toke a kyd, and brought it home.

And when her husbande herde it crye, he sayd: loke ꝑ it be not stollen, restore it agayne to the owners: for it is not lawfull for vs to eate or to touch eny thynge of theft. The was hys wyfe angrie, & sayde: Now is thy hope become vayne openly, and thy allmes dedes are manifest. With these & soch lyke wordes dyd she cast him in the tethe.

CThe.iii.Chapter.

CThe prayer of Tobias. Sara the daughter of Raguell is claundred of her fathers seruaũte. The prayer and fastynge of Sara. And also the innocency and chastytie of her. The prayers of Tobias and of Sara are heard.

A When Tobias toke it heuely, and with teares beganne to make hys prayer sayinge: O Lorde thou art ryghteous, and all thy iudgementes are true, yee all thy wayes are mercy, faythfulnes and iudgement. And now O Lorde be myndefull of me, and take no vengeaunce of my synnes, nether remembre my mysdedes, nether the mysdedes of my elders. For we haue not bene obedient vnto thy commaundemẽtes, therfore are we spoyled, brought into captyuyte, into death, into derysyon and shame vnto all nacyõs, among whom thou hast scatred vs. And now O Lord, thy iudgementes are great, for we haue not done accordynge to thy cõmaundemẽtes, nether haue we walcked innocẽtly before the. And now O Lorde, deale with me accordinge to thy wyll, and commaunde my spyrete to be receaued in peace, for more expediẽt were it for me to dye, then to lyue.

At ꝑ same tyme it happened, that Sara the daughter of Raguel at Rages a cytie of the Medes was sclaũdred of one of her fathers handmaydes, namely, that she shulde haue had seuen husbandes, which as soone as they were gone in vnto her, were slayne of the deuell called Asmodeus. Therfore, when she reproued ꝑ mayden for her faute, she answerde her, sayẽge: God lett vs neuer se sonne ner daughter of ꝑ more vpon earth thoũ kyller of thy husbandes. Wylt ꝑ slaye me also, as ꝑ hast slayne seuen men? At this voyce wente Sara into an hye chamber of her house, and thre dayes & thre nyghtes she nether ate ner dranke, but cõtinued i prayer and besought God with teares, ꝑ he wolde delyuer her from thys rebuke.

Upon ꝑ thyrd daye it chaunced, ꝑ when C she had made an ende of prayer, she praysed ꝑ Lord sayẽg: Blessed be thy name O God of oure fathers, which when ꝑ art wroth, shewest mercy, & in tyme of trouble ꝑ forgeuest ꝑ synnes of them, ꝑ call vpon the. Unto the O Lorde turne I my face, vnto the lyft I vp myne eyes. I beseche ꝑ O Lorde, lose me out of the bondes of thys rebuke, or els take me vtterly awaye from of the earth. Thou knowest Lorde, ꝑ I neuer had desyre vnto man, and that I haue kepte my soule cleane frõ all vncleuly lust. I haue not kepte cõpany with those ꝑ passe theyr tyme in sporte, nether haue I made my self partaker wt them ꝑ walcke in lyghte behauour. Neuertheles an husbãd haue I consented to take, not for my pleasure, but in thy feare.

Now peraduẽture ether I haue bene vnwoorthy of them, or els were they vnmete for me, for ꝑ happly hast kepte me to another husband. For why? thy councell is not in ꝑ power of man. But whosoeuer loueth the and serueth the a ryght, is sure of thys, that yf hys lyfe be tempted & proued, it stãdeth in ꝑ trieng, and yf he endure in pacyẽce he shall haue a rewarde, and be hylye crowned: and yf he be in trouble, that God (no doute) shall delyuer hym: and yf hys lyfe be in chastenynge, ꝑ he shall haue leaue to come vnto thy mercy.

D For thou hast no pleasure in oure dãpnacyon: and why? after a stormе thou makest the wether fayre & styll: after weppyng & heuynes thou geuest greate ioye. Thy name O God of Israel, be praysed for euer. At ꝑ same tyme were both theyr prayers heard in the syght of ꝑ magesty of ꝑ Hyest God. And Raphael ꝑ holy Aungell of the Lord was sent to helpe thẽ both, whose prayers came at one tyme together before God.

CThe.iiii.Chapter.

CTobias thynckynge to dye geueth a godly exhortacyon and monycyon to hys sonne.

A So when Tobias thought his prayer to be herde, that he myght dye, he called vnto hym his sonne Tobias and sayde vnto him: Myn sonne, heare the wordes of my mouth, and laye them in thyne herte as a foundacion. When God taketh awaye my soule, burye ꝑ my body, & holde thy mother in honoure all the dayes of her lyfe. For ꝑ oughtest to remembre, what and how greate parels she suffred for ꝑ in her wombe. And when she also hath fulfylled ꝑ tyme of her lyfe, bury her besyde me. Haue God in thy thought all the dayes of thy lyfe, & beware, lest at eny tyme thou consent vnto synne, & lest ꝑ lett slyppe the cõmaundementes of the Lord oure God.

Geue allmes of thy goodes, & turne neuer thy face from the poore: and so shall it come to passe, that the face of the Lorde shall not be turned awaye frõ the. Be mercyfull after thy power. If thou hast moch, geue plenteously: yf thou hast lytle, do thy diligence, B gladly to geue of ꝑ lytle. For so gatherest thou thy selfe a good rewarde in the daye of necessitie. For mercy delyuereth frõ all synne and from death, and suffreth not the soule to come in darckenes. A greate confort is mercy before the hye God, vnto all them that shew it.

My sonne, kepe the well from all whordome, and (besyde thy wyfe) se that no faute be knowne of the. Let neuer pryde haue rule in thy mynde ner in thy worde, for in pryde beganne all destruccyon.

Whosoeuer worketh eny thynge for the, immediatly geue hym his hyre, & loke that thy hyred seruauntes wagies remayne not by the ouer nyght. Loke that thou neuer do vnto another man, the thynge ꝑ thou woldest not another man shulde do vnto ꝑ. Eate thy bred with the hongrie and poore, and C couer the naked with thy clothes. Set thy bred and wyne vpon ꝑ buriall of the ryghteous, and do not thou eate & dryncke therof with the synners. Aske euer councell at the wyse.

Be allwaye thanckfull vnto God, and beseche hym, that he wyll ordre thy wayes, and that what soeuer thou deuysest or takest in hãde, it maye remayne in him. I certyfye the also my sonne, that (when ꝑ wast yet, but a babe) I delyuered ten talẽtes of syluer vnto Gabelus, at Rages a cytie of ꝑ Medes, & his hand wryttinge haue I by me. And therfore seke some meanes, how thou mayest come by hym, and receaue of hym the sayde weyght of syluer, & geue hym his hond wrytynge agayne.

My sonne, be not afrayed: trueth it is, we lende here a poore lyfe: but greate good shall we haue, yf we feare God, and departe from all synne, and do well.

CThe.v.Chapter.

CThe obedience of ponge Tobias to his father, which is sent in to Rages. An Aungell accõpanieth with hym in hys iourney.

Then answered Tobias his father, A and sayde: father, all that thou hast commaunded me, wyl I do, and that diligẽtly. But how I shall require this money I can not tell. Nether doth he know me, ner I hym. What token shall I geue hym? And as for the waye thyther, I neuer knewe it. Then hys father answered hym, and sayde: I haue hys hãd wrytynge by me which when thou shewest hym, immediatly he shall paye the. But goo thy waye nowe, and get ꝑ some faythfull man to goo with the for an hyre, that thou mayest receaue the money, whyle I am yet lyuynge. Then went Tobias out, & vpon the strete he founde a fayre põge man standynge, gyrded vp, and as it were one ready to take hys iourney. And he knewe not that it was an angell of God, but saluted hym, and sayde: From whence art thou, ꝑ good põge man? He answered: Of the chyldrem of Israel.

And Tobias sayd vnto hym: knowest ꝑ B the waye, that ledeth vnto ꝑ countre of the Medes? He answered: I knowe it well, and all those stretes haue I gone oft tymes, and haue lodged wt oure brother Gabelus, that dwelleth in Rages a cytie of the Medes, which lyeth vpon the moũte Egbathanis. Tobias sayd vnto him: I praye ꝑ, tary for me, tyll I haue tolde my father these thynges. Then wẽte Tobias in, and tolde his father all. At ꝑ which his father marueled, ãd prayed, that he wolde come in vnto him.

Now when the aungell came in, he saluted him, and sayd: Joye be with the for euermore. And olde Tobias sayd: what ioye can I haue that syt here in darcknes, and se not the lyght of heauen? The ponge man sayde vnto him: Be of good cheare, God shall helpe the shortly. And Tobias sayd vnto him: C Canst thou brynge my sonne to Gabelus, vnto ꝑ cytie of Rages in Medea? And whẽ thou cõmest agayne, I shall paye ꝑ thy hyre. And the Aungel sayd vnto him: I shall leade thy sonne, and brynge him to ꝑ agayne. Then Tobias answered him: tell me I praye the, of what house, or of what tribe art thou? The Aũgell Raphaell sayde vnto hym: Askest thou after the kynred of an hyrelynge, or seekest ꝑ a gyde for thy sonne to go with him? But that I make ꝑ not carefull, I am Azarias the sonne of great Hananias. And Tobias answered: thou art come of a greate kynred: but I praye ꝑ, be not displeased, that I desyred to know thy kynred. The Aungell sayd vnto him: thy sonne shall I leade forth safely, and brynge him whole to the agayne.

D Then answered Tobias, and sayde: well, go on youre waye, & God be in youre iourney, and his Angell beare you cõpany. So when they had prepared all thynges, that they wolde take with them in theyr iourney: Tobias bad his father & his mother fare well, and they went on their waye both together. Now when they were gone: his mother beganne to wepe, & sayde: The staff of oure age hast thou taken awaye and sent hym from vs.

Wolde God that money had neuer bene, for the which thou hast sent hym awaye. If we had bene content with oure powerte, thys had bene greate ryches vnto vs, that we sawe oure sonne here. Then sayde Tobias vnto her: wepe not, oure sonne shall come to vs agayne safe and sounde, and thyne eyes shall se him. For I trust, that the good Angell of God shall beare hym company, & ordre well all the thynges that he doth: so that he shall come to vs agayne with ioye. At these wordes hys mother left of frõ weppynge, and helde her tonge.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

¶ young Tobias is delyuered from the fysche, by the Aungell. The Aungell exhorteth Tobias to take Sara to hys wyfe.

A SO Tobias wẽte on hys waye, and a dogge folowed hym, and ỹ fyrst nyght they abode by the water of Tygris. Then wẽt he out to wash his fete, & beholde, there came forth an horrible fysh to deuoure hym. Of whome Tobias was afrayed, and cryed with a loude voyce, sayenge: Lorde, he cõmeth vpon me. And ỹ Aungell sayde vnto hym: Take hym by ỹ gyll, and drawe him to the. And he dyd so, and drew him vpon the lande. And the fysh beganne to leape at his fete.

Then sayde the Aungell vnto him: take out the bowcles of thys fysh, and as for the herte, the gall & the leuer, kepe them by the. B For these thynges are necessary & good for medycyne. Tobias dyd so, & rosted the fysh, and they toke him with them in theyr iourney: ỹ reslydue they salted, as moch as was sufficient for them, tyll they came to Rages a cytie of the Medes. Then Tobias asked the Aungell, & sayde vnto him: I praye ỹ brother Azaria, tell me, wher to are these thynges good of ỹ fysh ỹ thou hast bydden me kepe?

The Aungell answered hym and sayde: If thou layest a pece of the hert vpon ỹ coales, the smoke therof dryueth awaye all maner of euell spretes, whether it be frõ man or from woman, so that from thence forth the same shall come nomore vnto thẽ. The gall is good to anoynte or to stryke ỹ eyes wythall, where as there is eny blemyth in them, so that they shalbe whole.

C And Tobias sayd vnto him: where wylt thou ỹ we remayne? The Aungell answered & sayd: here is a nye kynsman of thyne, one Raguell by name, which hath a daughter called Sara, and hath nether sonne ner daughter but her. All his good belongeth vnto the, & thou must mary her, & therfore desyre her of her father, & he shall geue her ỹ to wyfe. Then answered Tobias & sayde: As I vnderstãde, she hath bene maryed vnto seuen husbandes, & they all are deed; and I haue herde saye, that ỹ deuell slewe them. I am afrayed therfore, lest soch thinges happen vnto me also: which yf it came to passe (seynge I am the onely sonne of my father & my mother) I shulde bringe thẽ in theyr age with sorowe to theyr graues.

D Then sayde the Aungell Raphael vnto him: Heare me, & I wyll tell ỹ what they be, of whom the deuell hath power. Namely, they ỹ receaue marpage of soch a fashion, ỹ they shut God out frõ them & from theyr hert, & geue them selues to theyr awne lust, euen as it were an horse & Mule, which haue no vnderstandinge: vpon soch hath ỹ deuell power. But when ỹ takest her, & art come in to the chãber, withholde thy selfe from her thre dayes, and geue thy dilygẽce vnto nothynge but vnto prayer with her.

And in ỹ fyrst nyght, roste ỹ leuer of the fysh, and the deuell shalbe dryuen awaye. The seconde nyght shalt ỹ be receaued into the company of the holy patriarkes. The thyrde nyght shalt thou opteyne ỹ blessyng of God so that whole chyldren shalbe borne of you. After the thyrde nyght take ỹ mayden in the feare of God, and more for the desyre of chyldren, then for eny fleshly lust: ỹ in the sede of Abraham thou mayest optayne the blessyng in chyldren.

¶ The. vii. Chapter.

¶ young Tobias and the Aungell come to the house of Raguell. He requireth Raguels daughter to wyfe and obtayneth her.

A THen wẽte they ito Raguell, which receaued thẽ ioyfully. And when Raguel loked vpõ Tobias, he sayde vnto Anna his wyfe: How lyke is this younge man vnto my systers sonne? And when he had spoken this, he sayde: whence be ye good brethren? They sayd: Of the trybe of Nephthaly, out of ỹ captyuitie of Nynyue. Then sayde Raguel vnto them: knowe ye my brother Tobias? They sayde: yee, we knowe hym well. And when he had spoken moch good of hym, the Aungell sayde vnto Raguell: Tobias of whom thou askest, is thys young mans father. Then Raguel bowed hym selfe downe, and wepte, toke hym about the neck, and kyssed hym, and sayde: Gods blessynge haue thou my sonne, for thou arte the sonne of a good good verteous man. And Anna his wyfe & Sara his daughter wepte also.

B Now whẽ they had talked together, Raguell bad kyll a wether, ād to make a feast. And when he prayed them to syt downe to dynner, Tobias sayd: I wyll nether eate ner drynke here thys daye, excepte thou fyrst graũte me my peticion, & promise me to gẽ us thy daughter Sara. Whẽ Raguel herde this he was astonnyed, for he knewe, what had happened vnto the other seuen mẽ, that wente in vnto her: and he beganne to feare, that it shuld chaunce vnto hym also in lyke maner.

And whyle he stode so in doute, and gaue the ponge man no answere, the aungel saide vnto him: Feare not to geue him thy daughter, for vnto this man that feareth God, belõgeth thy daughter to wife, therfore might none other haue her.

C Then sayde Raguell: I doute not, but God hath accepted my prayers and tearcs in his sight: and I trust he caused you to come vnto me for ỹ same intent, ỹ this daughter of myne myght be maryed in her awne kynred, accordynge to the lawe of Moses. And now dowte thou not, but I wyll geue her vnto the: So he toke the ryght hande of hys daughter, and gaue her into the ryght hand of Tobias, and sayde: The God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob be with you, ioyne you together, and fulfyll hys blessyng in you. And they toke a letter, and made a wryting of the mariage. And thẽ made they mery, ād prayed God. And Raguell called Anna hys wyfe vnto hym, and bad her prepare another chamber, and thither he brought Sara his daughter, and she wepte. Then sayde he vnto her: Be of good cheare my daughter, ỹ Lorde of heauen geue the ioye, for the heuines that thou hast suffred.

¶ The. viii. Chapter.

¶ The Angell byndeth the deuell. Tobias exhorteth hys wyfe to prayer, and they praye thre dayes before they lye together.

A NOw after that they had supped they brought the ponge mã into her. Thẽ thought Tobias vpon the wordes of the aungell, and toke out of his bagge a pece of the leuer of the fysh, and layed it vpõ the hote coales. So the aungell Raphaell toke holde of the deuell, ād sent hym awaye and bounde hym in the wyldernes of the hyer Egypte. Then spake Tobias vnto the virgyn, and sayde: Up Sara, let vs make oure prayer vnto God to daye, to morow, ād ouermorow: for these thre nyghtes wyl we reconcyle our selues wyth God: and whan the thyrde holy night is past, we shall ioyne together in the dutye of marriage. For we are the chyldren of holy men, and we maye not come together as the heathen that knowe not God.

Then stode they vp both together, and B besought God earnestly, that he wolde preserue them. And Tobias sayde: O Lorde God of our fathers, praysed be thou of heauen and earth, of the see, welles ād floudes, ād of all thy creatures that be therin. Thou madest Adam of the * moulde of the earth, *Gene. ii. ād gauest him Eua for an helper. And now Lord thou knowest that it is not because of voluptuousnes, ỹ I take this syster of mine to wyfe, but only for the loue of chyldren, in whõ thy name be blessed for euer. And Sara sayd: haue mercy vpon vs (O Lorde) haue mercy vpon vs, and let vs both come whole and sounde together to a good age.

And about the cock crowynge, it happe- C ned, that Raguell called his seruauntes, ād they wente with him, to make a graue. For he sayde: it is chaunced now vnto hym peraduenture, as it did vnto the other seuẽ mẽ, that went in vnto her. Now when they had made ỹ graue, Raguel came agayne to hys wyfe, and sayde vnto her: sende one of thy maydens, to loke yf he be deed, that I maye burye him afore it be lyght daye. So she sent a mayden to se, which when she came into ỹ chamber, founde them whole and sounde, slepyng together. And so she came againe, and brought good tydinges. Then Raguel and Anna hys wyfe praysed the Lord and sayd: Praysed be ỹ, O Lorde God of Israell, for it is not happened vnto vs, as we thought. For thou hast dealt mercyfully wyth vs, D and put awaye frõ vs the enemye that persecuted vs, and hast shewed mercy vnto põder two beloued. O Lorde, cause thẽ to magnifye the more perfectly, ād to offre the sacrifyce of thy prayse, ād of theyr helth: that all people maye knowe, that thou only art God in all the earth.

And immediatly Raguell commaunded hys seruauntes, to fyll the graue, that they had made, wyth earth, afore it was lyght, and bad his wyfe prepare a feast, ād to make readye all thynges that were necessary for meate, to soche as went by the waye. He caused two fat kyne also, & foure wethers to be slayne, and meates to be prepared for all his neyghboures and frendes. And Raguel charged Tobias, to remayne with him two wekes. As for al the good that he had he gaue Tobias the halfe of it, ād made this wrytynge, that the halfe which remayned, shuld fall vnto Tobias after theyr death.

¶ The. ix. Chapter.

¶ The Aungell goeth to Gabelus, at the desyre of Tobias: which deliuereth the letter, and receaueth the money.

A When Tobias called vnto hym ỹ Aungell, whom he thought to haue bene a man, and sayde vnto hym: Brother Azarias, I praye the herken vnto my wordes: yf I shulde geue my selfe to be thy seruaunt, I shall not deserue thy prouydence. Neuertheless I beseche the, that thou wylt take the beastes and the seruauntes, and go vnto Gabelus in rages the cyte of Medes, and delyuer him his hand wrytinge, and receaue the money of hym, and praye hym to come to my marrage. For ỹ knowest thy
B selfe, that my father doth nombre the dayes: and yf I tary one daye to long, he wylbe sory in his mind. Now seist thou how earnestly Raguel hath requyred me, so that I cannot saye hym nay.

Then toke Raphaell foure of Raguels seruauntes, and two Camels, and wēte vnto Rages the cyte of the Medes: and when he had foūde Gabelus, he gaue him his hād wrytyng, & receaued all the money. He tolde
C him also of Tobias the sonne of Tobi, how all thynges had happened, and caused hym to come wt hym to the mariage. Now when he came into the house of Raguel, he founde Tobias syttyng at the table: and he leaped vp, and they kyssed one another, and Gabelus wepte, and prayed God, and sayde: the blessyng of the God of Israel haue thou, for thou art the sonne of a ryght vertuous and D iust man, and of one that feareth God, and geueth great almes. And blessyng haue thy wyfe, and your elders, that ye maye se your chyldren and youre chylders children, vnto the thyrde and fourth generacion, and your sede be blessed of the God of Israell, whych reygneth worlde without ende. And when they all had sayd Amē, they went to ỹ feast, but with the feare of the Lord held they the feast of the mariage.

¶The.x.Chapter.

¶Tobias & his wyfe are sadde for the tarryaunce of theis sonne. Raguell sendeth agayne Tobias wyth his wyfe.

A NOw whyle yonge Tobias made longe tarryeng, by reason of ỹ mariage, hys father was full of care and heupnes, and thought: what shuld be the cause, that my sonne tarryeth so long? Or why shuld he be kepte so long there? Peraduenture Gabelus is deed, and no man wyl geue hym the money. Thus begāne he to be very sorowfull, he and Anna his wyfe with hym, and beganne to wepe both
B together, because theyr sonne was not come agayne vnto them at the daye appoynted. As for hys mother, she wepte wyth discomfortable teares, ād sayd: Wo is me, my sonne: Oh what ayled vs to sende the awaye into a straūge coūtre, ỹ light of our eyes, thou staff of oure age, thou comforte of oure lyfe, thou hope of our generacion? Seyng all the thynges ỹ we haue are only in the, we shuld not haue sent the awaye from vs.

Then Tobias comforted her, and sayde: holde thy tonge, and be not discomforted, our sonne is whole and sounde: the man that we sent hym wythall, is faythfull ynough. Neuertheless, she might in no wyse be comforted: but daylye went out, loked aboute, and went about all the stretes, wherby she thought he shulde come agayne: that (yf it were possible) she myght se hym commynge a farre of.

But Raguell sayde vnto hys sonne in C lawe: O tary here, and I shall sende a messaunger vnto thy father Tobias, to tel him that thou art in good health. Tobias saide vnto him: I am sure, that my father ād my mother counte euery daye, and that theyr hertes are sory.

So when Raguel prayed Tobias with many wordes, and wolde in no wyse heare hym, he delyuered Sara vnto hym, and the halfe part of all his good: in seruauntes and handmaydens, in shepe, in Camels, and in kyne and moch money, & so sent him awaye from hym with peace and ioye, and sayde: The holy aungell of the Lorde be with you D in youre iourney, and brynge you forth safe and sounde, that ye maye fynde all thinges in good case wyth your elders, & that myne eyes maye se your chyldren afore I dye. So the elders embraced theyr daughter, kyssed her, ād let her go, exhortinge her to honoure her father and mother in lawe, to loue her husbande, to rule well her housholde, to kepe her house in good ordre, and to shewe her selfe faulteles.

¶The.xi.Chapter.

¶Tyonge Tobias leuyng hys wyfe and housholde in the myddle waye, commeth before with the Aungell. The dreame of his mother lokyng after her sonne. He is joyfully receaued of hys father and mother. Sara cometh seuen dayes after.

A SO they now were going home warde A agayne, vpon the. xi. daye they came to Charra, whyche lyeth in the halfe waye towarde Niniue. And the Aungell sayd: Brother Tobias, thou knowest how thou hast left thy father: therfore yf it please the, we two wyll go before, and let the housholde with thy wyfe and the catel come soft and fayrly after vs. And when Tobias was content that they shuld go before, Raphael sayde vnto hym: Take of the gall of the fysh with the, for it shalbe necessary. So B Tobias toke of the gall, ād they went their waye. But Anna the mother of Tobias sat dayly by the waye syde vpon the toppe of an hyll, from whence she myght se farre aboute her. And whyle she was waytynge there there for his commyng, she loked a farre of: and anone she perceaued her sonne cōmyng, and ranne and tolde her husbande, sayinge: Behold, thy sonne commeth. And Raphael sayde vnto Tobias: As soone as thou commest into the house, immediatly worshippe the Lorde thy God, and geue thankes vnto hym: then go to thy father, and kysse hym: & stryke his eyes ouer with the gal of the fysh that thou hast brought with ỹ. For be sure, that his eyes shal straycht waye be opened, and thy father shall se the lyght of heauē, & shal reioyse at the sight of ỹ. Thē the dogge that had ben with thē in theyr iourney, ranne before, and came as a messenger, & wagged with his tayle for gladnesse.

So the blynde father arose, and beganne C to runne, and stombled with hys fete, & gaue a seruaunt hys hande, ranne to mete hys sonne, receaued hym, and kyssed him, he and his wyfe, ād they beganne to wepe for ioye.

Now when they had worshypped & thāked God, they satt downe. Then toke Tobias of the fysshes gall, and anoynted his fathers eyes: and tarryed half an houre, & then beganne the blemysh to go out of hys eyes, lyke as it had bene the whyte skynne of an egge: whiche Tobias toke and drewe from hys eyes, and immedyatly he receaued hys syght.

D Thē they praysed God, he and his wyfe, and all they that knewe hym. And Tobias sayde: O Lorde God of Israell, I geue the prayse and thankes, for thou hast chastened me, and made me whole. And lo, now do I se my sonne Tobias. After seuē dayes came Sara his sonnes wyfe also whole & sounde with al the houshold and catel, with camels and moche moneye of his wyues, and wyth the money that he had receaued of Gabelus: and he tolde hys father and his mother al ỹ benefytes, which God had done for hym, by the man that led hym. Achior also and Nabath Tobias sister sōnes came, & were glad and reioysed with hym, by reason of all the good that God had shewed vnto hym. And so for the space of seuē dayes they made mery, and were ryght ioyfull euerychone.

¶The.xii.Chapter.

¶Tyonge Tobias reckened by vnto his father the pleasures that the angell dyd hym. He offred vnto the angell halfe the goodes that he brought with hym.

A THen Tobias called hys sonne vnto hym, and sayd: What maye we geue thys holy man, that went wyth the? Tobias answered his father, and sayd: Father, what reward shall we geue hym? Or what thynge can deserue hys benefytes? He hath bene my gyde, and brought me safe agayne: he receaued the money frō Gabelus, he caused me to get my wyfe, he drone ỹ euel spyrite from her, he hath bene an occasyon of gladnesse to her father & mother: he delyuered me, that I was not deuoured of ỹ fysshe, he hath made the to se the lyght of heauen, yee we all haue receaued great good of him. How shulde we worthely deserue these thinges vnto hym? But I praye the my father, that thou wylt desyre hym, yf happly he wyll vouchsafe, to take wyth hym ỹ halfe of all that we haue brought.

So the father and the sonne called hym, B toke hym aside, and beganne to praye him, ỹ he wolde be cōtent to take in good worth, the halfe parte of al that they had brought. Then sayde he secretly vnto them: Prayse ye the God of heauen, and geue thankes vn to hym before all men lyuynge, for he hath shewed his mercy vntō vs. It is good to hyde ỹ kinges secrete, but to shewe & to prayse the workes of God, it is an honorable thing. Prayer is good with fastinge, & mercy is better, then to hoorde vp treasures of golde. For mercy delyuereth frō death, cleanseth synne, and causeth to fynde euerlasting lyfe. But they ỹ do sinne and vnrighteousnes, are the enemyes of theyr awne soule. C

Wherfore I tell you the trueth, and will hyde nothynge from you. When thou prayedst with teares, and buryedst the deed, and leftest thy dyner, ād hyddest the deed in thy house vpon the daye tyme, that thou myghtest burye them in the nyght, I offred thy prayer before the Lorde. And because thou wast accept and beloued of God, it was necessary, that tentacyon shulde trye the. And now hath the Lorde sent me to heale the, ād to delyuer Sara thy sonnes wyfe from the euell spyrite. For I am Raphael an Aungel one of the seuen that stande before God.

When they heard thys, they were sore D afrayed, and trembled, and fell downe vpō theyr faces vnto the grounde. Then sayde the Aungell: Peace be wyth you, feare not. Where as I haue bene wyth you, it is the wyll of God: geue prayse and thankes vnto hym.

You thought that I dyd *eate and drinke with you, but I vse meat that is inuysible, and drynke that cannot be sene of men. *Ge.xviii. a Iudic.xiii.c.

Now therfore is the tyme that I must turne againe, vnto him that sent me: but be ye thankfull vnto God, and tell out all his wonderous workes.

And when he had spoken these wordes, he was taken awaye out of theyr syght, so that they sawe hym nomore. Then fell they downe flat vpon their faces by the space of thre houres, and prayed God: when they rose vp, they tolde all his wonderous workes.

¶The.xiii.Chapter.

¶Tobias the elder geueth thankes vnto God.

Then

When olde Tobias opened hys mouth and prayſed the Lord, & ſayd: Great art thou O Lorde for euermore, and thy kyngdome worlde withoute ende: for thou ſcourgeſt and healeſt: thou ledeſt vnto hell, and bryngeſt out agayne, and there is none that may eſcape thyne hande. O geue thanckes vnto the Lorde, ye chyldrē of Iſrael, and prayſe hym in the ſyght of ꝑ Heathen. For amonge the Heathen which knowe hym not hath he ſcatered you, to thintēt ꝑ ye ſhuld ſhew forth his maruelous worckes: and cauſe them for to knowe, that there is none other God almyghtye but he. He hath chaſtened vs for our myſdedes, and for his awne mercy ſake ſhall he ſaue vs.

Conſyder then, howe he hath dealt with you, and prayſe hym with feare and drede, & magnifye the euerlaſtynge kynge in youre worckes. I wyll prayſe him cuē in the land of my captiuyte, for he hath ſhewed his maieſtye vnto a ſynful people. Turne you ther fore O ye ſynners, and do ryghteouſnes before God, and be ye ſure, that he wyll ſhewe his mercy vpon you. As for me, and my ſoule, we will reioyſe in God. O prayſe ꝑ Lord al ye his choſen, holde ꝑ dayes of gladneſſe, and be thankful vnto hym. O Jeruſalem ꝑ cytie of God, the Lorde hath punyſhed ꝑ for the worckes of thine awne handes. O prayſe the Lorde in thy good thinges, and geue thākes to the euerlaſting God, that he may buyld vp his tabernacle agayne in the, that he maye call agayne vnto the, all ſochas be in captiuite, ād that thou mayeſt haue ioye for euermore. With a fayre light ſhalt thou ſhyne, ād all the endes of the worlde ſhall honoure the. The people ſhall come vnto ꝑ frō farre, they ſhall bryng gyftes, and worſhyp the Lord in the, and thy lande ſhall they haue for a Sanctuary, for they ſhal call vpon the great name in the.

Curſed ſhall they be that deſpyſe the, and all that blaſpheme the, ſhalbe condempned: but bleſſed ſhall they be that buylde the vp. As for the, thou ſhalt reioyce in thy chyldrē for they all ſhalbe bleſſed, and gathered together vnto the Lorde. Bleſſed are they all that loue the, and that be glad of thy peace. Prayſe thou the Lorde, O my ſoule, for the Lorde our God hath delyuered his cytie Jeruſalem from all her troubles. I will count my ſelf happy, yf my ſede remayne to ſe the clearnes of Jeruſalem.

The gates of Jeruſalem ſhalbe buylded with Saphyre and Smaragde, and all the cōpaſſe of her walles with preecyous ſtones. All her ſtretes ſhalbe paued with white marble ſtone, and in all ſtretes ſhal Alleluya be ſonge. Prayſed be the Lorde, which hath exalted her, that his kyngdom maye be vpon her for euermore. Amen. And ſo Tobias made an ende of his talkynge.

¶ The. xiiii. Chapter.

¶ Tobias prophecyeth the deſtruccion of Niniue. His ſonne returneth to Raguel, after the deceſſe of his father and mother.

And after that Tobias had gotte his ſight agayne, he lyued. xlii. yeares, & ſawe his childers chyldrē. Now whē he was. C. and. ii. yeare olde, he dyed: & was buryed honorably in Niniue. For when he was ſixe and fyftye yeares of age he loſt the ſight of his eyes, ād when he was thre ſcore yeare olde, he gat his ſight agayne. The reſidue of his lyfe led he in ioye, and increaſed wel in the feare of God, & departed in peace.

But in the houre of his death he called vnto hym his ſonne Tobias, and ſeuen yonge ſpryngaldes his ſonnes chyldren, and ſayde vnto them: The deſtruccion of Niniue is at hand, for ꝑ worde of the Lorde cānot fayle, and our brethren that are ſcatred out of the lande of Iſrael, ſhall come thyther agayne. And the whole land of it ꝑ hath bene waſt, ſhalbe fylled: ād the houſe of God that was brent in it, ſhalbe buylded agayne: & al ſoch as feare God, ſhal returne thither: the Heathen alſo ſhal forſake their Idols, & come to Jeruſalem, and dwell there, and al the kynges of the earth ſhalbe glad of her, and worſhyp the Lorde God of Iſraell.

And therfore my chyldrē, heare your father: Serue the Lorde in the trueth, ſeke after his wil, and do the thynge that pleaſeth hym. Cōmaunde your chyldrē that they do right, geue almes, be myndeful of God, and euer to be thankful vnto hym in trueth and with all theyr power. Heare me now therfore my chyldren, and abyde not here: but in what daye ſoeuer ye haue buryed your mother beſyde me, get you from hence. For I ſe, that the wyckedneſſe of it ſhall bryng it to deſtruccion and ende.

After the death of hys mother, Tobias departed awaye frō Niniue, with hys wyfe and chyldren, and with his childers chyldrē, and came agayne to his father ād mother in lawe, and founde them whole and in a good age, and toke the care of them. And he cloſed their eyes, and was heyre vnto al Raguels goodes, and ſawe the fyfth generacion, and his childers childrē. And whē he was. xcix. yeare of age, he dyed in the feare of ꝑ Lorde, and his kynſfolkes buryed him. And al hys poſterytye contynued in good lyfe, and holy conuerſacion: ſo that they were loued ād accepted both of God and men, and of all the people of the lande.

¶ The fyrſt Chapter.

¶ The buyldynge of Egbathanis. The victory of Nabuchodonoſor agaynſt Arpharat. The meſſengers of Nabuchodonoſor are deſpyſed.

Arpharat the kyng of ꝑ Medes ſubdued many people vnto his dompynion, & buylded a noble ſtrōge cite whyche he called Egbathanis. The walles of it made he of free ſtone, foure ſquared, ſeuēty cubytes hye ād thyrtye cubites brode. He made towres there vpō an hūdreth cubites hye. But vpō the foure corners euery ſide was twenty cubites brode. He made the portes in ꝑ heygth, lyke as ꝑ towres. This kynge truſted in hys myghty hoſt, ād in his glorious charrettes.

So in the twelfth yeare of his raygne it happened, that Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of the Aſſirias (which raygned in the great citie of Niniue) fought agaynſt Arpharat, and ouercame him in the great felde called Ragau, beſyde Euphrates and Tigris and Jadalon in the felde of Erioth the kynge of the Elykes.

Then was the kyngdome of Nabuchodonoſor exalted, and hys herte was lyft vp: and he ſent vnto all them that dwelt in Celicia, in Damaſcus, in Libanus, & vnto the Heathen that dwelt in Carmel and Cedar, and to ſoch as dwelt in Galile in the greate felde of Eſdrelon, to all them ꝑ were in Samaria, and beyonde the water of Jordane vnto Jeruſalem and the whole lāde of Jeſſe vnto the moūtaynes of Ethiopia. Vnto all theſe dyd Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of the Aſſirians ſende meſſaungers. But they all with one conſent wolde not agree vnto him, & ſent the meſſaungers agayne empty, and put thē awaye without honour. Then Nabuchodonoſor the kynge toke indignacion at all thoſe landes, and ſware by hys trone, and by his kyngdome, that he wolde be auenged of all thoſe countrees.

¶ The. ii. Chapter.

¶ Holofernes is ſent of Nabuchodonoſor, to ſubdue all the world. The preparacion and purſute of Holofernes.

In the thyrtenth yeare of kynge Nabuchodonoſor, vpon the. xii. daye of ꝑ fyrſt moneth, it was deuyſed in the courte of Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of the Aſſirians, that he wolde defende hym ſelfe. So he called vnto him al the elders, all his captaynes, and men of warre, and ſhewed them his ſecret councell, and tolde thē that his purpoſe was to bryng the whole earth vnder his dompynon. Now when they were all content wyth this ſayinge, Nabuchodonoſor the kyng called Holofernes ꝑ chefe captayne of his warres, & ſayde vnto hym: Go thy waye forth agaynſt all the kyngdomes of the weſt, and ſpecially againſt thoſe that haue deſpiſed my cōmaūdemēt. Thou ſhalt ſpare no realme, al ſtrōge cyties ſhalt thou bryng in ſubieccion vnto me.

Then Holofernes called together all the captaynes ād rulers of all the power in Aſſiria, and muſtred the ſouldyers vnto the hoſte (lyke as the kyng commaunded him) namely, an hundred and twentye thouſande fightynge men vpon fote, and twelue thouſande archers vpon horſebacke. Al his ordinaunce ſent he before with an innumerable multytude of camels, ſo that the hooſt was well prouided for with oxen, ād ſmal catell, and that without nombre. He cauſed corne to be prepared out of all Syria for his hoſt. Moche golde and ſyluer alſo toke he out of the kynges houſe. So he toke his iourneye, he and all his hoſt, with charettes, horſmen, and archers: of whome there were ſo many, that they couered the grounde of the lande, lyke the grechopers.

And when he was gone paſt the borders of the Aſſirians, he came towarde the great mountaynes of Ange, which lye vpon ꝑ left ſyde of Celicia: & ſo he went vp into al their caſtels, and wanne euery ſtronge holde. As for the welthy cytie of Molothus, he brake it downe, & ſpoyled all the chyldrē of Tharſis and the Iſmaelites, which laye towarde the wildernes, and vpon the South ſyde of the land of Chelon. He went ouer Euphrates alſo, and came into Meſopotamia, and brake downe al the hye cities that were there, from the broke of Wambre tyll a mā come to the ſee: and he toke the borders in frō Celicia vnto the coaſtes of Japhet towarde the South. He caryed awaye al the Madianytes, and ſpoyled all theyr goodes, & whoſoeuer withſtode hym, he ſlew thē wyth the ſwerde. After thys he went downe into the felde of Damaſcus in the tyme of harueſt, & brent vp all the corne and all the trees, and cauſed the vynes to be cut downe. And the feare of hym fell vpon all them that dwelt in the earth.

¶ The. iii. Chapter.

¶ Kynges become wyllyngly ſubiect to Holofernes. The tyrannye and cruelte of hym.

So the kynges & Prynces of all cyties and landes ſent theyr Embaſſytoures: namely, they of Syria, & Meſopotamia, Siria Sobal, and Lybia, and Celicia, which came to Holofernes, and ſayd: Let thy wrath ceaſſe toward vs: It vs: It is better for vs to serue ꝑ great kyng Nabuchodonosor with our lyues, and to be subiecte vnto the, then ꝑ we shulde dye, and be slayne, and receaue greater hurte. Al our cyties and possessions, all mountaynes and hylles, all feldes, great & small catell, shepe goates, horses, and camels, al our goodes & houholdes, be in thy power, vnder thy subiection be it al together. We our selues also and our shyldren wylbe thyne awne, come vnto vs a peaceable lorde, and vse oure seruyce at thy pleasure.

B Then came Holofernes downe from the mountaynes with horsmen & great power, and conquered all stronge fensed cyties, and all that dwelt in the land. And out of all cyties he toke stronge men, and soch as were mete for the warre, to helpe hym. There came soch a feare also vpon those countrees, ꝑ the indwellers of all the cityes, the Princes and rulers, and the people together, wente forth to mete hym as he came, and receaued hym honorably with garlādes and torches, with daunses, tabrettes and pypes.

C Neuertheless, though they dyd thys, yet myght they not swage hys rygorous stomack: but he destroyed their cities, & hewed downe theyr woddes. For Nabuchodonosor the kyng had commaunded him, that he shuld rote out all ꝑ Goddes of the lande: to the intent that he only myght be called and taken for God, of the nacions whych Holofernes with his power brought vnder hym. So went he thorow Syria Sobal, ād thorow all Appamia, and all Mesopotamia, & came to the Idumeans, in the lande of Gabaa and Septopoly, and toke theyr cyties, and remayned there thyrtye dayes, wherin he caused all the whole multytude of hys host to be gathered together.

C The.iiii. Chapter.

C Israel requyreth helpe of God agaynst Holofernes. They fast and praye.

A When the shyldren of Israel ꝑ dwelt in Iewry hearde thys they were sore afrayed of him. There came soch tremblynge also and feare vpon them, that they sorowed he shulde do vnto the cytye of Jerusalem, and the temple of the Lorde, as he had done to other cyties & their temples. So they sent into all Samaria rounde about vnto Jericho, toke in and occupyed al the toppes of the mountaynes, & made fast the townes with walles, ād prepared corne for them agaynst the battayll.

Eliachim also the Preste wrote vnto all them that dwelt towarde Esdrelon (which lyeth ouer agaynst ꝑ great felde by Dothaim) and vnto all those by whom men might haue passage vnto them, that they shuld take in the wayes of the mountaynes, wherby there might be any waye and passage to Jerusalem, and that they shulde holde dilygen watch where any strayt was betwixt the mountaynes. And the shyldren of Israel dyd, as Eliachim the preest of ꝑ Lorde had commaunded them. And all the people cryed earnestly, and humbled theyr soules with fastynges and prayers, they and theyr wyues. The Prestes put on hearrie clothes, ād layed the yōge babes before the temple of ꝑ Lorde, and couered the aulter of the Lorde with an hearrie cloth. And with one accorde they cryed vnto ꝑ Lorde God of Israell, that theyr shyldren shuld not be geuen into a praye, and their wyues into a spoyle, that their cyties shuld not be layed waste, & that theyr Sanctuary shuld not be vnhalowed, and so they to be a shame and rebuke vnto the Heathen.

C Then Eliachim the hye Preste of ꝑ Lorde wente rounde about all Israell, and spake vnto thē, sayinge: Be ye sure, that ꝑ Lorde will heare youre peticions, yf ye contynue stedfast in fastynges & prayers in the syght of the Lorde. Remēbre Moses the seruaunt of the Lorde, which ouerthrewe the Amalechites (that trusted in theyr might & power in their host, in theyr shyldes, in theyr charrettes and horsmen) not with weapens, but with holy prayers. Euen so shall al the enemyes of Israel be, yf ye cōtinue in this worke, that ye haue begonne. So vpon this exhortacion they continued in prayer before ꝑ Lord. In so moche ꝑ they which offred brent sacrifyces vnto the Lorde, offred the offringes vnto the Lorde, beynge arayed in hearye clothes ād had asshes vpō theyr heades. And they all besought God frō theyr whole hert, ꝑ he wolde vyset his people of Israell.

C The.v. Chapter.

C Holofernes is discontent with the Jewes. Achyor sheweth vnto Holofernes the meruelles of God done vnto the Jewes, for which thynge the rulers vnder Holofernes were very angry wyth hym.

A And worde came to Holofernes the Prynce of the warres of the Assyrias that the shyldren of Israell prepared them selues to make resistaunce, and howe they had stopped the wayes betwyxte the mountaynes. Then was he exceadynge wroth, and called all the Princes of Moab, and the Captaynes of Ammon, and sayde vnto them. Tell me what people is thys, that kepeth in the mountaynes? Or what maner of cyties are they? What is their power? Or what maner of hoost haue they? who is theyr Captayne? And why do they despyse vs (more then all those that dwel in the East) and come not forth to mete vs, ꝑ they myght receaue vs wyth peace? Then Achior the Captayne of al the Ammonites answered, and sayd: Syr, yf it please the to heare, I wyll tell the trueth before the, concernynge thys people that dwell in the mountaynes, and there shall no lye go out of my mouth.

B This people is of the generacyon of the Caldees, they dwelt first in Mesopotamia, for they wolde not folowe ꝑ goddes of their fathers that were in the lande of ꝑ Caldees, and forsoke the customes of their fore fathers (which had many goddes) & worshypped one God, that made heauen & erth: which also commaunded them, ꝑ they shuld go from thence, and dwell at Haran. Nowe whē there came a dearth into ꝑ whole land, they wēte downe to Egypte, and there they dwelt *foure hōdreth yeares, in the whyche they multiplyed so greatly, that their hoost might not be nombred. And when the king of Egypte oppressed them, and subdued thē in buyldynge of his cyties with makyng of claye and brycke, they cryed vnto God theyr Lorde, whiche punyshed the whole lande of Egypte with diuerse plages.

C Now when the kynge of Egypte let thē go their waye, and the plage ceased, & then folowed after them, to take thē, & to bringe them agayne into hys seruyce, whyle they were flyenge awaye, the God of heauē opened the see, so that the waters stode fast vpō both the sydes as a wal, and these went thorow the botome of the see drye shod. In the which place whē an innumerable people of the Egypcyans folowed vpon them, they were so ouerwhelmed with ꝑ waters: that there remayned not one, to tel them that came after, how it happened. So when thys people was passed thorow the reed see, they came into the wylderne of the mount Synai, where neuer man myght dwell afore, & where ꝑ sone of mā had neuer rested. There were the bitter waters made swete for thē, that they myght drynke, and forty yeares had they meate from heauen. Wheresoeuer they went (without bowe and arowe, without buckler or sword) theyr God fought for them, and caused them to haue the victory. Yee, no man was able to hurte thys people, except it were so, ꝑ they departed vnfaythfully from the worshyppynge of the Lorde theyr God. But as oft as they worshypped any other beside theyr God, he gaue them ouer to be spoyled, to be slayne, ād to be put to confusyon. Neuertheless, as ofte as they were sory for departynge from the worshippynge of theyr God, the same God of heauē gaue them power and strength to withstande theyr enemyes.

D Moreouer, they slewe the Kynge of ꝑ Cananites, Jebusites, Pherezites, Hethites, Euites, and Amorites, and all the myghtye in Hesebon, and toke their landes ād cyties in possession: and so longe as they sinned not in the syght of theyr God it went wel with them, for theyr God hateth vnryghteousnesse. For in tymes past whē they went out of the waye, which God had geuen thē, that they shulde walke in it, they were destroyed in dyuerse bataylles of many nacions: and many of thē were caryed awaye preseners vnto a straunge countre. But now lately they haue turned them selues agayne vnto the Lorde theyr God, ād are come together agayne out of the coūtrees where they were scatred abrode: and thus haue they cōquered these mountaynes, and dwel therin: and as for Jerusalem where theyr Sanctuary is, they haue it agayne in possession.

E And therfore my lorde, make diligent inquysicio, yf thys people haue done wyckednesse in the sight of their God, then let vs go vp agaynst thē, for doutles theyr God shall delyuer them into thy handes, and subdue them vnto thy power. But yf thys people haue not displeased theyr God, we shal not be able to wythstande them, for theyr God shall defende thē, and so shall we be a shame to all the worlde.

F Now when Achior had spoken out these wordes, al the great men of Holofernes were wroth, and thought to slaye hym, & sayde one to another: what is he this, which darre saye, that the shyldren of Israel are able to withstande Nabuchodonosor the kyng and his hoost: where as they are an vnwepened people, without strength or vnderstanding of the feates of warre? That Achior therfore maye knowe that he hath disceaued vs we wyll go vp into the mountaynes: & whē the myghtye men of them are taken, he also shalbe stycke with the sword, that al people maye knowe, that Nabuchodonosor is the God of the earth, and that there is none other without hym.

C The.vi. Chapter.

C Achior is committed into the handes of the Jewes by Holofernes. He is tyed to a tree, but is loosed of the Jewes. The prayer of the people. Achior is comforted of the Jewes.

A So when they had lefte of speakyng, Holofernes toke sore indignacion, and said vnto Achior: For so moch as thou hast prophecyed vnto vs, sayinge: that the people of Israel shalbe defended of theyr God, I wyll shewe the, that there is no God but Nabuchodonosor. Yee, when we slaye them all as one man, thou also shalt perysh with them thorow the sword of the Assrias, & all Israel shalbe destroyed with the, and then shalt thou fele, that Nabuchodonosor is ꝑ Lorde of the whole erth. Then shall the sword of my kynghthode go thorow thy sydes, and thou shalt fal downe stycke amonge the wounded of Israel, and shalt

shalt not come to thy selfe agayne but be vtterly destroyed wyth them. But yf thou thinckest thy prophecy to be true, why doest thou then chaunge thy coloure? why arte ỹ
B afrayed? Thynckest thou ỹ my wordes are not able to be perfourmed? But that thou mayest knowe, ỹ thou shalt fele these thynges with them, beholde, frō this houre forth wyll I sende the vnto yonder people, that when the punyshment of my swerde (which they haue worthely deserued) falleth vpon them, thou mayest be punyshed with them.

So Holofernes cōmaunded his seruauntes to take Achior, & to cary hym vnto Bethulia, & to delyuer hym into the handes of the childrē of Israel. Then Holofernes seruauntes toke him, and wēt thorow ỹ playne felde. But when they drewe nye vnto the mountaynes, the slynge casters came out agaynst them: Neuertheless they gat thē awaye by the syde of the mountayne, ād bounde Achiors hande and fote to a tree, and so left hym boūde with withyes, and turned agayne vnto theyr Lorde.

Notwithstandinge ỹ chyldren of Israell went dowe frō Bethulia, came vnto hym, lowsed him, brought him into Bethulia, set hym in the myddest of the people, and asked him what the matter was, that ỹ Assirians had left hym bounde?

C Olias the sonne of Micha of the tribe of Symeon, and Charmim (which is also called Gothoniel) were the principal rulers at the same tyme. Nowe when Achior stode in the myddest of [illegible] tentatoures, and before them al he told [illegible], what answere he gaue Holofernes, to the thynge that he asked him, and how Holofernes people wolde haue slayne hym for so sayinge, and how Holofernes hym selfe was wroth, & commaunded hym for the same cause to be delyuered vnto the Israelites: that when he ouercame the childrē of Israel, he myght commaūde Achior also to be put to death with diuerse tormētes, because he sayde: the God of heauen is their defender. And when Achior had playnely tolde out all these thynges, all the people fell downe vpō their faces, prayeng the Lorde, and poured out their prayers together vnto the Lorde, with a general complaynte and weppynge, and sayde: O Lorde God of heauē & of earth, beholde their pride and loke vpon our lowlynes, and consydre how it standeth with thy sayncte, and make it to be knowne, that thou forsakest not those, which holde them fast by the, ād how D that thou brynguest thē lowe, that presume of thē selues, and make theyr boast in theyr awne strength. So when the weppynge and prayer of the people (whych they had made the whole daye lōge) was ended, they comforted Achior, sayinge: The God of our fathers, whose power and strength thou hast prayed, shall so reward the, that thou shalt rather se theyr destrucciō. When the Lorde our God then shall geue his seruauntes thys lybertie, God be also with the amōge vs, & that yf it please the, thou wyth all thyne mayest dwell with vs.

Now when Olias had ended the coūcell, he toke him into his house, ād made a great supper, called the elders to it, and so they refreshed them selues after the fastynge. And afterwarde was all the people called together, which made their prayers al the night longe in the congregacion, and besought the God of Israel for helpe.

C The. vii. Chapter.

C Bethulia is besieged of Holofernes. The people requyreth helpe of God. They of Bethulia wolde geue ouer the cytye for wante of water. The prayer of the people with teares and lamentacion.

THe next daye, Holofernes commaunded his hoost to go vp agaynst Bethulia. There were an hundred & twenty thousande fyghtynge men on fote and two and twentye thousande horsmen, beside the the preparyng of thē that were wonne: and came to them on euery syde out of the countrees and cytyes whyche he had taken. All these prepared them selues vnto the battail agaynst the Israelites, and came on by the hyll syde, vnto the toppe that loketh ouer agaynst Dothaim, from the place which is called Belma, vnto Chelmon that lyeth towarde Esdrelon.

B Now whē the chyldren of Israel sawe so great a multitude of the Assyrians, they fel downe flat vpō the groūde, strawed asshes vpon their heades, and prayed with one accorde, that ỹ God of Israel wolde shew his mercy vpō his people, and so they toke their weapens, and sat betwirt the mountaynes in the narow place, and kept the waye daye and nyght. But whyle Holofernes was goynge aboute, he founde the water spryngе, which frō the South syde was conueyed into ỹ cytie by a cōdyte: this cōmaunded he to be direct another waye, & to cut their cōdite in sunder. There were welles also not farre from the walles, whych they vsed secretly, more for pleasure then for necessyte.

C Then wente ỹ Ammonytes & the Moabytes vnto Holofernes, & sayd: The childrē of Israell trust nether in speare nor arowe, but haue taken in, ād kepe the mountaynes and hilles. That thou mayest ouercome thē therfore without ỹ stryking of any batayl, set men to kepe the welles that they drawe no water out of thē: so shalte thou destroye thē without sweard, or at ỹ least they shall be so feble, that they must be fayne to geue ouer the cytye: whych they thynke not able to be wonne, for so moche as it lyeth in the mountaynes.

mountaynes. These wordes pleased Holofernes well & all his men of warre, & he sett an hundreth at euery well rounde aboute.

D And when thys watch had endured twētye dayes, the Cisternes & all that had water, fayled them that dwelt in ỹ cyte of Bethulya, so that in ỹ whole cyte they had not dryncke ynough for one daye, for the people had water geuen them daylye in a measure. Then came the men and wemen, ponge persones ād chyldren all vnto Olias, & sayde all with one voyce: God be iudge betwixte vs and the, for thou hast dealt euell with vs thou woldest not speake peaceably with the kynge of the Assyrians, therfore hath God solde vs in theyr handes, and there is no mā to helpe vs where as we are brought downe before theyr eyes i thirst & great destrucyon. Therfore gather now together all ỹ people that be in the cytie, that we maye all yelde oure selues wyllyngly vnto ỹ people of Holofernes: for better it is that we be captyue and prayse the Lorde with our lyues, then to be slayne and perysshe, and to be laughed to scorne and shamed of euery man, when we se our wyues and chyldren dye before oure eyes. We take heauen and earthe thys daye to recorde, and the God of our fathers (which punysheth vs accordyng to ỹ deserupng of our synnes) and geue you warnynge, that ye geue vp the cytye now ito ỹ power of Holofernes hoost, that oure ende maye be shorte with the swerde, whych els shall endure longe, for wante of water and for thyrst.

E When they had spoken out these wordes there was a greate weppyng and howlynge in the whole congregacyon, and that of euery man, and they cryed an whole houre longe vnto God wō one voyce, sayenge: we haue synned with oure fathers, we haue done a mysse, we haue dealt wyckedly. Thou that art gracious, haue mercy vpon vs, punysh our vnrighteousnes with thyne awne scourge, and geue not those ouer that knowledge the, vnto a people whych knowe the not, lest they saye amōge the Heathen: where is theyr God?

And when they were so weery with this cryenge and wepinge, that they helde theyr tunges, Olyas stode vp with watrye eyes, and sayde: O take good hertes vnto you, (deare brethren) and be of good cheare, and let vs wayte yet these fyue dayes for mercy of the Lorde: peraduenture he shall cut awaye hys indignacyon, and geue glory vnto hys name. But yf he helpe vs not when these fyue dayes are past, we shall do as ye haue sayde.

C The. viii. Chapter.

C Of the vertuous woman Judith, which reproueth the auncientes because they tempted the Lorde. She also moueth them to encourage and hereten the people, and sheweth her councell agaynst the enemyes of the Jewes.

ANd it happened whē these wordes came to ỹ eares of Judith a wyddowe, which was the daughter of Merari, the sonne of Idor, ỹ sonne of Joseph, the sonne of Olia, the sonne of Elay, the sonne of Jammor, the sonne of Jeheon, the sonne of Raphoim, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Melchia, ỹ sonne of Euam, the sonne of Nathania, the sonne of Salathiel, the sonne of Symeon, the sonne of Ruben. And her husbād was called Manasses, which dyed in the dayes of the barlye haruelt. For whyle he was byndynge the sheues together in the felde, the heate came vpō his head, & he dyed at Bethulia his cytie & there was he buryed besyde his fathers. Now was Judith hys desolate wyddowe thre yeares and six monethes. And in ỹ hyer partes of her house she made her selfe a preup chambre, where she dwelt, beynge closed in with her maydens. She ware a mock of B heare, and fasted all the dayes of her lyfe, excepte the Sabbathes, and newe moncs and the solempne dayes that ỹ people of Israell kepte. She was a very fayre and bewtifull persone. Her husbād also had left her greate riches, a plenteous housholde, great vnmoueable possessiōs and many catell. This Judith was a woman of a very good reporte with euery one, for she feared ỹ Lord greatly, ād there was no body that spake an euell worde of her.

When thys Judith hearde, how Olyas had promised the people, that after the fyfte daye he wolde geue vp the cyte vnto the Assyriās, she sent for the elders Chambri and Charmy, and when they came to her, she sayde: what thynge is thys, wherin Olyas hath consented, that yf God helpe not within fyue dayes, he wyll geue ouer the cytie to the Assiriās? What are ye, that ye tempte the Lorde? This deuyce optayneth no mercy of God, but prouoketh him vnto wrath and displeasure. Wyll ye set the mercy of ỹ Lorde a tyme and appoynte hym a daye after youre wyll?

C Neuertheless, for so moch as the Lord is pacyēt, lett vs rather repent, pourynge out teares, and besechig him of grace. For God threateneth not as a man, nether wyll he be prouoked vnto wrath as the chyldren of men. And therfore lett vs pertely fall downe before hym, and serue hym wyth a meke spryte, and wyth weppynge eyes saye vnto the Lorde, that he deale with vs accordyng to hys awne wyll and mercy: that lyke as oure herte is now vexed, and brought lowe thorow the pryde of them, it maye so be comforted thorow hys grace: in so moch as we folowe not the synnes of our fathers, which forsoke their God, & worshypped other goddes: for the whych synne they perished with the swerde, were spoyled & brought to thame of al their enemies. As for vs, we knowe none other God but onely hi, for whose comforte lett vs tary with mekenesse. He shall requyre and make inquisycio for our bloud from the vexacions of our enemyes: he shal bringe downe all the heythen, that ryse vp agaynst vs, & put them to dishonoure, euen the Lorde oure God.

Therfore deare brethren, seynge ye are
D honorable and elders in the people of God, vnto whom all the people haue respecte, and vpon whom the lyfe of the people standeth, lyft vp their hertes with youre exhortacyō, that they may call to remembraunce, how oure fathers also in tymes past were tempted, that they myght be proued, yf they worshypped their God a ryght. They ought to Gene.xxii.a remembre, how oure father Abraham beynge tempted, and tryed thorow many tribulacyons, was founde a louer and frende of God. So was Isaac, so was Jacob, so was Moses, and all they that pleased God, beynge tryed thorow many troubles, were founde stedfast in fayth. Agayne, they that receaued not their tētacyons wyth the feare of God, but put thē selues forth with vnpacyency and murmurynge agaynst God, perysh[illegible] the destroyer, and were slayne of scr[illegible] and therfore should not we vnderta[illegible] for auenged, for the wyng that is done vnto vs: but to consydre, that all these punyshmentes are farre lesse then oure synnes and mysdedes. Beleuige also that thys correccyon commeth vnto vs (as to the seruauntes of God) for amendement, and not for oure destruccyon.

E Then sayde Olias & the elders vnto Judith: All that thou spekest, is true, and no mā can reproue thy wordes. Praye thou for vs now therfore vnto God, for thou art an holy woman, and fearest God. And Judith sayd vnto them: Seyng, ye knowe that my wordes are of God, then proue my councell & deuice, yf it be of God: & beleche God, that he wyll bringe my councell to good ende.

Thus haue I deuysed: Ye shall stāde this nyght before the porte, and I wyll go forth with Abra my mayden. Praye ye therfore vnto God, that he wyll graciously remembre his people of Israel within fyue dayes, as ye haue sayd. As for the thyng that I go in hande with all, aske ye no questyōs of it, tyll I open it vnto you my selfe: do ye nothig els but praye vnto the Lorde youre God for me. Then Olias the prince of the people of Juda sayde vnto her: Go thy waye in peace the Lorde be with the, that we maye be auēged of our enemyes. And so they wēte from her agayne.

The.ix. Chapter.

The prayer of Judith for the hye store.

NOw when they were gone theyr waye, Judith wente into hir closet, put on an hearrye smock, strawed asshes vpon hir head, fell downe before the Lord, & cried vnto hym, sayēg, O Lord God of my father * Simeō, which gauest hym a swerde for a defence agaynst the enemyes, ỳ vsed violēce and wyllfulnes and that rauished ỳ virgin & put her to dyshonesty. Thou ỳ gauest theyr wyues into a praye, and theyr daughters into captyuyte, ād all theyr praye for a spoyle vnto thy seruauntes, which bare a zele vnto ỳ, helpe me wyddow, O Lorde my God, I beseche the. For thou hast done all thinges from the begynnyng: and loke what thou hast taken in hand ād deuysed, it came euer to passe. For all thy wayes are prepared, and thy iudgemētes are done i thy euerlastyng forknowledge. O loke now vpon the armyes of the Assirias, lyke as it was thy pleasure somtime to loke vpō the hoost of the Egyptians, when they beyng weapened, persecuted thy seruauntes, and put theyr trust i theyr charrettes, horsmen, & in the multitude of theyr men of warre. But thou lokedest vpō their host, castynge a thyck darcknes before thē: and when they came into the depe, the waters ouer whelmed them. B

Euen so Lord, lett it go with these, that trust in the power & multitude of theyr mē of warre in theyr charrettes, arowes & speares, and knowe not, that thou onely art our God, which destroyest warres frō ỳ begynnyng, and that thou art the Lord. O lift vp thyne arme now, lyke as euer from ỳ begynnyng, and i thy power bringe their power to naught, cause theyr myght to fall in thy wrath. They make theyr boast, ỳ they will vnhalowe and defyle thy Sanctuary, and to wayst the tabernacle of thy name, & to cast downe the horne of thyne aulter wtheyr swerde. Bring to passe (O Lorde) that the pryde of the enemye maye be cut downe with his awne swerde, that he maye be take with the snare of hys eyes in me, and that ỳ mayest smyte hī with ỳ lyppes of my loue. O geue me a stedfast mynde, that I maye despyse him ād hys strength, & that I maye destroye hym.

Thys shall bringe thy name an euerlastyng remembraunce, yf the hande of a woman ouerthrowe hym. For thy power (O Lord) stādeth not in ỳ power of men, nether hast ỳ eny pleasure i the strength of horses. There was neuer proude personne ỳ pleased the, but in the prayer of the humble and meke hath thy pleasure bene euermore. C

O thou God of the heauens, thou maker of the waters, and Lorde of all creatures, heare heare me poore woman, callyng vpō the, & puttyng my trust in thy mercy. Remembre thy couenaunt, O Lord, and mynister wordes in my mouth, and stablysh this deuice in my hert, that thy house maye cōtynue styll in holynes, and that all the heythen maye knowe, that thou art God, ād that there is none other but thou.

The.x. Chapter.

Judith decketh her selfe to go to Holofernes. The discyples that the Elders gaue Judith. Holofernes is in loue with Judith.

AND when she had left of crieng vnto the Lorde, she rose vp from the place, where she had lyen flat before the Lorde, & called her mayden, wēt downe into her house, layed the hearrye cloth from her, put of the garmentes of hir wyddowhode, washed her body, anoynted hyr selfe with precyous thinges, of swere sauoure, bryded and platted her hearre, sett an hoode vpon hir heade, and put on soche apparell as belongeth vnto gladnesse, slyppers vpon hir fete, armellettes, spāges, earynges, fyngerrynges, ād decked her selfe with all hir best araye. A

The Lorde gaue her also a specyall bewtye ād fayrnesse (for all this deckyng of hyr selfe was not done for eny voluptuousnesse and pleasure of the flesh, but of a ryght dyscrecyon and vertue, therfore dyd the Lorde increase hir bewtye) so that she was exceadyng amyable and welfauoured in all mēs eyes. She gaue hyr mayde also a botell of wyne, a pot with oyle, pottage, cake bred & chese, and wente hir waye.

Now whan she came to the porte of the B cytie, she foūde Olias and the elders of the cytie waytig there. Which whā they sawe her, they were astōnyed, & marueled greatly at her bewtye, Neuertheless, they asked no questiō at her, but let her go, saying: The God of oure fathers geue the his grace, and with his power perfourme all the deuyce of thy herte: that Jerusalē maye reioyse ouer the, and that thy name maye be in the nombre of the holy and ryghteous. And all they that were there, sayde with one voyce: so be it, so be it. Judith made hir prayer vnto the Lorde, and wente oute at the porte, she and hir mayde.

And as she was goyng downe the mountayne, it happened that aboute the sprynge of the daye, the spyes of the Assirians met with her, and toke her, saying: whence commest thou? Or whither goest thou? She answered: I am a daughter of the Hebrues, ād am fled frō thez, for I knowe, ỳ they shalbe geuen vnto you to be spoyled: because they thought scorne to yelde thē selues vnto you that they myght fynde mercy i youre sight Therfore, haue I deuysed by my selfe after this maner: I wyll go before the prince Holofernes, and tell hym all the secretes, and wyll shew him, how he maye come by them and wynne them, so that not one mā of hys hoost shall perysh.

And whan these mē had hearde hir wor- C des, and consydered hir fayre face they were astonnyed (for they wondred at hir excellēt bewty) & sayd vnto her: thou hast saued thy lyfe by fyndyng out this deuyce, ỳ thou woldest come downe to oure lorde: and be thou sure, that whan thou commest vnto hym, he shall intreate the well, and thou shalt please hym at the herte. So they brought her into Holofernes pauylion, and tolde him of her. Now when she came in before hym, immedyatly he was ouercome ād taken with hir bewty. Thē sayd his seruaūtes: who wolde despise ỳ people of the Jewes, that haue so fayre wemē? Should we not by reasō fyght agaīst thē for these? So when Judith sawe Holofernes syttynge in a canapy, that was wrought of purple, sylke, gold, Smaragde and precyous stones, she loked fast vpon hi, & fell downe vpon ỳ earth. And Holofernes seruauntes toke her vp agayne, at their lordes commaundement.

The.xi. Chapter.

Holofernes requyreth of Juda the cause of her commyng, whych geueth him a suttell answer.

THen sayd Holofernes vnto her: Be of good chere, & feare not in thyne hert, for I neuer hurte mā, ỳ wold serue Nabuchodonosor ỳ kinge. As for thy people, yf they had not despysed me, I shulde not haue lyft vp my spearc agaynst ỳ. But tell me now, what is the cause that ỳ art departed from them, & wherfore art thou come vnto vs? A

And Judith sayde vnto hym: Syr, vnderstande ỳ wordes of thy handmayden: for yf ỳ wylt do after the wordes of thy handmayden, the Lorde shall bringe thy matter to a prosperous effecte. As truly as Nabuchodonosor a lorde of the lande lyueth, and as truly as his power lyueth, which is in ỳ to the punyshment of all men that go wrōg, all men shall not onely be subdued vnto him thorow the, but all the beestes also of ỳ feld. For all people speake of thy prudent actyuyte, and it hath euer bene reported, how ỳ onely art good & myghtie in all his kyngdome, & thy discrecyon is cōmended i al lādes. B The thig is manyfest also, ỳ Achior spake, & it is wel knowne, what ỳ cōmaūdest to do vnto him, For this is playne & of a sure tye, ỳ our God is so wroth wt vs (by ỳ reason of our synnes) ỳ he hath shewed by hys Prophetes vnto ỳ people, how ỳ for their synnes he will delyuer thē ouer vnto ỳ enemye. And for so moch as ỳ childrē of Israell kno-

we that they haue so displeased theyr God, they are sore afrayed of the.

They suffre greate honger also, and for wante of water, they are ded now in a maner. Moreouer, they are appoynted to slaye all theyr catell, that they maye drynche the blode of them: and are purposed to spende all the holy ornamētes of their God (which he hath forbydden them to touch) for corne, wyne and oyle. Seynge now, that they do these thynges it is a playne case that they must nedes be destroyed. Which whē I thy handmayden perceaued, I fled from them, ād the Lord hath sent me vnto the, to shew the these thynges. For I thy handmayden worshyppe God euen here now beside the, and thy handmayden shall go forth, and I will make my prayer vnto God, ād he shall tell me, when he wyll reward them theyr synne, then shall I come and shewe the and bringe the thorow the myddest of Jerusalē so that thou shalt haue all the people of Israel, as ỹ shepe without a shepeherde: there shall not so moch as one dogg barcke agaīst the, for these thynges are shewed me by the prouydence of God: and for so moch as God is displeased with them, he hath sent me to the the same.

These wordes pleased Holofernes & all his seruauntes, which marueled at the wysdome of her, and sayde one to another: there is not soch a woman vpon earth, in beawtye and discrecyon of wordes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: God hath done well, that he hath sent the hyther before thy people, that ỹ mayest geue thē ito our hādes. And for so moch as thy promyse is good, yf thy God perfourme it vnto me, he shal be my God also, and thou shalt be excellent and greate in the courte of Nabuchodonosor, and thy name shalbe spoken of in all the lande.

¶The.xii.Chapter.

¶Holofernes commaundeth that Judith be well intreated. She desyreth lycence to go out in the night season to praye, and optayneth it. Vagao is sent vnto her, to moue her to come into Holofernes to a bāket, and she cummeth. Holofernes is droncken.

A When commaunded he her to go ī where hys treasure laye, and charged that she shulde haue her dwellynge there, and appoynted what shulde be geuen her from hys table. Judith answered hym and sayde: As for the meate that thou hast commaunded to geue me, I maye not eate of it as now (lest I displease my God) but will eat of soch as I haue brought with me. Then sayde Holofernes vnto her: If these thynges that thou hast brought with the fayle, what shall we do vnto the? And Judith sayd: As truly as thou lyuest my lord, thy handmayden shall not spende all thys, tyll God haue brought to passe in my hand, the thynges that I haue deuysed.

B So hys seruauntes brought her into the tent, where as he had appointed. And as she was goynge in, she desyred that she myght haue leue to go forth by night & before daye to her prayer and to make intercessiō vnto the Lorde. Then commaunded Holofernes his Chamberlaynes, that she shulde go out and in at her pleasure, to praye vnto God those thre dayes.

And so in the nyght season she wēte forth into ỹ valley of Bethulia, and washed her selfe in the well water, Then wente she vp, and besought the Lorde God of Israel that he wolde prospere her waye, for the delyueraunce of hys people. And so she wente in, & remayned clene in her tent, tyll she toke her meate in the euenynge.

C Upon the fourth daye it happened, that Holofernes made a supper vnto hys seruauntes, and sayde vnto Vagao his chamberlayne: Go thy waye, and councell thys Hebrueesse, that she may be wyllyng to consent to kepe cōpany with me. For it were a shame vnto all the Assyrians, that a woman shulde so laugh a mā to scorne that she were come from hym vnmedled with all.

Then wente Vagao vnto Judith, & sayde: Let not the good daughter be afrayed, to come ito my lorde, that she maye be honoured before hym, that she maye eate and drincke wyne, and be mery with hym. Unto whom Judith answered: Who am I, that I shulde saye my lordes naye? whatsoeuer is good before hys eyes, I shal do it: and loke what is hys pleasure, that shall I thyncke well done, as longe as I lyue.

D So she stode vp, and decked her self wyth her apparell, and wente in, and stode before him. And Holofernes herte was whole moued, so that he brent in desyre towarde her. And Holofernes sayd vnto her: drike now and sytt downe, and be mery, for thou hast founde fauoure before me. Then sayde Judith: Syr, I wyll drynche, for my mynde is meryer to daye, then euer it was in all my lyfe. And she toke, and dyd eate, and dranke before hym, the thynges that her mayden had preparedfor her. And Holofernes was mery with her, and dranke moze wyne, then euer he dyd afore in hys lyfe.

¶The.xiii.Chapter.

¶Holofernes sleapeth for very dronckenes. and Judith cutteth of hys heade, and goeth therwith to her awne people of whom she is receaued with ioye. They geue thanckes vnto God, for theyr delyueraunce. Judith speaketh vnto Achior which mysuseth at her state done to Holofernes.

A Now whē it was late in the nyght, hys seruauntes made haste euery man to hys lodgīge. And Vagao shut the chamber dores, and went hys his waye, for they were all ouercladen with wyne. So was Judith alone in the chamber. As for Holofernes he laye vpō the bed all dronken, & of very dronckenesse fell a slepe

Then commaunded Judith her mayden, to stāde without before the dore, & to wayte And Judith stode before the bedd, makynge her prayer with teares, and moued her lyppes secretly, and sayde: Strengthen me, O Lorde God of Israel, and haue respecte vnto the worckes of my handes in this houre, that thou mayest set vp thy cytie of Jerusalem, lyke as thou hast promysed: O graūte that by the I may perfourme ỹ thīg, which I haue deuysed thorow the beleue that I haue in the,

And when she had spoken this, she wente to the bedsteade, ād lowsed the swerde that hanged vpon it, and drewit out. Then toke she hold of the hearrye lockes of hys heade, and sayde: Strengthen me, O Lorde God in thys houre. and with that, she gaue hym two strokes vpon the neck, ād smote of hys head. Then toke she the canapy awaye, and rolled the deed body aside. Immediatly she gat her forth, and deliuered the head of Holofernes vnto her mayden, and bad her put it in her walet.

And so these two wente forth together after theyr custome, as though they wolde praye, and so passed by the Hoost, and came thorow the valley vnto the porte of the cytye. And Judith cryed a farre of vnto the watchmen vpon the walles: Opē the gates (sayde she) for God is with vs, which hath shewed his power in Israel. And when they heard her voyce, they called the elders of the cytie together. And they came al to mete her, lytle and greate, yonge & olde, for they thought not that she shuld haue come so soone, So they lyghted candels, and gathered aboute her euerychone: but she wente vp into an hye place, and caused silence to be proclamed.

When euery man now helde hys tonge, ¶Judith sayde: O prayse the Lord our God, for he hath not despysed, nor forsaken them, that put theyr trust i hym, & in me his handmaidē he hath perfourmed his mercy, which he promysed vnto the house of Israel: yee in my hand thys same nyght hath he slayne ỹ enemy of hys people.

And with that she toke forth the head of Holofernes out of the wallet, and shewed it them, sayinge: Beholde the heade of Holofernes the captayne of the Assyrians, & this is the canapy, wherin he laye in his dronkēnes: where the Lorde oure God hath slayne him by the hande of a woman.

But as truly as the Lord liueth, his Angell hath kepte me, goynge thyther, remaynyng there, & cōmynge hyther agayne from thēce. And the Lord hath not suffred me his handmaydē to be defyled, but without any fylthines of synne hath he brought me agaīne vnto you: & that wt greate victory, so ỹ I am escaped, and ye delyuered. O geue thankes vnto hym euerichone, for he his gracios and hys mercy endureth for euer.

So they praysed the Lorde altogether, & gaue thākes vnto hī. And to her they sayd: D The Lord hath blessed the in hys power, for thorow the he hath brought our enemies to naught. And Ozias the chefe ruler of ỹ people of Israel, sayd vnto her: Blessed art ỹ of the Lorde the hye God, aboue all wemen vpon earth.

Blessed be ỹ Lord, the maker of heauen & earth, which hath gyded ỹ a ryght to woūde and to smyte of the head of ỹ Captayne of oure enemyes. For this daye he hath made thy name so honorable, ỹ thy prayse shal neuer come oute of ỹ mouth of men, which shal all waye remembre the power of the Lorde, seige: thou hast not spared thyne awne self, but put the in iopardy, considering the angwysh and trouble of thy people, and so hast helped theyr fall before God our Lord. And all the people sayde: Amen, Amen.

Achior also was called, & he came. Then sayde Judith vnto him: The God of Israel vnto whō ỹ gauest witnes, ỹ he wold be auēged of his enemyes, euē he hath thys nyght thorow my hād smytten of ỹ head of all the vnfaythfull. And that ỹ mayest se ỹ it so is, beholde this is ỹ head of Holofernes, which in his presumptuous pryde despysed ỹ God of the people of Israel, ād threatened the wt destrucciō, saying: whē ỹ people of Israel is taken, I shal cause ỹ also to be stycke wyth the swerde. When Achior sawe Holofernes head, he fell downe vpō his face to ỹ ground for very angwysh & feare, so ỹ he sowned wt all. But after ỹ he was come agayne to hī selfe, he fell downe before her, ād prayed her saying: Blessed art thou of thy God in all ỹ tabernacles of Jacob: for al the people that heare of thy name, shall prayse the God of Israel because of the.

¶The.xiiii.Chapter.

¶The councell of Judith. Achior beyng an heathen mā, turneth to God. The Assyrians are afrayed of the Jewes.

A Judith sayd vnto all the people: Brethren, heare me. Stycke vp thys heade vpon our walles, and when ỹ Sūne aryseth, take euery man hys weapē, and fall out vyolently: not as though ye wolde go before them, but to renne vpon them, with violence. When the spyes in the tentes se this, they shall of necessyte be compelled to fle backward, ād to rayse vp theyr captayne to the battayll. So whē their captaynes come into Holofernes pauylyon, and fynde the deed body wrapped in ꝑ bloud, fearfulnes shall fall vpon them: and whē ye perceaue that they flye, folowe thē without all care, for God shall delyuer thē vnto you to be destroyed.

Then Achior seynge the power of God which he had shewed vnto the people of Israel, fell of from his heathenish beleke, and put his trust in God, and let hym selfe be circumcised: and so was he nombred among ꝑ people of Israel, he and al his posterite vnto thys daye.

Now as soone as it was daye, they stickt vp Holofernes head vpon the walles, and euery man toke hys weapen, & so they wente out with an horryble cry. Whē the spyes sawe that, they ranne vnto Holofernes tēt. And they that were within the tente, came before hys chamber, and made a greate rustlyng to wake hym vp, because they thought with the noyse to haue raysed him. For there durst not one of the Assyrians knocke, go in or open.

But when the captaynes and Prynces and all the chefe in the hynge of the Assyrians hoost came together, they sayde vnto the Chamberlaynes. Go youre waye in, ād wake him vp, for the myse are crepte out of theyr holes, and darre prouoke vs vnto battayll.

Then wente Bagao into hys chamber, stode before the bed, and clapped with hys handes, for he thought he had bene sleppynge with Judith.

But whē he had herkened perfectly with hys eares, and coulde perceaue no sterynge, he wente nyer to the bed, and lyft it vp, and thē sawe he ꝑ deed body of Holofernes lyēge there with oute a head, weltred in his bloud vpon the earthe. Then cryed he wyth loude voyce, and with wepinge rent hys clothes, and wente into Judiths tent, and found her not: And so he leapte out vnto the people & sayd: oue woman of ꝑ Jewes, hath brought all Nabuchodonosors people to shame. For lo, Holofernes lyeth vpon the ground and hath no head.

When ꝑ chefe of the Assyriās hoost herd that, they rente theyr clothes, and there fell an intollerable feare and tremblynge vpon them, so ꝑ theyr myndes were sore afrayed, And there was an exceadyng greate crye in the whole hoost.

¶The. xv. Chapter.

¶ The fyght of the Assyrians. The pursute of Israel after them. Israel becometh ryche, by the spoyles of the Assyrians. Judith is praysed of Joachim and of the people.

NOw when all ꝑ hoost herde ꝑ Holofernes was headed, their mynde & councell fell from them: and soch a feare came vpō them, that they vndertoke to defende them selues by flyeng awaye: one spake not to another, but hanged downe theyr heades, left all behynd them, and made haste to escape from the Hebrues: for they herde, that they were hastig to come after with theyr weapens, and so they fled by the wayes of the feldes, & thorow all the fote pathes of the dales.

And when the chyldren of Israell sawe that they fled, they folowed vpon them and wente downe with trompettes, blowynge and malynge a greate crye after them. As for the Assyrians, they had no ordre, & kept not thē selues together, but fled theyr waye Neuertheles, the chyldren of Israel fell vpō them with one company and ordre, and discomfeted as many as they myght gett. And Ozias sent messaūgers vnto all the cyties and countrees of Israell.

So all the regyons and euery cytye sent out theyr best men after them in harnesse, & smote them with the swerde, tyll they came to ꝑ vttemost parte of theyr borders. And the other that were in Bethulia came into the tentes of the Assyrians, and toke all ꝑ they which were fled had left behynd them, and so they founde greate good. And they that came agayne to Bethulia from ꝑ battayll, toke with them soch thinges as had bene theyrs: there was no nombre of the catell, and of all costly Jewels, so that from the lowest vnto the hyest, they were al made ryche of the spoyles of them. And Joachim the hye preste at Jerusalem, came to Bethulya with all the elders, that they myght se Judith.

Now when she came out vnto them, they beganne all to prayse her with one voyce, sayinge: thou worthyppe of the cytye of Jerusalem, thou ioye of Israel, thou honoure of oure people, thou hast done manly, & thy herte is confortet, because thou hast loued clenlynes and chastyte, ād hast knowne no man but thyne awne husbād: therfore hath the hande of the Lorde confortet the, & blessed shalt ꝑ be for euer. And all people sayde: so be it, so be it.

In thyrty dayes coulde the people of Israel scarse gather vp the spoyles of ꝑ Assyrians. But all that belōged vnto Holofernes, and had bene hys, specyally (whether it were of gold, of syluer, precyous stones, clothyng, and all ornamentes) they gaue it vnto Judith. And al the people reioysed, both wemen, maydens, and yonge people, with ppes and herpes.

¶ The songe of Judith for the victorye. After the victorye optayned, the people commeth to Jerusalem, to worshyp and prayse God.

Then

WHen longe Judith thys longe vnto ꝑ Lorde. Begynne vnto the Lord vpō the tabrettes, synge vnto the Lorde vpon the cymbales. O synge vnto hym a new songe of thankesgeuynge, be ioyfull & call vpon hys name. It is the Lorde that destroyeth warres, euen the Lorde is hys name. Which hath pitched hys tentes i the myddest of hys people, that he myght delyuer vs from the hand of all oure enemyes. Assur came out of the mountaynes of the North in the multytude of hys strēgth. His people stopped the water brokes, and theyr hoselles couered the valleyes. He purposed to haue brent vp my lande, and to slaye my yong men with the swerde.

He wolde haue caryed awaye my childrē and virgyns into captyuite, but ꝑ almyghtye lorde hyndred hym, and delyuered hym into the hādes of a woman, which brought hym to confusyon. For theyr myghtie was not destroyed of the yonge men. It was not the sonne of Titan that slew hym, nether haue the greate gyauntes set them selues agaynst hi: but Judith ꝑ daughter of Merari with her fayre bewtye hath discōfited hym, and brought hym to naught. For she layed awaye her wyddowes garment, and put on the apparel of gladnesse to the reioysynge of the childrē of Israel. She anoynted her face, and bounde vp her hearre in an hoode, to begyle hi. Her slyppers rauysched his eyes, her bewtie captyuated his mynde, with the swerde smote she of hys neck. The Persians were astonnied at her stedfastnes and the Medes at her boldnes. Then howled the armes of the Assyrians, when my symple appeared, dyre of thyrst. The sōnes of the daughters haue pearsed thē thorowe and slayne them as fugytyue chyldren: they perysshed in the battayl, for the very feare of the Lorde my God. Let vs synge a songe of thankesgeupng vnto the Lord, a new songe of prayse wyll we synge vnto oure God. Lorde, Lord, thou arte a great God, myghtye in power, whom no man may ouercome. All thy creatures shulde serue the: for thou spakest but the worde, and they were made: thou sentest thy spyrte, and they were created, and no man can withstande thy voyce. The mountaynes shall moue from the foūdacyons with the waters, the stonye rockes shall melt before the lyke ware. But they ꝑ feare the: shalbe greate with the iall thynges. Wo vnto ꝑ people that ryse vp against my generacyon, for the Almyghtye Lorde will auenge hym selfe of them, and in the daye of iudgement wyll he vysett them. For he shall geue fyre and wormes into theyr flesh, that they may burne and fele it for euermore.

After thys it happened, that after the victory, all the people came to Jerusalē, to geue prayse and thankes vnto the Lorde. And when they were purpyfyed, they offred all theyr brent sacrifyces and theyr promysed offrynges. And Judith offred all Holofernes weapens, and all ꝑ Jewels, that the people had geuen her, and the canapy that she toke from his bed, and hanged them vp vnto the Lorde. The people was ioyfull, as the vle is: and this ioye by reason of the victory with Judith, endured thre monethes.

So after these dayes, euery man wente home agayne, and Judith was i greate reputacyon at Bethulya, and wyght honorably taken in all the lād of Israel. Unto her vertue also was chastyte ioyned, so that after her husbande Manasses dyed, she neuer knewe man all the dayes of her lyfe. Upon the hye solempne dayes she wente out with greate worshyppe. She dwelt in her husbādes house an hundred and fyue yeare, & left her handmayden free, and dyed, and was buryed besyde her husbāde in Bethulya. And all the people mourned for her seuen dayes. So longe as she lyued there was none that troubled Israel, and many yeares also after her death.

The daye wherin this victory was gotten, was solemply holden, and reckened of ꝑ Jewes in the nombre of the holy dayes, and it is yet greatly holden of the Jewes euer sence, vnto thys daye.

¶ The dreame of Mardocheus.

A MArdocheus ꝑ sonne of Jair, the sonne of Semei, ꝑ sonne of Cisei of the trybe of Beniamin, a Jewe: which had his dwellyng in the cytye of Sulis, a man of greate reputacyon, and excellent amõge al them that were in the kynges courte. (Neuertheles, he was one of the prysõners, whõ Nabuchodonosor ꝑ kynge of Babylon had caried awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babylon with Jechonias the kyng of Juda.) In the seconde yeare of the raygne of great Artaxerses in the fyrst daye of the moneth Nisan, had this Mardochey soch a dreame: he thought he herde a greate tempest, horrible thõderclappes, erthquakes & great vproure in the lãd, and that he sawe two great dragons, ready to fyght one agaynst another. Theyr crye was greate. At the which roaryng and crye al Heathen were vp, to fyght B agaynst the ryghteous people. And ꝑ same daye was full of darckenes ad very vnclearc, full of trouble and angupsh, yee a greate fearfulnes was there in all the lande. The ryghteous were amased, for they feared the plage and euel that was deuysed ouer them, and were at a poynte wt them selues to dye. So they cryed vnto God: and whyle they were cryenge, ꝑ lytle well grewe ito a great ryuer and into many waters. And with ꝑ it was daye, and the sunne rose vp agayne. And the lowly were exalted, and deuoured the glorious and proude.

Now when Mardocheus had sene thys dreame, he awoke, & mused stedfastly in his herte, what God wolde do: ãd so he desyred to knowe all the matter, & his mynde was therupon vntyll the nyght.

¶ The.xii. Chapter.

¶ Mardocheus vttereth the treason deuysed agaynst the kyng, and is therfore rewarded of hym.

A AT the same tyme dwelt Mardochey wyth Bagatha and Tares i the kynges courte the kynges Chamberlaynes and porters of the palace. But when he herde theyr deuyce, & had dylygently consydered theyr ymagynacyons, he perceaued that they wente aboute, to laye theyr cruell handes vpon the kynge Artaxerses and so he certifyed the kyng therof. Then caused the kynge to examen the two gelded wyth tormentes. And when they had graunted it, they were put to death.

This the kyng caused to be put in ꝑ Cronycles for an euerlastyng remembraunce, & Mardocheus wrote vp ꝑ same matter. So the kynge commaunded that Mardocheus B shulde remayne in the courte, and for thys kaythfulnesse of his, he gaue him a rewarde. But Aman ꝑ sonne of Amadathu the Agagite, which was holden in greate honoure & reputacion in the kynges courte vndertoke to hurte Mardocheus and hys people, because of the two Chamberlaynes that were put to death.

¶ The coppe of the lettres of Artaxerses agaynst the Jewes. The prayer of Mardocheus.

A THe great kig Artaxerses which raigneth frõ India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hũdred and seuẽ and twentye lãdes, sendeth his frẽdly salutacion vnto all ꝑ Prices and debytes of the countrees, which be subiecte vnto his dominyon. Whẽ I was made lorde ouer many people, and had subdued the whole earthe vnto my dompnyon, my mynde was not with crueltye and wronge to exalte my selfe by ꝑ reason of my power: but purposed with equyte alwaye and gentylnes, to gouerne those that be vnder my iurisdiccyon, and wholy to set them i a peaceable lyfe, and therby to bryngc my kyngdome vnto tranquillite, that mẽ myght safely go thorow on euery syde, and to renue peace agayne, which all men desyre. Now whẽ I asked my coũcelers how these thynges myght be brought to a good ende, there B was one by vs, excellent in wysdome, whose good will, trueth, & kaythfulnes hath oft bene shewed and proued (which was also ꝑ pryncipall and next vnto the kynge). Amã by name: which certyfyed vs, how that i all lãdes there was scatred abrode a rebellyous folke, that made statutes & lawes agaynst all other people, ãd haue alwaye despysed the proclamed commaundementes of kynges: ãd how that for thys cause it were not to be suffred, that soch rule shulde contynue by you and not to be put downe. Seynge: now we perceaue the same, that this people alone are contrary vnto euery man, vsinge straunge and other maner of lawes, & withstande oure statutes and doynges, ãd go a- C boute to stablish shrewed matters, that our kingdome shuld neuer come to good estate, and stedfastnes: Therfore haue we cõmaunded, that all they ꝑ are appoynted in wrytyng and shewed vnto you by Amã (which is ordeyned and sett ouer all oure landes) and the most pryncypall next vnto the kynge, and in maner as a father (shall with theyr wyues and chyldren be destroyed and roted oute wyth the swerde of theyr enemyes myes and aduersaries: and that there shalbe no mercy shewed, and no man spared. And thys shalbe done the. xiiii. daye of ꝑ moneth (called Adar) of this yeare, that they which of olde (and now also) haue euer bene rebellious, maye in one daye wyth violence be thrust downe into the hel, to ꝑ intẽt that after this maner, oure empire maye haue peace and tranquilite.

D But Mardocheus thought vpon all the workes and noble actes of the Lorde, and made his prayer vnto him, saying: O Lord Lorde, thou valeaunt and almyghtie kyng (for all thinges are i thy power,) and yf thou wilt helpe & deliuer Israell, there is no man that can withstande ner lett ꝑ: for thou hast made heauen and earth, and what wonderous thinge so euer is vnder the heaue: thou art Lord of all thinges, and there is no man that can resist thy maiestie (O Lord) Thou knowest all thynges, thou wotest Lorde, ꝑ it was nether of malice, ner presumpciõ, ner for eny desyre of glory, ꝑ I wolde not bowe downe my selfe ner worshyp ponder proud presumpteous Amã (for I wolde haue bene content, & that with good will, yf it myght haue done Israel eny good, to haue kyst cuẽ his fotesteppes) but that I dyd it, because I wolde not sett the honoure of a man in the steade of the glorye of God, and because I wolde worshyp none but onely ꝑ my Lorde. And thys haue I done in no pryde ner presumpcyon.

E And therfore O Lorde thou God & kyng, haue mercy vpõ thy people for they ymagin how they maye bryngc vs to naught, yee theyr mynde and desire is to destroye and to ouerthrowe thy people, that hath euer bene thyne enheritaũce of olde. O despyse not thy porciõ, which thou hast deliuered & brought oute of Egypte for thyne awne selfe. Heare my prayer, and be mercyfull vnto thy people, whom ꝑ hast chosen for an heretage vnto thy selfe. Turne oure complaynte and sorowe into ioye, ꝑ we maye lyue O Lord, and prayse thy name. O Lord, suffre not ꝑ mouthes of thẽ that prayse the, to be destroyed.

All the people of Israell in lyke maner cryed as earnestly as they coulde vnto the Lorde, for theyr death and destruccion stode before theyr eyes.

¶ The.xiiii. Chapter.

¶ The prayer of Esther for the deliuerraunce of her and her people.

A Uene Esther also bryngc in the battayll of death, reioyced vnto the Lorde, layed awaye her glorious apparell, and put on the garmentes that serued for syghthige and mournynge. In the steade of precions oyntment, she scatered asshes and donge vpõ her head: and as for her body, she humbled it wyth fastynge, and brought it very lowe. All ꝑ places where she was wont to haue ioye afore, those fylled she with ꝑ hearre, ꝑ she plucte of her selfe. She prayed also vnto the Lorde God of Israell wyth these wordes.

O my Lorde, thou onely art oure kynge, helpe me desolate woman, whych haue no helper but the, for my misery and destrucciõ is harde at my hãde. Fro my youth vp I haue herde oute of ꝑ kynred of my father, that thou tokest Israel from amonge all people (& so haue oure fathers of their fore elders) ꝑ they shulde be thy perpetuall inheritaũce, and loke what thou diddest promise thẽ, thou hast made it good vnto them.

Now Lorde, we haue synned before the, B therfore hast thou geuen vs into the handes of oure enemyes, because we worshypped theyr goddes. Lorde, thou art ryghteous. Neuertheles it satisfieth them not, that we are in bytter and heuy captiuite and oppressed amonge them, but thou hast layed theyr handes vpon the handes of theyr goddes: so that they begynne to take awaye, ꝑ thyng that thou with thy mouth hast ordened and appoynted, to destroye thyne inheritaunce, to shut and to stoppe ꝑ mouthes of thẽ that prayse the, to quench the glory & worshyp of thy house and thyne aulter, and to open ꝑ mouthes of the heathen, ꝑ they may prayse the power and vertue of the goddes, and to magnifie the fleshly kynge for euer.

O Lord, geue not thy scepter vnto them C that be nothing, lest they laugh vs to scorne in oure mysery & fall: but turne theyr deuise vpõ them selues, and punish him, that hath begõne the same ouer vs, and sett him to an example. Thynche vpon vs O Lorde, and shew thy selfe vnto vs in the tyme of oure distres and of oure trouble. Strẽgth me O thou kynge of Goddes, thou Lord of all power, geue me an eloquent & pleasaũt speach in my mouth before the Lyon. Turne hys hert into ꝑ hate of oure enempe, to destroye him, and all soch as consent vnto hym. But deliuer vs with thy hande, and helpe me thy hand mayde, which haue no defence ner helper but onely the. Lorde, thou knowest all thynges, ꝑ wotest that I loue not the glory and worshyp of the vnryghteous, and that I hate and abhorre the bed of the vncircumcysed and of all Heathen.

Thou knowest my necessite, that I hate the token of my preeminence and worshipp, which I beare vpon my head, what time as I must shew my self and be sene, and that I abhorre it as an vncleane cloth, and that I weare it not when I am quyete and alone by my selfe. Thou knowest also that I thy hande mayden haue not eaten at Amãs table, and that I haue had no pleasure nor de-lyte in the kynges kealke, that I haue not dȝöcke the wyne of the dȝinckoffringes, and that I thy hãde mayden haue no iope sence the daye that I was bȝought hyther, vnto this daye, but onely in the ✠ Lord. O thou God of Abȝahã, O ꝑ mightie God aboue al, heare the voyce of them, ꝑ haue none other hope, and deliuer vs out of the hande of the wicked, and deliuer me out of my feare.

¶ The.xv. Chapter.

¶ Mardocheus moueth Hester, to go into the kynge, and make intercessyon for her people, and she performeth hys requeste.

MArdocheus also bad Hester go in vnto the kynge, and ꝓraye for hyr people and for hyr countre. Remẽbȝe (sayeth he) ꝑ dayes of thy lowe estate, how thou wast nozysshed vnder my hande: For Aman which is next vnto the kyng, hath geuen sentence of death agaynst vs. Call thou therfore vpon the Lorde, and speake for vs vnto the kyng, and deliuer vs from death. And vpon ý thyrde daye it happened, that Hester layed awaye the mourninge garmentes, and put on her glorȝous apparell, & deckte her selfe goodly (after ý she had called vpon God, which is ꝑ beholder and Sauyoure of all thinges) toke two maydes with her: vpõ the one she leaned her selfe, as one ý was tender: the other folowed her, and bare the trayne of her vesture. The shyne of her bewtie made her face rose coloured. The similitude of her face was chearful and ampable, but her herte was sorowfull for greate feare. She wẽte in thorow all the dores, and stode before the kyng. The kyng satt vpon the trone of hys kyngdome, and was clothed i his goodly araye, all of golde and set with ꝓrecious stones, & he was very terrible. He lyft vp hys face, that shone in ꝑ clearnes, and loked grymly vpõ her. Then fell the Quene downe, was pale and kaynt, leaned her selfe vpõ the heade of the mayde that wente with her.

Neuertheles, God turned ꝑ kinges mynde that he was gentle, ꝑ he leaped oute of hys seate for feare, ãd gat her in his armes, and held her vp tyll she came to her selfe agayne. He gaue her louynge wordes also, and sayd vnto her: Hester, what is the matter? I am thy brother, be of good cheare thou shalt not dye: for oure commaundement toucheth the comõs and not ꝑ. Come nye. And with ꝑ he held vp his golden rodd, and layde it vpon her neck, and embraced her frẽdly, and sayd: talke with me. Thẽ sayd she: * I sawe ꝑ (O Lord) as an Angell of God, & my hert was troubled for feare of thy maiesty and clearnesse: For excellent and wõderfull art thou (O Lord) and thy face is full of amyte. But as she was thus speakyng vnto him, she fell downe agayne for kayntnes: for the which

¶ The.xvi. Chapter.

¶ The coppe of the letters of Artharerses, wherby he reuoketh those which de fyrst sent forth.

THe greate kynge Artharerses, which raigned frõ India vnto Ethiopia ouer an hundreth & xxvii. landes, sendeth vnto the Prynces and rulers of the same landes, soch as loue him, hys frendly salutacion. There be many ý for the sondrye frẽdshyppes and benefites which are diuersly done vnto thẽ for theyr worshyp, be euer the more proude and hye mynded, and vndertake not onely to hurte our subiectes (for plentcous benefites maye they not suffre, and begynne to ymagin some thing agaynst those that do them good, & take not onely all vnthankfulnes awaye from men) but in pryde and presumpciõ (as they that be vnmyndefull and vnthankfull for the good dedes) they go about to escape the iudgement of God, that seyth all thynges, which (iudgement) hateth & punysheth all wyckednes. It happeneth oft also, that they which be set in office by ꝑ hyer power, and vnto whom the busynes and causes of the subiectes are committed to be handled, ware proude, and defyle them selues wyth sheddynge of innocent bloude, which bryngeth them to intollerable hurte. Which also with false & disceatfull wordes and with lyeng tales, disceaue and betraye the innocent goodnes of Prynces.

Now is it profytable and good, that we take hede, make search therafter, and consider, not onely what hath happened vnto vs of olde: but the shamefull vnhoneste, & noysome thinges, that the debites haue now taken in hande before oure eyes, and therby to beware in tyme to come, ý we maye make the kyngdome quyete and peaceable for all men, and that we myght some tyme drawe it to a chaunge: and as for the thynge that now is present before oure eyes, to wythstãde it, and to put it downe, after the mooste frendly maner.

What tyme now as Aman the sonne of Amadathu ý Macedonian (a straunger verely of the Persians bloude, and farre from oure goodnes) was come in amonge vs as an aleaunt, and had optayned the frendshyp that we beare towarde all people, so that he was called oure father, and had in hye honoure of euery man, as the next and principall vnto the kynge, he coulde not for bearre hym selfe from hys pryde, hath vndertaken not onely to robbe vs of the kyngdome, but of oure lyfe.

With manyfolde disceate also hath he desired to destroye Mardocheus oure helper & preseruer, preseruer, whych hath done vs good in all thynges: and innocẽt Hester the lyke partaker of oure kyngdome, with all her people. For his mynde was (when he had taken thẽ oute of the waye, and robbed vs of them) by this meanes to translate ý kingdome of the Persians vnto thẽ of Macedonia. But we fynde, that the Jewes (which were accused of the wicked, that they might be destroied) are no cuell doers, but vse reasonable and right lawes: and that they be the children of the most hye lyuynge God, by whom the kyngdome of vs & oure progenitours hath bene well ordred hitherto. Wherfore, as for the letters and cõmaundemẽtes, that were put forth by Aman the sonne of Amadathu, ye shall do well, yf ye holde them of none effect: for he that sett them vp and inuented thẽ, hãgeth at Sulis before the porte, with all his kynred, & God (which hath all thynges in his power) hath rewarded hym after hys deserynge.

And vpõ thys ye shall publish and set vp the copy of this letter in all places, that the Jewes maye freely and without hinderaunce holde them selues after theyr awne statutes, and that they maye be holped, and that vpon the.xiii. daye of the.xii. moneth. Adar, they maye be auenged of them, which in the tyme of theyr anguysh and trouble, wolde haue oppressed them. For the God that gouerneth all thinges, hath turned to iope the daye, where in the chosen people shulde haue perysshed.

Moreouer, amonge the hye solẽpne dayes ýe haue, ye shall holde this daye also with all gladnesse: that now and in tyme to come thys daye maye be a remẽbrauince to good, for all soch as loue ý prosperite of the Persians: but a remembrauince of destruccyõ to those that be sedicyous vnto vs.

All cityes & landes that do not this, shall horribly perysh and be destroyed wyth the swerde and fyre, and shall not onely be nomore inhabited of men, but be abhorred also of the wylde beastes and foules.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

¶ How we ought to searche and enquyre after God, & who be those that kynde hym. Of the holy goost, we ought to flye from backbityng & murmurynge, &c.

SEtt youre affeccyõ vpõ rygh- A teousnesse, ye that be iudges of the earth. Haue a good opinion of the Lorde, and seke hym in ꝑ synglenesse of herte. For he wil be founde of them ý tempte him not, & appeareth vnto soch as put their trust in him. As for frowarde thoughtes, they separate from God, but vertu (yf it be alowed) reformeth the vnwyse. And why? wysdome shall not entre into a frowarde soule, ner dwell in the body that is subdued vnto synne. For ꝑ holy goost abhorreth fayned nurtoure, & withdrawyth hym selfe from the thoughtes that are without vnderstãdyng: and where wyckednes hath the vpper hãde, he flyeth from thence. For the spyrete of wysdome is louynge, gẽtle and gracyous, & wyll haue no pleasure in hym that speaketh euell wyth hys lyppes. For God is a wytnesse of hys reynes, a true searcher out of hys herte, and an hearer of hys tõge. For the spyrete of ý Lord fylleth the rounde compasse of the worlde: & the same that vpholdeth all thynges, hath knowledge also of the voyce.

Therfore, he that speaketh vnryghteous B thinges, can not be hydd, nether maye he escape the iudgement of reprofe. And why: inquysicion shalbe made for the thoughtes of the vngodly, and the reporte of hys wordes shall come vnto God, for that his wickednes shalbe punished. For ý care of gelousy hareth all thynges, and the noyse of the grudginges shall not be hydd. Therfore, beware of murmurynge, which is nothynge worth, and refrayne youre tonge from sclaunder. For there is no worde so darck and secrete, ý it shall goo for naught: and the mouth that speaketh lyes, slayeth the soule.

Deseke not your awne death in the errour of your lyfe, destroye not your selues thorow the worckes of youre awne hãdes. For God hath not made death, nether hath he pleasure in the destruccyon of the lyuynge. For he created all thinges, that they myght haue their beynge: yee all the people of the earth hath he made ý they shuld haue healthe that there shulde be no destruccyon in them, and that the kyngdome of hell shulde not be vpõ earth (for rightcousnesse is euerlasting and immortall, but vnryghteousnes bryngeth death.) Neuertheles the vngodly call her

her vnto them both with wordes & workes: and whyle they thyncke to haue a frende of her, they come to naught: for the vngodly that are confederate with her and take her parte, are worthy of death.

¶The.ii.Chapter.

¶ The ymaginacions and desyres of the wycked, and their councell agaynst the faythfull.

FOr the vngodly talke and ymagin thus amonge them selues (but not ryght:) The tyme of oure lyfe is but short and tedyous: and when a man is once gone, he hath no more to ope ner pleasure, nether knowe we eny mã that turneth agayne from death: for we are borne of naught, and we shall be hereafter as though we had neuer bene. For oure breth is as a smoke in oure nosetrels, and the wordes as a sparck to moue oure herte. As for oure body, it shalbe very asshes that are quenched, and oure soule shall vanish as the soft ayre. Oure lyfe shal passe awaye as the trace of a cloude, and come to naught as the myst that is dryuẽ awaye with ỹ beames of the Sonne, and put downe with the heate therof. Oure name also shalbe forgotten by lytle & lytle, and no man shall haue oure worckes in remembraunce.

W For oure tyme is a very shadow ỹ passeth awaye, & after oure ende there is no returnyng, for it is fast sealed, so that no man cõmeth agayne. Come on therfore, let vs enioye the pleasures that ther are, and lett vs soone vse the creature lyke as in youth. Let vs fyll oure selues with good wyne & oyntment, and let there no floure of the tyme go by vs. Let vs crowne our selues with roses afore they be wythered. Let there be no fayre medowe, but oure lust go thorow it. Lett euery one of you be partaker of oure voluptuousnes. Let vs leaue some tokẽ of our pleasure in euery place, for that is oure porcion, els get we nothynge. Lett vs oppresse the poore ryghteous, let vs not spare the wyddow ner olde mã: let vs not regarde the heades that are gray for age. Let ỹ lawe of vnryghteousnesse be our auctorite, for ỹ thing that is feble is nothing worthy. Therfore let vs defraude the ryghteous, and why? he is not for oure profyt, yee he is cleane cõtrary to oure doynges. He checketh vs for offendynge agaynst ỹ law, and slaũdreth vs as trãsgressours of all nurtour. He maketh his boast to haue the knowledge of God, yee he calleth him self Goddes sonne. He is the bewrayer of our thoughtes: It greueth vs also to loke vpõ him, for his life is not like other mens, his wayes are of another fashyon. He counteth vs but vayne persones, he withdraweth hym self from oure wayes as frõ fylthynes: he commẽdeth greatly the latter ende of the iust, and maketh his boast that God is his father. Let vs se then yf his wordes be true, lett vs proue what shall come vpon hym: so shall we knowe what ende he shall haue. For yf he be ỹ true sonne of God he wyll receaue him, and delyuer hym from the handes of hys enemyes. Let vs examen hym with despytefull rebuke and tormentynge, that we may knowe his dignite, ãd proue hys pacience. Lett vs condemne hym with the most shameful death: for lyke as he hath spoken, so shall he be rewarded.

Soch thynges do the vngodly ymagin, and go astraye, for their awne wyckednes hath blynded them. As for the mysteries of God, they vnderstande thẽ not: they nether hope for the rewarde of ryghteousnesse, ner regarde ỹ worshipp that holy soules shall haue. For God created mã to be vndestroyed, yee after ỹ * ymage of hys awne lyckenesse made he hi. Neuertheless thorow enuye of the deuell came death in to the worlde: and they that holde of hys syde, do as he doth. * Gen. iii.

¶The.iii.Chapter.

¶ The conseruacion and assurance of ỹ ryghteous. The rewarde of the faythfull.

BUt the soules of the ryghteous are in the hande of God, and the payne of death shall not touch thẽ. In the syght of ỹ vnwyse they appeared to dye, and their ende is taken for very destrucciõ. The waye of the righteous is iudged to be vtter destruccyon, but they are in rest. And though they suffre payne before men, yet is their hope full of immortalyte. They are punyshed but in fewe thinges, neuertheless in many thiges shal they be well rewarded. For God proueth them, and fyndeth them mete for him selfe: yee as ỹ golde in the fornace doth he trye them, and receaueth thẽ as a brent offeringe, and when the tyme commeth, they shalbe loked vpon.

The ryghteous shall shyne as ỹ sparkes that renne thorow the red bulshe. They shal iudge the nacyons, and haue dominion ouer the people, and their Lord shall raygne for euer. They that put their trust in him, shal vnderstãde the trueth, and soch as be faythfull, will agree vnto him in loue: for his chosen shall haue gyftes and peace. But the vngodly shalbe punyshed accordynge to their awne ymaginacions, for they haue despised the ryghteous, and forsaken the Lorde.

Who so despiseth wysdome & nurtour, he is vnhappye, and as for the hope of soche, it is but vayne, their labours vnfrutefull, & their workes vnprofitable. Their wyues are vndiscrete, and their chyldren most vngodly. Their creature is cursed: Blessed is rather the baren and vndefyled, which hath not knowne the synfull bedd: she shall haue frute in the reward of the holy soules. And blessed is the gelded, which with his handes hath wrought no vnrighteousnes, ner ymagined wicked thinges against God. For vnto him shall be geuẽ ỹ speciall gift of fayth, and the most acceptable porcion in the temple of God. For glorious is ỹ frute of good laboure, and the rote of wysdome shall neuer fade awaye. As for the chyldren of aduouterers, they shall come to an ende, & the sede of an vnryghteous bedd shall be roted out. And though they lyue longe, yet shall they be nothing regarded, and their last age shalbe without honoure. Yf they dye hastely they haue no hope, nether shal they be spokẽ to in the daye of knowledge. For horrible is the death and ende of the vnrighteous.

¶The.iiii.Chapter.

¶ Of the chaste generacyon of the faythfull, and of their felicite. Of the death of ỹ ryghteous, and of the condemnacyon, of the vnfaythfull.

HOw fayre is a chaste generacyon with vertue! The memoriall therof is immortall, for it is knowne with God and with men. When it is present, mẽ take example there at: and yf it goo awaye, yet they desyre it. It is all waye crowned and holden in honour, and wynneth the reward of the vndefyled battayll. But ỹ multitude of vngodly children is vnprofitable, & the thinges that are planted with whordome, shal take no depe rote, ner laye eny fast foundacion. Though they be grene in ỹ braunches, for a tyme, yet shal they be shaken with ỹ wynde: for they stande not fast, and thorow ỹ vehemencie of the wynde they shalbe roted out. For ỹ vnparfecte braunches shalbe broken, their frute shalbe vnprofitable and sowre to eate, yee mete for nothynge. And why? all ỹ chyldren that are borne of the wicked, must beare record of ỹ wyckednesse against their fathers & mothers, when they be asked. But though the ryghteous be ouertaken with death, yet shall he be in rest.

W Age is an honorable thinge: neuertheles it standeth not onely in the length of tyme, ner in the multitude of yeares: but a mans wysdome is the graye hearre, and an vndefyled lyfe is the olde age. He pleased God, & was beloued of him: so that where as he lyued amõge synners, he translated him. * Yee sodenly was he taken awaye, to the intent that wyckednesse shulde not alter hys vnderstandyng, & that ypocrisie shulde not begyle his soule. For the craftye bewitchynge of lyes make good thynges darck, the vnstedfastnesse also and wyckednes of voluptuous desyre turne a syde the vnderstanding of the symple. Though he was soone deed, yet fulfylled he moch tyme: For hys soule pleased God: therfore hasted he to take him awaye from amonge the wycked. This the people se, and vnderstande it not, they laye not vp soche thynges in their hertes, how that the louynge fauoure and mercy of God is vpon his sainctes, and that he hath respecte vnto hys chosen. * Gener. v.c

Thus the ryghteous that is deed cõdemneth the vngodly which are lyuynge: and ỹ youth that is soone brought to an ende, the longe lyfe of the vnrighteous. For they se ỹ ende of the wyse, but they vnderstande not what God hath deuysed for him, and wherfore the Lord hath taken hym awaye. And why? they se him and despyse him, therfore shall God also laugh thẽ to scorne: So that they thẽ selues shall dye here after (but wythout honour) yee in shame among the deed for euermore. For without eny voyce shall he burst those that be puft vp, & remoue thẽ from the foundacyons, so that they shalbe layed waste vnto ỹ hyest. They shall mourne, and their memoryall shall perysshe. So they beynge afrayed shall remembre their synnes, and their awne wyckednesse shall bewraye them.

¶The.v.Chapter.

¶ The constantnes of the ryghteous before their persecuters. The hope of the vnfaythfull is vndurable and vayne. The blessednes of the faynctes and godly.

THen shall ỹ ryghteous stãde in great stedfastnesse agaynst soche as haue dealt extremely wyth them, and taken awaye their labours: When they se it, they shalbe vexed wyth horryble feare, and shall wonder at the hastynesse of ỹ sodayne health: groninge for very distresse of mynde and shall saye within them selues, hauynge inwarde sorowe, and mournynge for very angwysh of mynde.

These are they, whom we somtyme had in derision, & iested vpõ. We fooles thought their lyfe very madnesse, and their ende to be with out honour. But lo, how they are counted amõg ỹ childrẽ of God, & their porcyon is amonge the saynctes. Therfore we haue erred frõ the waye of truthe, the lyght of ryghteousnesse hath not shyned vnto vs, and the sonne of vnderstanding rose not vp vpon vs. We haue wery our selues in the waye of wyckednesse and destruccyon. Tedious wayes haue we gone: but as for the waye of the Lorde we haue not knowne it.

What good hath oure pryde done vnto vs? Or, what profyt hath the pompe of ryches brought vs? All those thinges are passed awaye lyke a shadow, and as a messaunger renninge before: as a shippe that passeth ouer the waues of the water, which when it is gone by, the trace therof cannot be foũde nether the path of it in the floudes. Or as a byrde that flieth thorow in the ayre, and no man can se eny token where she is flowen, but onely heareth the noyse of her wynges, beatinge the lyght wynde, partinge ꝑ ayre, thorow the vehemencye of her goynge, and syeth on shakyng her wynges, where as after warde no token of her waye can be founde. Or lyke as when an arowe is shott at a marck, it parteth ꝑ ayre, which immediatly commeth together agayne, so that a mā can not know where it wēte thorow. Euē so we in lyke maner as soone as we were borne, begane immediatly to drawe to oure ende, & haue shewed no token of vertue, but are consumed in oure awne wyckednesse.

C Soch wordes shall they that haue synned speake in the hell: for the hope of ꝑ vngodly is lyke a drie thystell floure (or dust) that is blowen awaye with the winde: lyke a thinne scomme that is scatred abrode with the storme: lyke as the smoke which is dispersed here and there wᵗ the winde, & as the remembraunce of a straunger ꝑ tarieth for a daye, and thē departeth. But the ryghteous shall lyue for euermore: their reward also is with the Lord: and their remembraunce with the hyest. Therfore, shal they receaue a glorioꝰ kyngdome, and a bewtyfull crowne of the Lordes hande: for wᵗ hys ryght hande shall he couer thē, and with hys awne holy arme shal he defende thē. His gelousy also shal take awaye the harnesse, & he shall weapen the creature to be auēged of ꝑ enemies. He shall put on ryghteousnes for a breast plate, and take sure iudgement in steade of an helmet. The inuincible shilde of equite shal he take, his cruell wrath shal he sharpen for a speare and the whole compasse of the worlde shall fyght with hym agaynst the vnwyse.

D Then shall the thonder boltes go out of the lightninges, and come out of the rayne bowe of the cloudes to the place apoynted: out of ꝑ hearde stony indignacion there shal fall thyck hayles, and the water of the see shalbe wroth agaynst them, and the floudes shall renne roughly together. Yee a mighty wynde shall stande vp agaynst them, and a storme shal scater them abrode. Thus ꝑ vnryghteous dealynge of thē shall bringe all the lande to a wildernes, & wyckednes shall ouerthrowe the dwellinges of the mightye.

C The. vi. Chapter.

C The callynge of kynges, Rynces, and Iudges: which are also exhorted to searche wysdome.

A WYsdome is better then strength, and a man of vnderstandyng is more worthy then one ꝑ is strōg. Heare therfore (O ye kynges) & vnderstande: O lerne ye that be iudges of the endes of the earth. Geue eare ye that rule the multitudes, & delite in moch people. For the power is geuen you of the Lorde, and the strength frō the Hyest: which shall trye youre worckes & search out youre ymaginaciōs: how that ye beinge officiers of his kingdome, haue not executed true iudgement, haue not kepte ꝑ lawe of righteousnes, nor walked after ꝑ wyll of God. Horribly & that ryght soone shall he appeare vnto you: for an harde iudgement shal they haue that beare rule. Mercye is graunted vnto the symple, but they that be in auctorite shalbe sore punished. For God which is lord ouer all, shall excepte no mans personne, neither shall he stāde i awe of any mans greatnesse. For he hath made the small & greate, & careth for all a lyke. But the myghty shal haue the sorer punyshement.

B Unto you therfore (O ye kynges) do I speake, that ye maye lerne wisdome and not go amysse. For they ꝑ kepe hys ryghteousnes shalbe ryghteously iudged, & they that are lerned in righteous thinges, shall fynde to make answere. Wherfore, set youre lust vpon my wordes, and loue them, so shall ye come by nurtour. Wisdome is a noble thinge, and neuer faydeth awaye: yee she is easely sene of thē that loue her, and founde of soche as seke her. She preuēteth thē that desire her, ꝑ she maye fyrst shewe her selfe vnto thē. Who so awaketh vnto her by times, shall haue no greate trauayle, for he shall fynde her syttinge readye at hys dores. To thincke vpon her, is parfecte vnderstādyng: and who so watcheth for her, shalbe safe, and ꝑ soone. For she goeth aboute, seekynge soch as are mete for her, sheweth her selfe cherfully vnto them in their goynges, and meteth thē with all diligēce. For the vnfayned desire of reformacyō is her begynnyng: to care for nurtour is loue, and loue is the kepynge of her lawes. Now the kepyng of the lawe is perfeccion and an vncorrupte lyfe, and an vncorrupte lyfe maketh a man familier with God. And so ꝑ desire of wysdome ledeth to the kyngdome euerlastynge. If D youre delyte be thē in royall seates and cepters (O ye kynges of the people) set youre lust vpō wysdome, that ye maye raygne for euer more. O loue the lyght of wisdome, all ye that be rulers of the people. As for wysdome what she is, and how she came vp, I wyll tell you, and wyll not hyde the mysterye of God from you: but wyll seke her out from the begynnynge of the natiuite, and bringe the knowledge of her into lyght, & wyll not kepe back the trueth: Nether wyll I haue to do wyth consumynge envye, for soch a man shall not be partaker of wysdome. But the multytude of the wyse is the welfare of the worlde, & a wyse kyng is the vpholdynge of the people. O receaue nourtoure then thorowe my wordes, and it shall do you good.

The

C The. vii. Chapter.

C wysdome ought to be preferred before all thynges.

A I Wyl selfe also am a mortall mā, lyke as all other, and am come of the earthy generacyon of hym that was fyrst made, and in my mothers wombe was I fashyoned to be flesh: In the tyme often monethes was I brought together in bloude thorow the sede of man, and the commodyous appetyte of slepe. Whē I was borne, I receaued lyke ayre as other men, & fell vpō the earth (which is my nature) crying and weppynge at the fyrst, as all other do. I was wrapped in swadlynge clothes, and brought vp with greate cares. For there is no kig that hath had eny other begynnynge of byrth. All mē then haue one entraunce vnto lyfe, and one goinge out in lyke maner.

B Wherfore I desyred, and vnderstanding was geuen me: I called, and the spirite of wysdome came into me. I sett more by her then by kyngdomes and royall seates, and counted ryches nothynge in comparison of her. As for precioꝰ stone, I compared it not vnto her: for all golde is but grauell vnto her, and syluer shalbe counted but clape before her sight. I loued her aboue wellfare & beutye, & purposed to take her for my lyght for her lyght cannot be quenched. All good thynges came to me wyth her, & innumerable ryches thorowe her handes. I was glad in thē all, for thys wysdome wente before me, and I knew not that she is the mother of all good thinges. Now as I my selfe learned vnfaynedly, so do I make other men partakers of her, and hyde her ryches frō no man, for she is an infinite treasure vnto mē, which who so vse, become partakers of the loue & frendshype of God, and are accepted vnto hym for the gyftes of wysdome.

C God hath graunted me to talke wysely, and conueniently to handle the thiges that he hath gracyously lēt me. For it is he, that ledeth vnto wysdome, and teacheth to vse wysdome a ryght. In his hand are both we & oure wordes: yee all oure wysdome, oure vnderstādynge and knowledge of all oure workes. For he hath geuen me the true sciēce of these thinges: so that I knowe how the worlde was made, and the powers of the elementes: the begynnynge, endynge and myddest of the tymes: how the tymes alter how one goeth after another, and how they are fulfylled, the course of the yeare: the ordinaūces of the starres: the natures & kyndes of beastes: the furiousnesse of beastes: the power of the wyndes: the ymagynaciōs of men: the diuersyties of yonge plantes: ꝑ vertues of rotes, and all soch thynges as are secrete & not loked for, haue I learned. For the worckmaster of all thinges hath taught me wysdome. In her is the spirite of vnderstandynge, which is holy, manyfolde, one onely, subtyll, curteous, discrete, quyck, vndefyled, playne, swete, louynge the thynge ꝑ is good, sharpe, which forbiddeth not to do well, gentle, kynde, stedfast, sure, free: haupynge all vertues, circumspecte in all thinges: receaupynge all spirites of vnderstandynge beynge cleane and sharpe. For wysdome is nymbler then all nymble thinges: she goeth thorowe & attayneth to all thynges, because of her clennes. For she is the breth of the power of God, and a pure cleane expressyng of the clearnes of Allmyghtie God. Therfore can no vndefyled thyng come vnto her: for she is the brightenes of the euerlastyng lyght, the vndefyled myrrour of the maiesty of God, and the ymage of his goodnesse. And for so moch as she is one, she E maye do all thinges: and beynge stedfast her selfe she renueth all, and amonge the people conueyeth she her selfe into the holy soules. She maketh Godes frendes and prophetes for God loueth no man, but hym in whom wysdome dwelleth. For she is more beutyfull then the Sunne, and geueth more lyght then the starres, and the daye is not to be cōpared vnto her: for vpon the daye commeth nyght. But wyckednesse cannot ouercome wisdome, and foolishnes maye not be wᵗ her

C The. viii. Chapter.

C The effectes of wysdome.

W WYsdome reacheth from one ende I to another mightely, & louingly doth she ordre all thinges. I haue loued her, and laboured for her, euen fro my youth vp: I did my diligēce to mary my selfe with her, soch loue had I vnto her beutye. Who so hath ꝑ company of God, commēdeth her nobylite, yee the Lord of all thynges him selfe loueth her. For she is the scole mastresse of the nurtour of God, and the chosen out of his workes. Yf a man wold desyre ryches in this lyfe, what is richer then wysdome, that worketh all thiges? Thou wylt saye: vnderstādynge worketh. What is it amōge all thinges, that worketh more then wysdome? If a man loue vertue and ryghteousnes, let him laboure for wisdome, for she hath great vertues. And why? she teacheth sobernes & prudence, righteousnes and strenght, which are soch thinges as men can haue nothynge more profitable in their lyfe. If a mā desire W moch knowledge, she can tell ꝑ thinges that are past, and discerne thynges for to come: she knoweth the soteltyes of wordes, and can expounde darcke sentēces. She can tell of tokens and wonderous thynges, or euer they come to passe, and ꝑ endes of all tymes

and ages. So I purposed after this maner: I wyll take her vnto my company, and cõme louingly with her: no doute she shall geue me good councell, and speake comfortably vnto me in my carefulnes & grefe. For her sake shall I be well and honestly taken amonge the comens and lordes of the councell. Though I be yonge, yet shall I haue sharpe vnderstandyng, so that I shalbe maruelous in the syght of greate mẽ, and the faces of princes shall wonder at me. When I holde my tonge, they shall byde my leasure, when I speake, they shall loke vpon me, and yf I talke moch, they shall laye their hãdes vpon theyr mouth. Moreouer, by the meanes of her I shall obtayne immortalite, and leaue behynde me an euerlasting memoriall amõge them that come after me. I shal set the people in ordre, and the nacyons shalbe subdued vnto me. Horrible tyrauntes shalbe afrayed, when they do but heare of me, among the multitude I shalbe counted good and myghtye in batayll. When I come home, I shall synde reste with her: for her company hath no bitternes, & her felouship hath no tedyousnesse, but myrth and ioye.

¶ Now when I consydered these thynges by my selfe, and pondered them in my herte how that to be ioyned vnto wisdome is immortalyte, and greate pleasure to haue her frendshype: how that in the workes of her handes are infynite ryches: how that, who so kepeth company with her shalbe wyse: & that he which talketh with her, shal come to honoure: I wente aboute seekynge, together vnto me. For I was a ladd of a rype wytt, and had a good vnderstandynge.

But whẽ I grew to more vnderstandynge, I came to an vndefyled body. Neuertheles when I perceaued that I coulde not kepe my selfe chaste, excepte God gaue it me (and that was a poynte of wysdome also, to knowe whose gift it was) I stepped vnto ꝑ Lord, and besought him, and with my whole herte I sayde after this maner.

¶ The.ix. Chapter.

¶ A prayer of Salomon to obtayne wysdome.

A God of my fathers, and Lorde of mercyes (thou that hast made all thynges with thy worde, and ordeyned man thorow thy wysdome, that he shulde haue * Genes. i. d * dompnyon ouer the creature which thou hast made: that he shulde ordre the worlde accordinge to equite and ryghteousnes, and execute iudgemẽt with a true hert) geue me wisdome, which is euer about thy seate, and put me not out from amonge thy chyldren: for I thy seruaunt and sonne of thy handemayden, am a feble personne, of a shorte tyme, and to ponge to the vnderstandynge of iudgemẽt and ꝑ lawes. And though a man be neuer so parfecte amonge the chyldren of mẽ, yet yf thy wysdome be not with him, he shalbe nothig regarded. But thou hast chosen me to be a kyng vnto thy people, and the iudge of thy sonnes and daughters.

Thou hast commaunded me to buylde a B tẽple vpon thy holy mount, & an aulter in ꝑ citie wherin thou dwellest: a lyckenesse of thy holy tabernacle whych thou hast prepared from the begynnyng, & thy wysdome with the, which knoweth thy workes, which also was with the, when thou madest the world & knewe what was acceptable in thy syght and ryght in thy cõmaundemẽtes. O sende her out of thy holy heauẽs and frõ the trone of thy maiesty, that she maye be with me, & laboure with me: that I maye knowe, what is acceptable in thy sight. For she knoweth and vnderstandeth all thinges: and she shall lede me soberly in my workes, and preserue me in her power. So shall my workes be acceptable, and then shall I gouerne thy people rightcously, and be worthy to syt in my fathers seate. For what mã is he, that may knowe ꝑ councell of God? Or, who can thinke what the will of God is? For ꝑ thoughtes of mortall men are miserable and oure forcastes are but vncertayne. And why? a C mortall and corruptible body is heuy vnto the soule, and ꝑ earthy mansyon kepeth downe that vnderstandinge that museth vpõ many thynges. Very hardly can we discerne the thinges that are vpon earth, & greate labour haue we, or we can synde ꝑ thynges which are before oure eyes. Who wyll then seke oute the groũde of the thinges that are done in heauen? Oh Lorde, who can haue knowledge of thy vnderstandyng and meanyng, excepte thou geue wysdome, and sende thy holy goost from aboue? ꝑ the wayes of them which are vpon earth, maye be refourmed: that men maye learne the thinges that are pleasaunt vnto the, and be preserued thorow wysdome.

But though they had soch pleasure in their beuty, that they thought thẽ to haue bene goddes: yet shulde they haue knowne, how moch more fayrer he is that made thẽ.
For the maker of beuty hath ordened all these thinges. Or yf they marueled at the power and workes of them, they shulde haue perceaued therby, that he which made B these thynges, is myghtyer then they.

For by the greatnesse and beuty of the creature, the maker therof may playnely be knowne. Notwithstandynge they are the lesse to be blamed, that seke God, ãd wolde fynde hym, and yet mysse. And why? for so moch as they go about in hys workes and seke after them, it is a token, ꝑ they regarde and holde moch of his workes that are sene: howbeit they are not wholy to be excused. For yf their vnderstandynge & knowledge be so greate, that they can diserne the worlde and the creatures, why do they not rather fynde out the Lorde therof?

But vnhappye are they, and amonge the deed is their hope, that call them Goddes which are but the workes of mens hãdes: golde, syluer, and the thinge that is founde out by connynge, the similitude of beastes, or any vayne stone that hath bene made by vngodlynes are both lyke abhominable vnto God, Euen so ꝑ worcke and he that made it also, shalbe punyshed together. Therfore shall there a plage come vpon ꝑ ydoles of the Heathen: for out of the creature of God they are become an abhompnacyon, a temptacion vnto the soules of men, and a snare for the fete of the vnwyse. And why, ꝑ sekynge out of ydoles is the begynnynge of whordome, and the bryngynge vp of thẽ is the destruccyon of lyfe. For they were not from ꝑ begynnynge, nether shall they contynue for euer. The welthy ydelnes of men hath founde them out vpon earth, therfore C shall they come shortly to an ende. When a father mourned for his sonne ꝑ was taken awaye frõ hym, he made hym an ymage (in all ꝑ haste) of hys deed sonne: & so begãne to worshypp hi as God, which was but a deed man, & ordened his seruaũtes to offre vnto hi. Thy by processe of tyme & thorow an vngracious custome, this errour was kepte:

as lawe, and tyrauntes compelled men by violence to honour ymages. As for those ꝑ were so farre of that men myght not worshypp them presently, theyr pycture was brought trō farre (lyke the ymage of a king whom they wolde honoure) to the intent ꝑ with greate diligence they might worshipp him which was farre of, as though he had bene present. Agayne, the singular connige of the craftesman gaue the ignorannt also a great occasion to worshipp images. For ꝑ workman willyng to do hym a pleasure ꝑ set him a worke, laboured with all his conninge to make ꝑ ymage of the best fashion. D And so (thorow the beuty of the worke) the comen people was disceaued, in so moch ꝑ they toke him now for a God, which a lytle afore was but honored as a man. And thys was the errour of mans lyfe, when men (ether for to serue theyr awne affectiō, or to do some pleasure vnto kynges) ascribed vn to stones and stockes ꝑ name of God, which ought to be geuen vnto no man.

Moreouer, this was not ynough for thē that they erred in the knowledge of God: but where as they lyued in the greate warres of ignorannce, those many & greate plages called they peace. For ether* they slue theyr awne children, & offred them, or dyd sacrifyce in ꝑ nyght season, or els held vnreasonable watches: so that they kepte nether lyfe ner mariage cleane: but ether one slue another to death maliciously, or els greued hys neyghboure wyth aduoutrye. And E thus were all thiges mixte together, blond, manslaughter, theft, dissimulacion, corruption, vnfaythfulnesse, sedicyon, periury, disquietynge of good men, vnthankfulnes, defilynge of soules, chaungynge of byrth, vnstedfastnesse of mariage, mysorder of aduoutrye and vnclennesse. And why? the honouringe of abhominable images is the cause, the begynnynge and ende of all euell. For they that worshype Idols, ether they are mad when they be mery, or prophecie lyes, or lyue vngodly, or els lyghtly forsweare them selues. For in so moch as their trust is in ꝑ Idols (which haue nether soule ner vnderstandynge) though they sweare falsely, yet they thyncke it shal not hurte them.

Therfore commeth a greate plage vpon them, and that worthely: for they haue an euell oppinion of God, geuynge hede vnto Idols, swearynge vniustly to disceaue, and despysing ryghteousnes. For theyr swearinge is no vertue, but a plage of them that synne, and goeth euer with the offence of the vngodly.

¶ The.xv. Chapter.

¶ The ioye of the faythfull, prayenge the mercy of God, for whose grace sake they serue not Idols.

BUt thou (O oure God) art swete, lōg A sufferynge and true, and in mercy ordrest thou all thynges.

Though we synne, yet are we thyne, for we knowe thy strength. If we synne not, then are we sure, that thou regardest vs. For to knowe ꝑ, is parfecte ryghteousnes: Yee, to knowe thy ryghteousnes ād power, is the rote of immortalite. As for the thynge that men haue foūde out thorow their euell sciēce, it hath not disceaued vs: as the paynt inge of the picture (an vnprofitable labour) and carued image, with diuerse colours, whose syght entyseth the ignorant: so that he honoureth & loueth the picture of a deed image that hath no soule.

Neuertheless, they that loue such euell thiges, are worthy of death: they that trust i them, they that make them, they that loue them, and they that honoure them. B The potter also taketh ād tempereth soft earth, laboureth it, and geueth it the fassyon of a vessel, whatsoeuer serueth for oure vse: and so of one pece of claye he maketh some cleane vessell for seruice, & some contrary. But where to euery vessel serueth, that knoweth the potter him selfe. So with his vayne laboure he maketh a God of the same claye: this doth euen he, whiche a lytle afore was made of earth hym selfe, and within a lytle whyle after (whē he dieth) turneth to earth agayne.

Notwithstandinge, he careth not the more C because he shall labour, ner because his lyfe is short: but stryueth to excell goldsmithes, the syluersmythes and coppersmythes, & taketh it for an honour to make vayne thynges. For hys herte is asshes, hys hope is but vayne earth, & his life is more vile thē claye for so moch as he knoweth not his awne maker, that gaue him hys soule to worcke, ād breethed in him the breth of lyfe. They counte oure lyfe but a passyme, and oure conuersacion to be, but a market, and that men shulde euer be gettynge, and that by euell meanes. Now he that of earth maketh fraile vessels and ymages, knoweth him selfe to offende aboue all other.

All the enemyes of thy people & that holde D thē in subiecciō, are vnwyse, vnhappye, and exceadyng proude vnto theyr awne soules, for they iudge all the Idols of the Heathen to be goddes, which nether haue eye sight to se, ner noses to smell, ner eares to heare, nor fyngers of hādes for to grope: & as for theyr fete, they are to slowe to goo. For mā made them, & he that hath but a borowed sprete, fashioned them. But no mā cā make a God lyke vnto him: for seynge he is but mortall hym selfe, it is but mortall that he maketh with vnryghteous handes. He hym selfe is better then they whō he worshypped, for he lyued

he lyued though he was mortall, so dyd neuer they. Yee, they worshypped beastes also, which are most miserable: for compare thiges that cannot fele vnto them and they are worse then those. Yet is there not one of these beastes, that with his syght can beholde eny good thing nether haue they geuē prayse ner thanckes vnto God.

¶ The.xvi. Chapter.

¶ The punyshment of Idolatrers, and the benefytes done vnto the faythfull.

A FOr these and soch other thiges haue they suffred worthy punishmēt and thorow the multitude of beastes are they roted oute. In stead of the which punyshmentes thou hast graciously ordred thyne awne people, and geuē thē theyr desyre ꝑ they longed for: a newe & straūge taist, *preparing thē quayles to be theyr meate: to ꝑ intent that (by the thynges which were shewed and sent vnto thē) they that were so gredy of meate, might be withdrawen euen from the desyre that was necessary. But these withi shorte tyme were brought vnto pouerte, ād tasted a newe meate. For it was requisite ꝑ (without eny excuse) destruccion shulde come vpon those which vsed tyranny, & to shewe onely vnto ꝑ other, how theyr enemyes were destroied.

*Aum.xxi.b *For when the cruell woodnesse of the beastes came vpon them, they perished thorow the stynges of the cruell serpentes.

B Not withstandynge, thy wrath endured not perpetually, but they were put in feare for a lytle seasō, that they myght be reformed, hauynge a tokē of saluacion, to remēbre the cōmaundement of thy lawe. For he ꝑ conuerted, was not healed by the thyng ꝑ he sawe, but by the, O sauioure of all. So in this thou shewedst thyne enemyes, ꝑ it is thou, which delyuerest from al euell. As for *Exod.x.d thē * whē they were bytten w̄ grashoppers and flyes, they dyed, for the were worthy to perish by soch: But nether the teeth of dragons ner of venimous wormes ouer cā thy chyldrē, for thy mercy was euer by thē & helped thē. Therfore were they punished to remembre thy wordes, but hastely were they healed againe, lest they shuld fall into so depe forgetfulnesse, ꝑ they myght not vse thy helpe. C It was nether herbe ner playster ꝑ restored thē to health, but thy worde (O Lorde) which healeth all thiges. It is ꝑ (O Lord) *Deu.xxxii.f. that hast the power of lyfe & death *: thou ledest vnto deathes dore, and bryngest vp 1.Reg.ii.b againe. But mā thorow wickednes slayeth his awne soule, and when his sprete goeth forth, it turneth not agayne, nether maye he call agayne the soule that is take awaye. It is not possible to eskape thy hande. For the vngodly that wolde not knowe ꝑ, were punyshed by ꝑ strength of thyne arme: with straunge waters, hayles and raynes were they persecuted, and thorow fyre were they consumed, for it was a wonderous thinge that fyre myght do more then water which quencheth all thinges: but the worlde is the auēger of the ryghteous. Some tyme was the fyre so tame, that ꝑ beastes which were sent to punysh the vngodly, brent not: and that because they shulde se and knowe, that they were persecuted with the punyshment of God. And some tyme brent the fyre i the water on euery syde, that it might destroye D ꝑ vnryghteous nacyon of ꝑ earth. * Agayne, thou hast fed thyne awne people w̄ Aungels fode, & sent thē bred ready from heauē (without theyr labouze) beynge very pleasaunt and of good tast. And to shewe thy ryches & swetnesse vnto thy chyldren, thou gauest euery one theyr desyre, so ꝑ euery man might take what lyked hym best. But the snowe and yse abode the violence of the fyre & melted not: that they myght knowe, that the fyre burnyng in the hayle and rayne, destroyed the frute of the enemyes: ꝑ fyre also forgat his strength agayne: that the ryghteous myght be norysshed. For the creature that serueth the (which art the maker) is fearse in punysshing ꝑ vnrighteous, but is easy & gētle to do good, vnto soch as put their trust in the. Therfore dyd all thynges alter E at the same tyme, and were all obedient vnto thy grace, which is the norse of all thynges, accordynge to the desyre of them that had nede therof: that thy childrē (O Lord) whom thou louest, myght knowe, * ꝑ it is * Deu.viii. For loke what myght not be destroied with the fyre, as soone as it was warmed with a lytle Sūne beame, it melted: ꝑ al mē might knowe, that thākes ought to be geuen vnto the before the Sunne ryse, and that thou oughtest to be worshipped before the daye springe. For the hope of ꝑ vnthākfull shall melt awaye as the wynter yse, and perysshe as water, that is not necessary.

And whyle they thought to be hydē ꝑ darcknesse of theyr synnes, they were scattered abrode i the very myddest of thē darcke couerynge of forgetfulnes, put to horrible feare and wonderously vexed: for the corner where they myght not kepe them from feare (because the sounde came downe and vexed them) yet, many terrible and straunge visions made them afrayed.

W No power of the fyre myght geue them lyght, nether myght the cleare flammes of the starres lyghten the horrible nyght. For there appeared vnto them a sodayne fyre, very dredeful: At the which (when they sawe nothige) they were so afrayed, that they thought the thinge which they sawe, to be the more fearfull. * As for the sorcery & enchaūtemēt *Exod.viii.b that they vsed, it came to derision, and the proude wysdome was brought to shame. For they that promised to dryue awaye the fearfulnes and dreade from the weake soules, were sycke for feare them selues, and that with scorne. And though none of the wonders feared thē, yet were they afrayed at the beastes which came vpon them, & at the hyssynge of the serpētes. In so moch that with trēblinge they sowned, ād sayde they sawe not the ayre, which no man yet maye escape.

C For it is an heuy thynge, when a mans awne conscience beareth recorde of his wyckednes and condempneth hym. And why? a vexed and wounded conscience, taketh euer cruell thynges in hād. * Fearfulnes is no- *psal.xviii.g

And loke how moch lesse the hope is within, the more is the vncertentye of the mater, for the which he is punyshed. But they that came in the myghtye nyght: slepte the slepe that fell vpon them from vnder and from aboue: somtyme were they afrayed thorow the feare of the wonders, and sometyme they were so weake that they sowned with all: for an hastye & sodayne fearfulnes came vpō thē.

After warde, yf eny of them had fallen, he was kepte and shut in prison, but without chaynes. But yf eny dwelt in a vyllage, yf he had bene an hearde or husbādman he suffred intollerable necessite: for they were all bounde with one chayne of darcknesse.

Whether it were a blasynge wynde, or a D swete songe of the byrdes amonge the thycke braunches of the trees, or the vehemencye of hastye rūnynge water, or greate noyse of the fallynge downe of stones, or the playenge and runnynge of beastes whom they sawe not, or the myghtye noyse of roarynge beastes, or the sownde that answereth agayne in the hye mountaynes: it made them sowne for very feare. For all the earth shyned with cleare lyght, and no man was hyndered in his labour. Onely vpon them there fell a heuy nyght, an ymage of darcknesse that was to come vpon thē. Yee, they were vnto them selues the most heuy & horrible darcknesse.

the chyldren, and destroyedst these in the myghtye water. Of that nyght were oure fathers certifyed afore that they knowyng vnto what othes they had geuen credence, myght be of good cheare. Thus thy people receaued the health of the ryghteous, but the vngodly were destroyed. For lyke as thou hast hurte oure enemies, so hast thou promoted vs whom thou calledest afore. For the ryghteous childrē of the good men offred secretly, & ordred the lawe of ryghteousnes vnto vnite: that the iust shulde receaue good and euell in lyke maner, syngynge prayses vnto the father of all men. Agayne, there was herde an vnconuenyēt voyce of the enemyes, and a pyteous crye for childrē that were bewayled. The master and the seruaunt were punyshed in lyke maner. For they all together had inumerable that dyed one death.

blest nacyō of them was destroyed. As oft as God helped them afore, yet wolde it not make thē beleue: but ī the destrucciō of the fyrst borne they knowledged, that it was the people of God. For whyle all thinges were styll & whē the nyght was ī the myddest of her course, thy Almyghtie worde (O Lord) leapte downe from heauē out of thy royall trone, as a rough man of warre, ī the myddest of the lāde that was destroyed: & the sharpe swerde perfourmed their straite cōmaūdemēt, standynge and fyllyng all thynges with death: yee, it stode vpō the earth & reached vnto the heauē. Then the syght of the euell dreames vexed them sodēly, and fearfulnesse came vpon them vnawares.

Then laye there one here, another there, half deed, halfe quyck, and shewed the cause of his death. For the vilyōs that vexed thē shewed thē these thinges afore: so that they D were not ignorāūt, wherfore they perished.

The tentacyō of death touched the ryghteous also, and amonge the multytude in the wilderneße there was sturrecciō, but thy wrath endured not lōge. For the blameles man wente in all the hast, and toke the battayll vpon him, brought forth the weapē of his ministracyon: euen prayer and the censours of reconcilinge: sett him selfe agaynst the wrath, and so brought the misery to an ende: declaringe therby that he was thy seruaunt. For he ouercame not the multytude with bodely power, ner with weapens of myght: but with the worde he subdued him that vexed him, puttynge them in remembraunce of the othe and couenaunt made vnto the fathers. For when the deed were fallen downe by heapes one vpon another, he stode in the myddest, pacified the wrath, *Exo.xxxviii and parted the waye vnto lyuinge. * And &c.
why? in his longe garment was all the beuty, and in the foure rowes of the stones was the glory of the fathers grauen, and thy maiesty was wrytten in the crowne of his heade. Unto these the destroyer gaue place, ād was afrayed of them: for it was onely a tētacion worthy of wrath.

But the thynges that was wantynge of theyr punyshmēt, was requysite so to be fulfylled vpon them with torme ntes, that thy people myght haue a maruelous passage thorow, & that these might fynde a straunge death.

¶The Prologe of Jesus the sonne of Syrach vnto hys boke.

MAny and greate mē haue declared wysdome vnto vs out of the lawe, out of the Prophetes and oute of other that folowed them. In the which thynges Israell ought to be commended, by the reason of doctryne and wysdome: Therfore, they that haue it and reade it, shuld not onely them selues be wyse there thorow, but serue other also with teachynge and wrytynge.

After that my graunde father JESUS had geue diligent laboure to reade the lawe, the Prophetes and other bokes that were left vs of oure fathers, ād had well exercised hym selfe therin: he purposed also to wryte some thyng of wysdome & good maners, to the intent that they which were willynge to learne and to be wyse, myght haue ꝑ more vnderstandynge, and be the more apte to leade a good conuersacyon.

Wherfore, I exhorte you to receaue it louyngly, to reade it with diligence, & to take it in good worth, though oure wordes be not so eloquent as the famous oratours. For the thyng ꝑ is wrytten in the Hebrue tonge, soundeth not so well when it is trāslated into another speache. Not onely this boke of myne, but also the law, the Prophetes ād other bokes sounde farre other wyse, then they do, whē they are spokē in their awne languaige.

Now in the .xxxviii. yeare When I came into Egypte in the tyme of Ptolomy Euergetes & continued there all my lyfe, I gat libertye to reade and wryte many good thiges. Wherfore, I thought it good and necessary, to bestowe my diligence and trauayle to interprete this boke. And consyderynge that I had tyme, I laboured and dyd my best to perfourme thys boke, and to bryng it vnto lyght: that the straungers also which are dysposed to lerne, myght applye them selues vnto good maners and lyue accordynge to the lawe of the Lorde.

¶The fyrst Chapter.

¶Wysdome proceadeth and commeth of God. A prayse of the feare of God. Ryghteousnes is a degre to come by wysdome.

*xiii.Re.xii.b and.xliii.d Job. xxviii.c Jacob.i.a

ALl wysdome *commeth of God the Lorde, and hath bene euer with hym, and is before all tyme. Who had nombred the sande of the see, ꝑ droppes of ꝑ rayne, & the dayes of tyme? Who hath measured ꝑ heygth of heauen, ꝑ bredth of the earth, & the depnesse of the see? Who hath sought out ꝑ grounde of Goddes wysdome, which hath bene before all thynges?

* Roma.xi.c *Wysdome hath bene before all thynges, and the vnderstandynge of prudence from euerlastynge. (Gods worde in the heygth is the well of wysdome, and the euerlastinge cōmaundementes are the entraūce of her.)

Unto whom hath the rote of wysdome bene declared? Or who hath knowne her wyt? Unto whō hath ꝑ doctrine of wysdome bene discouered & shewed? ād who hath vnderstande ꝑ many folde entraūce of her?

B There is one: euen the Hyest, the maker of all thynges, the Allmyghtye, the kyng, of power (of whom men ought to stande greatly in awe) which sytteth vpon his trone, beinge a God of dominiō: he hath created her thorow the holy goost: he hath sene her, nombred her, ād measured her: he hath poured her out vpon all hys workes, and vpon all flesh accordynge to hys gyft: he geueth her rychely vnto thē that loue hym: The feare of the Lorde is worshyppe and triumphe, gladnesse and a ioyfull crowne: The feare of the Lord maketh a mery hert, geueth gladnesse, ioye and longe lyfe. Who so feareth the Lorde, it shall go well wyth hym at the last, and in ꝑ daye of hys death he shall be blessed. C

The loue of God is honorable wysdome: loke vnto whom it appeareth, they loue yt, for they se what wonderous thiges it doth. *Ysal.xi.b Prouer.xi.c

*The feare of the Lorde ys ꝑ begynnig of wysdome, ād was made with the faythfull in the mothers wombe: yt shall go wyth the chosen wemen, and shalbe knowne of the ryghteous and faythfull. The feaze of the Lorde is the ryght Gods seruyce, that preserueth kepeth and iustifieth the herte, and geueth myrth & gladnesse. Who so feareth ꝑ Lord shall be happie, and when he hath nede of ēforte, he shall be blessed. To feare God is the wysdome that maketh rich, and brīgeth all good with her. She fylleth the whole house with her gyftes, and the garners with her treasure. The feare of the Lord is the crowne of wysdome, and geueth plenteous peace and health. He hath sene her & nombred her: (both these are the giftes of God) knowledge and vnderstandinge of wisdome hath he poured out as rayne, and thē that helde her fast, hath he brought vnto honour.

D The feare of the Lord is the rote of wysdome, and her braunches are longe lyfe. In the treasures of wisdome is vnderstādinge and deuocyon of knowledge, but wysdome is abhorred of synners. The feare of ꝑ Lord dryueth out synne: for he that is without feare cannot be made righteous, and his wylfull boldnes is his awne destruccyon. A patient man wyll suffre vnto the tyme, & then shall he haue ꝑ rewarde of ioye. A good vnderstandinge wyll hide his wordes for a tyme, & many mens lippes shall speake of his wysdome. In the treasurs of wysdome is ꝑ declaracyon of doctryne, but the synner abhorreth the worshippe of God. My sonne, yf thou desire wisdome, kepe the commaundement, and God shall geue her vnto the: for the feare of the Lorde is wysdome and nurture, he hath pleasure in fayth and louynge meknesse, & he shall fill the treasures ther of. Be not obstinate and vnfaythfull to the feare of the Lorde, and come not vnto hym with a double hert. Be not an ypocrite in ꝑ syght of mē, and take good hede what thou speakest. Marcke well these thynges, lest ꝑ happē to fall and brynge thy soule to dishonoure, and so God discouer thy secretes, and cast the downe in the middest of the congregacyon: because thou wouldest not receaue ꝑ feare of God, and because thy herte is full of faynednes and disceate.

Wo be vnto thē ꝑ are loose of herte, which put not their trust in God, & therfore shall they not be defended of hym. MY sonne, * defraude not ỹ poore of hys almes, and turne not awaye thine eyes frō hym that hath nede. Despise not an hongrye soule, and defie not the poore in his necessite: greue not the herte of him that is helpelesse, and withdrawe not the gift from the nedefull. Refuse not ỹ prayer of one that is in trouble, turne not awaye thy face from the nedy. Cast not thyne eyes aside from ỹ poore, for anye euell wyll, that thou geue hym not occasion to speake euell of the. *Delyuer him that suffreth wronge from the hāde of the oppressour, and be not faynt harted when thou syttest in iudgement. Be mercyfull vnto the fatherlesse as a father, & be in steade of an husbande vnto their mother: so shalt thou be as an obediēt sonne of the Hiest, and he shall loue the more thē thy mother doth: Wysdome bryngeth vp soch as be hers, and wilbe vnto them as a louynge mother, receaueth them that seke her, & wilbe vnto them in the waye of righteousnes. He that loueth her, loueth life: and they that seke her dilygently, shall haue greate ioye. They that kepe her, shall haue the heritage of lyfe: for where she entreth in, there is the blessyng of God. They that honoure her, shall be the seruauntes of the holy one: and they that loue hyr, are beloued of God. Who so geueth eare vnto her, shall iudge ỹ heathē: and he that hath respecte vnto her, shall dwell safely. *Gen.xiii.

He

C He that beleueth her, shal haue her in possession, and hys generacion shall endure: for when he falleth, she doth go with hym, and choseth him among the best. Feare, drede & temptacion shall she bryngе vpon him, and trye him in her doctrine: tyll she haue so proued him in his thoughtes, that he commytt his soule vnto her. Then shall she stablishe hym, bryng the ryght waye vnto hym, make him a glad man, shewe him her secretes, and heape vpon him the treasures of knowledge, vnderstandynge and ryghteousnes. But yf he go wrong, she shall forsake him, and geue hym ouer into the handes of hys enemye.

D My sonne, make moch of thy tyme, eschue the thinge that is euell, and for thy lyfe shame not to saye the trueth. For there is a shame that bringeth synne, and ther is a shame that bringeth worshyppe and fauour. *Accepte no person after thyne awne wyll, that thou be not confounded to thyne awne decaye. Be not a shamed of thy neyghboure in his aduersite, and kepe not back thy coūcell when it maye do good, nether hyde thy wysdome in her bewty. For in the tōge is wysdome knowne, so is vnderstandyng knowledge and lerninge in the talkyng of ỹ wise, & stedfastnesse in the worckes of ryghteousnes. In no wyse speake agaynst the worde of treuth, but be a shamed of the lyes of thyne awne ignorauce. Shame not to cōfesse thyne erroure, and submytte not thy selfe vnto euery man because of synne. Withstāde not the face of the mighty, & striue ỹ not against ỹ streame. But for ryghteousnes take paynes with all thy soule, & for the treuth stryue thou vnto death, and God shall fyght for the agaynst thyne enemyes. Be not hastye in thy tong, nether slacke and negligēt in thy worckes. Be not as a lyon in thyne awne house, destroying thy houshold folkes, and oppressing thē that are vnder the. * Let not thyne hande be stretched out to receaue, and shut when thou shuldest geue. *Lucē.xi.c

A *Luke.xii.c Eccles.xi.c. TRust not vnto thy riches, * & saye not: tush, I haue ynough for my lyfe. (For it shall not helpe in the tyme of vengeaunce and temptacyon.) Folowe not the lust of thyne awne hert in thy strength, and saye not: tush, how haue I had strength, or who will bringe me vnder because of my worckes? for doutles God shall auenge it. And saye not. I haue commytted no synnes, but what euell hath happened me? For the almyghtye is a paciēt rewarder. * Because thy synne is forgeuē the, be not therfore without feare, nether heape one sinne vpō another. * And saye not tush, the mercy of the Lord is great, he shall forgeue me my synnes, be they neuer so many. * For lyke as he is mercyfull, so goeth wrath from hym also, and hys indignacyon commeth downe vpon synners. *Eccl.xvi.b

Make no taryeng to turne vnto ỹ Lord, and put not of from daye to daye: for sodenly shall his wrath come, and in the tyme of vengeaūce he shall destroye the. * Trust not in wycked riches for they shall not helpe the in the daye of punishemēt & wrath. Be not caried about to euery wynde, & goo not into euery waye: for so doth the synner that hath a double tōge. Stāde fast in the waye of the Lord, be stedfast in thy vnderstāding, abyde by the worde, ād folowe the worde of peace and righteousnes. Be gentle to heare the worde of God, that thou mayest vnderstande it, & make a true answere with wisdome. * Be swyft to heare, but slowe & paciēt in geuynge answere. If thou hast vnderstandyng, shape thy neyghboure an answere: if no, laye thine hād vpō thy mouth: lest thou be trapped in an vndiscrete worde, and so confounded. Honour and worshyppe is not a mans wyse talkyng, but the tonge of the vndiscrete is his awne destrucciō. * Be not a preuy accuser as longe as thou lyuest, and vse no slaunder wyth thy tonge. ## ¶The.xvi.Chapter.

¶ Of vnhappye and wycked chyldren. No man can hyde hym selfe from God. An exhortacyon to the receaupnge of instruccyon.

A DElyte not thou in the multytude of vngodly chyldren, and haue no pleasure in them, yf they feare not God. Trust not ꝑ to theyr lyfe, ād regarde not theyr labours: for one sonne ꝑ feareth God, is better, thē a thousande vngodly. And better it is for a man to dye without chyldren, then to leaue behynde hym soch chyldren as are vngodly. For by one ꝑ hath vnderstādynge, maye a whole cytie be vpholden, but though ꝑ vngodly be many, yet shall it be wasted thorow them. Many soch thynges hath myne eye sene, & greater thynges thē these haue I herde with myne eares. * In the congregacyon of ꝑ vngodly shall a fyre burne, & amōg vnfaythfull people shall the wrath be kyndled. * Eccl.xxi.b.

B * The olde gyauntes optayned no grace for theyr synnes, which were destroyed, trusting to theyr awne strēgth. Nether spared he thē amōg whō Loth which was a * straūger, but smot thē & abhorred thē because of the pride of theyr wordes. He had no pytie vpon thē, but destroyed all ꝑ people, ꝑ were so stoute in synne. * And for so moch as he ouer sawe not the syxe hundreth thousande, that gathered thē selues together in ꝑ hardenes of their herte: it were maruell yf one beynge hardenecked, shuld be fre. * For mercy & wrath is wt hym: he is both myghtye to forgeue and to poure out displeasure. Lyke as his mercy is greate, euen so is his punyshemēt also, he iudgeth a man accordyng to his wozkes. The vngodly shall not escape in his spoyle, & the lōge pacience of him that sheweth mercye, shall not byde behynde. All mercye shall make place vnto euery man accordyng to ꝑ worthynes of his wozckes, & after ꝑ vnderstādinge of his pylgremage. * Gene.vi.a. * Gen.xix.c. * Nũe.xviii.c and.xxvi.f. * Eccle.v.a.

C Saye not thou: I wyll hyde my selfe frō God, for who wyll thynche vpon me from aboue? I shall not be knowne i so greate a heape of people, for what is my soule amōg so many creatures? Beholde, ꝑ heauen, yee the heauen of heaucns, the depe, the earthe, and all that therin is, shall be moued at hys presence: the mountaynes, the hylles, & the foundacyōs of ꝑ earth shall shake for feare, when God visyteth them. These thynges doth no herte vnderstāde, but he vnderstādeth euery herte, & who vnderstandeth hys wayes? No man seyth his stormes, and the moost part of hys wozckes are secrete. Who wyll declare the wozkes of his ryghteousnes? Or who shalbe able to abyde them? For the couenaunt is farre from some, and tryenge out of men is in the ende. He that is humble of herte, thynketh vpon soche thynges: but an vnwyse and erroneous man casteth hys mynde vnto folysh thynges.

D Hy sonne, herken thou vnto me, and lerne vnderstādynge, and marcke my wordes with thyne herte. I wyll geue the a sure doctryne, & playnely shal I instructe the (marke my wordes thē in thyne hert: for in ryghteousnes of ꝑ spyrete do I speak of the wonders that God hath shewed amōg hys wozkes from the begynnynge. And in ꝑ trueth do I shew ꝑ knowlege of hym.) God hath sett hys wozckes in good ordre from the begynnynge, and parte of them hath he sundered from the other. He hath garnyshed hys wozkes from euerlastynge, and theyr begynnynges, accordyng to their generacyōs. None of thē hyndered another, nether was any of them dysobedient vnto hys wordes. After thys, God loked vpon ꝑ earthe, and fylled it with hys goodes. With all maner of lyuynge beastes hath he couered the grounde, and they all shalbe turned vnto earthe agayne.

GOd * shope man of the earth, and made hym after his owne ymage, & turned hym vnto earthe agayne, and clothed him with his awne strength. He gaue him the nombre of dayes and certayne tyme, yee & gaue him power of ꝑ thynges that are vpon earthe. He made all flesh to stande in awe of hym, so that he had the dompynon of all beastes and fowles. * He made out of hym an helper lyke vnto him selfe, & gaue them dyscrecyon and tōge, eyes & eares, and a herte to vnderstande, and fylled them with instruccyon & vnderstandynge. He created for them also the knowledge of the spyrete, fylled their hertes with vnderstandyng, & shewed them good & euell. He sett his eye vpon theyr hertes, declaringe vnto them his greate and noble wozckes: that they shulde prayse hys holy name together, reioyse of his wonders, & be tellynge of hys noble actes. * Beside thys he gaue them instruccyon, and the lawe of lyfe for an heritage. He sawe and perceaued the thoughtes and ymagynacyōs of theyr hert, that they were euell: therfore heaped he vp hys mercyfull goodnes vpon them, and shewed them the waye of ryghteousnes. The mercy ꝑ a man hath, reacheth to his neyghbour: but ꝑ mercy of God is vpon all flesh. Who so reioyseth in wyckednes, shalbe punyshed: he ꝑ hateth to be reboumed, hys lyfe shalbe shortened, & he that abhorreth bablyng of wordes, quencheth wyckednes. He that offendeth agaynst hys awne soule, shall repent it: and he that reioyseth in wyckednes, shalbe punyshed.

Reproue thy neyghboure, that he kepe his tonge, & yf he haue spoken, that he saye it nomore.

C Tell thy neyghbour his faute, for oft tymes an offence is made, & geue not credence to euery worde. A man falleth somtyme with his tonge, but not with his wyll. For * what is he, that hath not offended in hys tonge: geue thy neyghboure warnynge, before thou threaten him, & geue place vnto the lawe of the Lord. The feare of God is all wysdome, and he that is a ryght wyse man, kepeth ꝑ lawe. As for the doctryne of wyckednesse, it is no wysdome, and the prudēce of synners is no good vnderstandyng: it is but wyckednes, & abhominacyon & a blasphemyng of wysdome. A symple man of small vnderstādyng ꝑ feareth God, is better then one ꝑ hath moch wysdome, & trāsgresseth ꝑ lawe of ꝑ Hyest. ¶Of correccyon and repentaunce. Of the gyft of the wyse man, and of the fole. Of lyinge.

Some man * reproueth his neyghbour oft tymes, but not in due season: Agayne, some mā holdeth his tong, & he is wyse & dyscrete. It is moch better to geue warnyng and to reprone, then to beare euell wyll: for he ꝑ knowledgeth him selfe openly, shalbe preserued frō hurt & destruccyon. Lyke as when a gelded man thorow delyre & lust dekyleth a mayden, euen so is it with him that vseth violēce: and vnryghteousnes in ꝑ lawe. O how good a thynge is it, a man that is reproued to shew openly his repentaunce: for so shalt thou escape wylfull synne. A * Eccl.xxiii.

Some man kepeth silence, and is founde wyse: but he that is not ashamed what he sayeth, is hatefull. Some man holdeth hys tonge, because he hath not ꝑ vnderstādyng of the language: & some man kepeth silence, waytyng a cōuenient tyme. * A wyse man * Eccle.bii. and.xxiiii. wyll holde hys tonge tyll he se oportunyte, but a wāton and vndyscrete body shall regarde no tyme. He that vseth many wordes, shall hurte his awne soule: & he that taketh auctorite vpon hym vnryghteously, shalbe hated. Some mā hath oft tymes prosperite in wycked thynges: Agayne, some man getteth moch, and hath harme & losse. There is some gift ꝑ is nothig worth: Agayne there is some gyft, whose rewarde is double. Some man getteth a fal for beyng to proude, & some cōmeth to worshipe frō lowe estate.

W * A wyse man with hys wordes maketh Gen.bi.d. him selfe to be loued, but the fauoure of fooles shalbe poured out. The gyft of the vnwyse shall do the no good, for hys eyes are Eccl.xbiii. seuenfolde. * He shall geue lytle, and saye he gaue moch: he openeth hys mouth and cryeth out, as it were one that cryeth out wyne. To daye he lēdeth, to morow asketh he agayne, and soch a man is to be hated. The foole sayeth: I haue no frende, I haue no thancke for all my good dedes: yee euen they ꝑ eat my bread, speake no good of me. O how oft, & of how many shall he be laughed to scorne? He taketh a more perclous fall by soch wordes then yf he fell vpon the grounde: euen so shall the falles of wycked men come hastely. In ꝑ mouth of hym that is vntaught, are many vnconuenient & vnmete wordes. A wyse sentence shal not be alowed at ꝑ mouth of the foole, for he speaketh it not in due season.

Some man promiseth his frēde a gyft for very shame, and getteth an enemye of hym for naught. A lye is a wycked shame in a man, yet shall it be euer in the mouth of the vnwyse. He that is not wyse, wyll not be taught in good: but ꝑ wyse man aboundeth in wyckednesse: and where bytternes is, there is no vnderstandynge. But yf a voluptuous man heare it, he shall haue no pleasure therin, but cast it behynde hys back. The talckynge of a foole is lyke an heuy burthen by ꝑ waye: but to heare a wyse mā speake, it is a pleasure. Where a doute is in the congregacyon, it is asked at the mouth of ꝑ wyse, and they shall ponder hys wordes in theyr hertes. Lyke as is a house that is destroyed, euen so is wysdome vnto a foole. As for the knowledge of ꝑ vnwyse, it is but darke wordes. ¶ The purgacyon of the slouthfull. Of ꝑ foolysche sonne and daughter, we must haue dyscrecyon how and to whom we ought to preache, of sorowyng vpon ꝑ deed. A foole is not to be moch talked with all. Iniuries and wronges do breake frendshyp and amytye.

A SLouthfull body is moulded of a stone of claye, and euery man wyll speake to his dispayse. A slouthful body is made of the donge of oxen and euery one that toucheth him must wash hys handes agayne. A mysnurtozed sonne is the dyshonoure of ꝑ father. A foolysh daughter shalbe lytle regarded. A wyse daughter is an herytage vnto her husbande: but she that cōmeth to dyshonesty, bryngeth her father in heuynes. A daughter that is past shame, dyshonoureth both her father and her husband: ꝑ vngodly shall regarde her, but they both shall despise her. The playenge of Mu sycke is not mete where heuynes is, euē so is the correccyon and doctryne of wysdome euer vnpleasaunt vnto fooles.

B Whoso teacheth a foole, is euen as one ꝑ gleweth a pottherde together: as one that telleth a tale to hym that heareth him not, & as one that rayseth a man out of an heuy slepe. Who so telleth a foole of wysdome, is euen as a man, whych speaketh to one that is a slepe. When he hath tolde hys tale, he sayeth: what is ꝑ matter? When one dyeth, lamentacyon is made for hym, because the lyght fayleth hym: euen so let men mourne ouer a foole: for he wanteth vnderstādyng. Make but lytle weppyng because of ꝑ deed: for he is come to rest, but the lyfe of the fole is worse then ꝑ deeth. Seuen dayes do men mourne for hym that is deed, but ꝑ lamētacyon ouer ꝑ vnwyse & vngodly should endure all the dayes of theyr lyfe.

C Talke not moch with a foole, and go not with hym that hath no vnderstādyng. Beware of him, lest it turne the to trauayle, and thou shalt not be defyled wt hys synne. Departe from him, & thou shalt fynde rest, and shalt not be drawen back into hys folyshnes. What is heuyer then leade? And what should a foole be called els but leade?

Lyke as a fayre playstred wall in a wynter house, & an hye buyldyng, may not abyde ꝑ wynde & stormе: euen so is a foles hert afrayed in his ymagynacyon, he feareth at euery thynge, and cannot endure. (A waueryng hart in ꝑ ymaginacyon of a fole wyll not euer stond in awe, but he that abydeth in ꝑ cōmaundemētes of God, wyll allwaye feare.) He ꝑ nyppeth a mans eye, bryngeth forth teares: and he ꝑ pryckеth ꝑ hert, bryngeth forth ꝑ meanyng & thought. Who so casteth a stone at the byrdes, frayeth them awaye: & he ꝑ blaspheмeth his frend, breaketh the frendshyppe: though thou drewest a swerde at thy frende, yet dispayre not, for thou mayest come agayne to thy frende. If he speake sowrely, feare not, for ye maye be agreed together agayne: excepte it be that ꝑ blaspheme him, disdayne hym, open his secretes and woūde him traytorously: for all soch thynges shall dryue awaye a frende. D

Be faythfull vnto thy neyghbour in his pouerte, that thou mayest reioyse with him also in his prosperyte. Abyde stedfast vnto hym in the tyme of hys trouble, that thou mayest be heyre with hym in hys heritage. Lyke as the vapour and smoke goeth out at the ouem before ꝑ fyre, euen so euell wordes, rebukes and threatenynges go before bloudshedding. Be not ashamed to defende thy frende: as for me, I wyll not hyde my face from hym, though he shulde do me harme. Whosoeuer heareth it, shall beware of hym. * Who shall set a watch before my mouth, & a sure seale vpon my lyppes, that I fall not with them, and that my tonge destroye me not? * Psal.cxl.a.

¶ The.xxiii. Chapter.

¶ A prayer agaynst pryde, lechery, and glotony. Of othes, blasphemy, and of wyse communycacyon. Of the thre kyndes of synnes. Many synnes proceade of aduoutrye. Of the feare of God.

O Lorde, father and gouernoure of my lyfe, leaue me not in theyr ymaginacyon and councell. Oh lett me not fall in soch reproфe. Who wyll kepe my thought with the scourge, and the doctryne of wysdome in myne herte: that he spare not myne ignorauнce, that I fall not with them, lest myne ignorauнces increase, that myne offences be not many in nombre, and ꝑ my synnes exceade not: lest I fall before myne enemyes, & so my aduersary reioyse. O Lorde ꝑ father & God of my lyfe, leaue me not in A not in their ymaginacyon. O let me not haue a proude looke, but turne away all voluptuousnes fro me. Take fro me ꝑ lustes of ꝑ body, let not the desyres of vnclennes take holde vpon me, and geue me not ouer into an vnthoughtfull & obstynate mynde.

B Heare me (O ye chyldrē) I wyll geue you a doctrine, how ye shall order your mouth: who so kepeth it, shall not perish thorow his lyppes, ner be hurt thorow wicked workes. As for ꝑ synner, he shall be taken i his awne vanyte: he ꝑ is proude & cursed, shall fall therin. * Let not thy mouth be acustomed wt swearynge, for in it there are many falles. Let not the namyng of God be continually in thy mouth: (and medle not wt the names of sayntes, for ꝑ shalt not be excused of the) for lyke as a seruaūt which is oft punyshed cannot be without some sore, euen so whatsoeuer he be ꝑ sweareth & nameth god, shall not be cleane pourged frō synne. A mā that vseth moch swearyng, shalbe fylled wt wyckednes, & the plage shall neuer go from his house. If he begyle his brother, his faute shalbe vpon hym: yf he knowledge not his synne, he maketh a doble offence, & yf he sweare in vayne, he shall not be foūde ryghteous for his house shall be full of plages. Ecclus.xxiii.b. Deu.v.d. Leui.xxiiii.e

C * The wordes of the swearer bryngeth deeth (God graūte ꝑ it be not founde in the house of Jacob.) But they that feare God, eschue all soch, & lye not weltrynge i synne. Ecclus.xxiii.a. * Vse not thy mouth to vnhonest and fylthy talkynge, for in it is ꝑ worde of synne. Remembre thy father & thy mother, when thou art set among great men: lest God forget the in theyr syght, and lest thou dotynge in thy custome, lurke rebuke, & wysh not to haue bene borne, and so curse the daye of thy natyuite. * The man ꝑ is accustomed with the wordes of blasphemy, wyll neuer be reformed all the dayes of his lyfe. To synne twyse is to moch, but the thyrd bryngeth wrath & destruccyon. An hote stomack cannot be quenched (euen lyke a burnynge fyre) tyll it haue swalowed vp somthyng: euen so an vnchast man hath no rest in hys flesh, tyll he haue kyndled a fyre. Ecclus.xxiii.b. Ecclus.xxiii.a.

D All bred is swete to an whoremonger, he wyll not leaue of, tyll he haue hys purpose. A man that breaketh wedlock, & regardeth not his soule, but sayeth: * Tush, who seyth me? I am compassed aboute with darckenes ꝑ walles couer me, no body seyth me: whom nede I to feare? The Hyest wyll not remēbre my synnes. He vnderstandeth not ꝑ his eyes se all thynges, for all soch feare of men dryueth away the feare of God from hym: for he feareth onely the eyes of men, and cōsydereth not that the eyes of the Lorde are clearer then the Sunne, beholdynge all the wayes of men and the grounde of the depe, Ecclus.xxiii.a.

and lokynge euen to mens hertes in secrete places. The Lorde God knewe all thynges or euer they were made, and after they be brought to passe also he loketh vpō thē all. * The same man shalbe openly punyshed in the stretes of ꝑ cyte: & shalbe chased abrode lyke a yonge horse foale: and when he thynketh lest vpō it, he shalbe taken. This shall he be put to shame of euery man, because he wolde not vnderstāde ꝑ feare of the Lorde. And thus shal it go allo with euery wyfe, that leaueth her husbande, & getteth enherytaunce by a straūge mariage. * Fyrst, she hath bene vnfaythfull vnto the lawe of the Hyest: Secōdly, she hath forsaken her awne husbande. Thyrdly, she hath played the whore in aduoutry, and gotten her chyldrē by another man. She shalbe brought out of the cōgregacyon, and her chyldren shalbe loked vpon. Her chyldren shall not take rote: & as for frute, her braunches shall bryng forth none. A shamefull reporte shal she leaue behynde hyr, and hyr dyshonoure shal not be put out. And they ꝑ remayne, shall knowe, that there is nothynge better, then the feare of God: and that there is nothynge sweter then to take hede vnto the cōmaū dementes of the Lorde. A great worshyppe is it to folowe the Lorde, for lōge lyfe shalbe receyued of hym. * Leui.xx.b. Deu.xxii.b

¶ The.xxiiii. Chapter.

¶ A prayse of wysdome proceadyng forth of the mouth of God. Of her worckes & place where she reasteth.

WYsdome shall prayse her self, and be honoured in God, & reioyse in the myddest of his people: In the cōgregacyōs of ꝑ Hyest shall she open her mouth, and triūphe in the beholdyng of his power: In the myddest of her people shal she be exalted, and wondred at in the holy fulnesse. In the multitude of the chosen she shalbe cōmēded, and amonge soch as be blessed she shalbe praysed, and shal saye: I am come out of the mouth of the Hyest, fyrst borne before all creatures. I caused ꝑ lyght that fayleth not to aryse in ꝑ heauen, and couered al the earth as a cloude. My dwellyng is aboue in the heyth, and my seate is in ꝑ pyler of the cloude. I my selfe alone haue gone rounde aboute ꝑ cōpasse of heauen, & pearsed ꝑ grounde of ꝑ depe: I haue walked in ꝑ floudes of the see, and haue stande in all landes: my dompnion is in euery people & in euery nacion, & with my power haue I troden downe the hertes of al, both hye & lowe. A

In all these thynges also I sought rest, and a dwellynge in some enheritaunce. So the creator of all thynges gaue me a cōmaū demēt: and he that made me, appointed me a tabernacle, and sayde vnto me: Lett thy dwelling be in Jacob, & thyne inheritaunce B in Israel, & rote thy selfe amonge my chosen. * I was created from the begynnynge, and before ỹ worlde, and shall not leaue of vnto the worlde to come. * In ỹ holy habytacyon haue I serued before hym, & so was I stablyshed in Syon. * In ỹ holy cyte rested I in lyke maner: and in Jerusalem was my power. I toke rote in an honorable people, euen in ỹ porcyon of the Lorde & in hys herytage, and kepte me in the fulnes of the sayntes. I am set vpan hye lyke a Cedre vpon Lybanus, and as a Cypers tre vpon the mout Hermon. I am exalted lyke a palme tre in Cades, & as a rose plante in Jericho. As a fayre Olyue tre in the felde, & am exalted lyke as a planteyne tre by ỹ water syde. I haue geuen a smel in the stretes, as the Cynamon & Balme, that hath so good a sauoure: yee a swete odoure haue I geuen as it were Myrre of the beest.

¶ I haue made my dwellynges to smell as it were of rosin, Galbanum, of Cloues, and Incense, and as Libanus when it is not hewen downe, and myne odoure is as the pure Balme. As ỹ Terebynte haue I stretched out my braunches, and my braunches are ỹ braūches of honoure & louynge fauour. ✠ * As ỹ vyne haue I brought forth frute of a swete sauour, and my floures are ỹ frute of honoure and ryches. I am the mother of bewtye, of loue, of feare, of knowledge and of holy hope. * In me is all grace of lyfe and trueth. In me is all hope of lyfe & vertue. O come vnto me all ye ỹ be desyrous of me & fyll your selues with my frutes: for my spyrete is sweter then hony, and so is my inheryta unce more then ỹ hony combe: the remēbraunce of me endureth for euermore. They that eate me, shall haue the more hōger, and they ỹ dryncke me, shall thyrst the more. Who so herkeneth vnto me, shall not come to cōfusyon: & they that worke in me, shall not offende. They that make me to be knowen, shall haue euerlastynge lyfe. ✠

All these thynges are ỹ boke of lyfe, the couenaunt of the hyest, and the knowledge of the trueth. * Moses cōmaunded ỹ lawe in the preceptes of ryghteousnes for an herytage vnto the house of Jacob, and cōmitted ỹ promyses vnto Israel. * (Out of Dauid hys seruaunt he ordened to rayse vp a moste myghtye kynge, syttynge in the seat of honour for euermore.) ‡ Thys fylleth with wysdome lyke as the floude of Physon, and as the floude of Tygris, when the new frutes are a growynge.

‡ Thys bryngeth a plenteous vnderstandynge lyke Euphrates: and fylleth it vp, as Jordane in the tyme of haruest. Thys maketh flourture to breake forth as the lyght, & as ỹ water Gyhon in ỹ haruest. The fyrst hath not knowne her perfectly, nomore shall ỹ last seke out ỹ ground of her. For her thought is fuller then the see, and her counsell is profounder then the greate depe.

I wyldome haue cast out floudes. I am as a great waterbroke out of ỹ ryuer. I am as the ryuer Dozix, and as a water condyte am I come out of the garden of pleasure. I sayde: I wyll water ỹ garden of my pongie plantes, and fyll the frute of my bryzth. So my water broke became exceadynge greate, & my ryuer approched vnto the see. For I make doctrine to be vnto all men as lyght as the fayre morynng, & I shall make it to be euer ỹ clearer. I wyll pearse thorow all the lower partes of ỹ earthe, I wyll loke vpon all soch as be a slepe, & lyghten all them ỹ put theyr trust in the Lorde. I shall yet powre out doctrine, lyke as prophecye, & leaue it vnto soch as seke after wysdome, & their generacyōs shall I neuer fayle, vnto the holy euerlastyng worlde. * Behold, how that I haue not laboured for my selfe onely but for all them that seke after the treuth.

¶ The .xxv. Chapter.

¶ Of thre thynges whych please God, and of thre whych he hateth. Of myne thynges that be not to be suspect, and of the tenth: chefely of the malyce of a woman.

THre thinges there are, that my spyrete fauoureth, which be also alowed before God and men. * The vnyte of bretheren, ‡ ỹ loue of neyghbours, * a man and wyfe that agree wel together.

Thre thynges there be which my soule hateth, and I vtterly abhorre the lyfe of them. A poore man that is proude. A rych man that is a lyar, ‡ and an olde body that doteth, and is vnchaste.

If thou hast gathered nothynge in thy youth, what wilt ỹ fynde then in thyne age. O how pleasaunt a thinge is it, when gray headed men are discrete, & when ỹ elders can geue good councell: O how comely a thyng is wysdome vnto aged men: yee vnderstandyng & councell is a glorypous thyng. The crowne of olde men is to haue moch experiēce: & the feare of God is theyr worthyppe.

There be nyne thynges, whych I haue iudged in my herte to be happye, & the tēth wyll I tell forth vnto men with my tonge. A man ỹ whyle he lyueth, hath ioye of his chyldren, and seyth ỹ fall of hys enemyes. Well is hym that dwelleth with an houswyfe of vnderstādyng, * and that hath not fallen with his tonge, & that hath not bene fayne to serue soch as are vnmete for hym. Well is hym, ỹ fyndeth a faythfull frende: and well is him, which talketh of wysdome to an eare that heareth him. O how great is he, ỹ fyndeth wysdome and knowledge! Yet is he not aboue hym, ỹ feareth ỹ Lorde.

The

feare of God hath set it selfe aboue all thynges. Blessed is the man, vnto whom it is graunted to haue the feare of God. Vnto whō shal he be lykened, that kepeth it fast? The feare of God is the begynnynge of his loue, and the begynnynge of fayth is to cleue fast vnto it. The heuines of the hert is al the punyshment, & the wyckednes of a woman goeth aboue al. All punishment & plage is nothyng in comparison of the plage of the hert, euen so all wyckednes is nothynge to the wyckednesse of a woman.

¶ What soeuer happeneth vnto a mā is no thynge in cōparison of it, that his euell willers do vnto hym: and all vengeaunce is no thynge to the vengeaunce of the enemye.

There is not a more wycked heade then the heade of the serpent, & there is no wrath aboue the wrath of a womā. * I wyl rather dwell with a lyon and dragon, then to kepe house wyth a wycked wyfe. The wyckednesse of a womā chaungeth her face, she shal mossel her countenaūce as it were a Beare, & as a sack shal she hewe it amonge ỹ neyghbours. Her husbāde is brought to shame amonge his neyghbours, and whē he heareth it, it maketh him to syghe. All wyckednes is but lytle to the wyckednes of a woman, the porcyon of the vngodly shall fall vpon her.

D Lyke as to clymme vp a sandy waye is to the fete of the aged, euen so is a wyfe full of wordes to a styll quyete man. * Loke not to narowly vpō the bewtye of a womā, lest thou be prouoked in desire toward her. The wrath of a woman is dishonoure and great confusion. Yf a woman get the maystrye, thē is she contrary to her husbande. A wycked wyfe maketh a sory herte, an heuy countenaunce and a deed woūde. * (Weake hādes and feble knees is a womā that hyr husbād is not the better for.) Of the woman came the begynnynge of synne, & thorowe her we all are deed. Geue thy water no passage, no not a lytle, nether geue a wycked womā her wyll. Yf she walcke not after thy hande, she shall confounde the in the syght of thy enemyes. Cut her of then frō thy flesh, that she do not alwaye abuse the.

¶ The .xxvi. Chapter.

¶ The prayse of a good woman. Of the feare of thre thynges and of the fourth. Of the Jelouse ād dronken woman. Of two thynges that cause sorowe, and of the thyrde which moueth wrath.

A Happye is the man that hath a verteous wyfe, for the nombre of his yeares shalbe dubble. An honest woman maketh her husbande a ioyfull man, & she shall fyll ỹ peres of his lyfe in peace. A verteous woman is a noble gyft, which shalbe geuen for a good porcion vnto soch as feare God: Whether a mā be rich or poore, he maye haue euer a mery herte, and a chearefull coūtenaunce. There be thre thinges that my hert feareth, and my face is afrayed of ỹ fourth. Treason in a cytye, a seditious people, and noysome tonges, all these are heuyer then ỹ death. But whē one is gelous ouer his wyfe, it bryngeth payne and sorowe vnto the hert: and a woman that telleth out all thinges, is a scourge of ỹ tunge. When one hath an euell wyfe, it is euen as when an vnlyke payre of oxen must draw together, * he that getteth her, getteth a scorpyon. A dronckē woman is a greate plage, for she cannot couer her awne shame.

The whordome of a womā maye be knowen in the pryde of her eyes and eye lydes. * Yf thy daughter be not shamefast, holde her straytlye, lest she abuse her selfe thorow ouermoch lyberte. Beware of all the dishonestye of her eyes, and maruell not yf she do agaynst the. Lyke as one that goeth by the waye & is thirstie, so shal she opē her mouth and dryncke of euery nexte water that she maye get. By euery hedge shall she sytt her downe, and open her quyuer agaynst euery arowe. A louynge wyfe reioyseth her husbande, and fedeth hys bones wyth her wysdome. A womā of fewe wordes is a gyfte of God, and to al well nurtured myndes maye nothynge be compared.

An honest and manerly woman is a gyft aboue other gyftes, and there is no weyght to be compared, vnto a mynde that can rule it selfe. Lyke as the Sunne when it ariseth, is an ornament in the hye heauē of ỹ Lorde, so is a verteous wyfe the bewtye of all her house. Lyke as the cleare lyght is vpon the holy candelstick, so is the bewtie of the face vpon an honest body. * Lyke as the golden pilers are vpō the sockettes of syluer, so are the fayre legges vpon a woman that hath a constant mynde. Perpetual are the foundacions ỹ be layed vpon a whole stonye rocke so are the commaundementes of God vpon the herte of an holy woman.

There be two thinges that greue my hert and in the thirde is a displeasure come vpon me. Whē an experte man of warre suffreth scarsenes ād powerte. When men of vnderstandynge & wysdome are not sett by: And when one departeth from ryghteousnes vnto synne. Who so doth soch, the Lorde hath prepared him vnto ỹ swerde. There be two maner of thynges, whych me thyncke to be herde and perylous. A marchaunt can not lyghtely kepe him from wrōge, nether a tauerner hym selfe from synne.

¶ The .xxvii. Chapter.

Of the poze that wolde be reche. The prodaction of the man that feareth God. The unconstantnesse of a foole. Whe secretes of a frende are not to be uttered. The wicked pmagined euell, which retourneth vpō hym selfe.

A BEcause of powerte haue many one offended: ād he that seketh to be ryche, turneth hys eyes aside. Lyke as a nayle in the wall sticketh fast betwyxte two stones, euē so doth synne sticke betwyxte the byer and the seller. Yf he holde hym not dilygently in the feare of the Lozde, his house shall soone be ouerthrowē, Lyke as whan one syfteth the fylthynes remayneth in ꝑ syue: So remayneth there some vncleane thynge in the thought of man.

Prayse no man except thou haue herde him, foz a mā is knowē by his wozdes. Yf thou folowest ryghteousnes, thou shalt get her, ād put her vpon the as a fayre garment. And thou shalt dwell with her, ād she shall defende the foz euer, and in the daye of knowledge thou shalt finde stedfastnesse. The byrdes reloze vnto theyr like, so doth the trueth turne vnto thē that be occupyed withall. The lyon wayteth the praye: so do the synners lurke vpon ꝑ wozckers of wyckednes. The talkynge of hym that feareth God, is nothinge but wysdome: as foz a folle he chaūgeth as the Moone. Yf ꝑ be amōg the vndiscrete, kepe thy wozde to a cōuenient tyme, but amonge soche as be wyse, speake on hardely. The talkynge of fooles is abhomination, & their sporte is volupteousnesse

C *Eccl.xxii.b ād misnurtoure. *Moch swerynge maketh the hearre to stande vp: and to stryue wyth soch, stoppeth the eares.

*Eccle.xix.b and .xxii.d *Who so discouereth secretes, leseth his credence, and fyndeth no frynde after hys wil. Loue thy frinde, ād bynde thy selfe in faythfulnes with hym: but yf thou bewrayest his secretes, thou shalt not gett hym agayne. Foz lyke as the man is that destroyeth hys enemye, so is he also that dealeth falsly in ꝑ frendshyp of his neyghboure.

D Lyke as one that letteth a byrde go out of his hande, cannot take her agayne: Euen so thou, yf thou geue ouer thy frynde, thou canst not get him agayne: Yee thou cāst not come by hym, foz he is to farre of. He is vnto the as a Roo escaped out of the snare, foz his soule is woūded. As foz woundes, they maye be bounde vp agayne, & an euel wozd maye be reconcyled: but who so bewrayeth the secretes of a frynde, there is no moze hope to be had vnto hym.

*Pro.v.b *He that wynketh with the eyes, ymagineth some euell, and no man shall take hym from it. Whē thou art present, he shal hylle commēd and prayse thy wozdes: but at the last he shal turne his tayle, and sclaūder thy sayenge. Many thynges haue I hated, but not hynge so euell, foz the Lozd him selfe also abhozreth soch a one.

E *Who so casteth a stone on hye, it shall fal vpon hys awne head: and he that smyteth with gyle, woundeth him selfe. Who so diggeth a pyt shall fall therin (& he that layeth a stone in his neyghbours waye, shal stomble theron) & he that layeth a snare foz another, shal be take in it him selfe. *Who so geueth a wicked noysome counsel, it shall come vpō hym selfe, ād he shal not knowe frō whence. The proude blaspheme, and are scornefull, but vengeaūce lurketh foz them as a lyon. They that reioyse at the fal of ꝑ ryghteous shall be taken in the snare, angwysshe of hert shall consume them before they dye. Yf he that is but flesh, beareth hatred and kepeth it, who wyl intreate foz his synnes? Remembre the ende, ād let enmyte passe, which seketh death and destruccion, & abyde thou in the commaundementes. Remembre the commaundement, so shalt thou not be rigorous ouer thy neyghboure. Thincke vpō the couenaunt of the Hyest, & forgeue thy neyghboues ignoraunce. *Beware of strife, and ꝑ shalt make thy sinnes fewer. Foz an angrie man kindleth variaunce, ād the vngodly disquieteth frendes, and putteth discorde among them that beat peace. *The more wodd there is, ꝑ more vehemēt is the fyre: and the myghtier that mā be, the greater is the wrath: and the longer ꝑ strife endureth, the more it burneth.

letteth he at variaunce. The thyrde tonge hath disquieted many one, and dryuen them from one lande to another. Stronge cyties of the riche hath it broken downe, and ouerthrowne the houses of greate men. (The strength of ꝑ people hath it brought downe and bene the decaye of myghtye nacyons.) The thyrde tonge hath cast out many an honest woman, & robbed thē of theyr labours. Who so herkeneth vnto soch shal neuer finde rest, & neuer dwell safely. The stroke of the rod maketh edders, but the stroke of ꝑ tonge smyteth the bones in sunder. There be many that haue perysshed with the swerd but many mo thorowe the tonge.

D Well is hym that is kepte from an euell tonge, and commeth not in the anger therof which drawethnot the yock of soche, and is not bounde in the bandes of it. Foz the yock therof is of yron, and the bande of it of stele. The death therof is a very euell death: hell were better foz one, then soch a tonge. But the fyre of it maye not oppresse them that feare God, and the flamme therof maye not burne thē. Soch as forsake the Lozde, shall fall therin: and it shall burne them, and no man shall be able to quenche it. It shall fall vpon them as a Lyon, and deuoure them as a leoparde. Thou hedgest thy goodes wyth thornes: why doest thou not rather make dores and barres foz thy mouth? Thou wepest thy golde and syluer: why doest thou not wepe thy wordes also vpon the balāce? ## ¶ The.xxix. Chapter.

¶ How we ought to lende oure money, and do almes. Of a faythfull man answeringe foz his frynde. Of lyberalitie, and hospytalytye.

A WHo so wyll shewe mercy, *lett him lende vnto hys neyghboure: and he that is able, let hym kepe the commaundement. Lende vnto thy neyghboure in tyme of his nede, & paye thou thy neyghbour agayne in due season. Kepe thy wozde, and deale fayth fully with him, and thou shalt alwaye fynde the thynge that is necessary foz the. There haue bene many, that when a thyng was lent them, rekened it to be founde, and made them trauayle and laboure, that had helped them. Whyle they receaue eny thynge, they kysse the handes of soch as gyue them, and foz theyr neyghbours good they hūble their voyce. But when they shulde paye agayne, they kepe it back, and geue euell wozdes, ād make many excuses by reason of the tyme: and though he be able, yet geueth he scarse the halfe agayne; and rekeneth the other to be founde. The woman receaueth euery man, yet is one daughter better thē another. A fayre wife reioyseth her husband, & a man loueth nothing better. Yf she be louynge & vertuous with all, then is not her husbande lyke other men. He that hath gotten a vertuous woman, hath a goodly possession: she is vnto him an helpe, and pyller wherupō he resteth. Where no hedge is, ther ꝑ goodes are spoyled: & where no husbyse is, there the frendles mourneth. Lyke as there is no credēce geuē to a robber, that goeth from one cytie to another: So is not the man beleued, that hath no nest, ād must turne in, where he maye abyde in the nyght.

C The.xxxvii. Chapter.

C How a man shulde knowe frendes & counsellers, and search the company of a holy man.

A Euery frēde sayeth: I wyl be frendly vnto hym also. But there is some frende, which is onely a frende in name. Remayneth there not heuines vnto death, when a cōpanyon & frēde is turned to an enemye? O most wicked pryde lumpeyon: from whence art thou sprongen vp, to couer ꝑ earth with falshede & disceat?
*Eccle.vi.b *There is some cōpanyon which in prosperyte reioyseth with his frende: but in ꝑ time of trouble, he taketh parte agaynst hym. There is some cōpanyon ꝑ mourneth with his frende foz the bely sake: but whē trouble commeth he taketh holde of the shylde. Foz get not thy frende in thy mynde, and thinke vpō him in thy ryches. Seke no councell at thy kinsmen, and hyde thy councell frō soch as beare the no good wyll. *Euery coūceler
*Eccle.viii. and.xl.c byngeth foyth his councell. Neuertheles, there is some ꝑ counceleth, but foz his awne profet: Beware of the counceler, and be aduised afoze wherto thou wilt vse him, foz he wil councel foz him selfe. Lest he cast the lot vpō the, & saye vnto the. Thy waye & purpose is good, & afterwarde he stāde agaynst the, and loke what shall become of the.

B Aske no councell at him, that suspecteth ꝑ foz an enemie, and hyde thy councel frō soch as hate the. Aske no councel at a woman cōcernynge ꝑ thinges that she longeth foz: ner at a fearfull and faynt herted body, in matters of warre: oz at a marchaūt, how deare he will cheape thy wares towarde his: oz at a byer, of sellynge: Oz at an enuious mā, of thanckesgeuinge: Oz at the vnmercyful, of louing kindnes: (oz at an vnhoneste man, of honestye.) Oz at ꝑ slouthfull, of wozcking: Oz at an hyzelyng which hath no house, oz profyt oz wealth. (An ydle body wolde not gladly heare speake of moch labour.) Take no soch folckes to coūcell, but be diligent to seke councell at a vertyous mā that feareth God, soch one as thou knowest to be a keper of the cōmaundemētes, which hath a mynde after thyne awne mynde, and is sozy foz the when thou stomblest.

And holde thy coūcell fast in thyne herte: foz there is no mā moze faythful to kepe it: C

And aboue all this prayе the Hyest, ꝑ he wyll lede thy waye in faythfulnes and trueth. Before all thy wozckes aske councel fyrst: ād oz euer thou doest eny thyng, be wel aduised. There be foure thynges that declare a chaunged herte, wherout there springeth euell and good, death & lyfe, and a masterful tonge that bableth moche. Some mā is apte and well instructe in many thinges, ād yet very vnprofytable vnto him self. Some man there is, that can geue wyse and prudent councell, and yet is he hated, and continueth a begger: foz that grace is not geuē him of God to be accepted. Another is robbed of all wysdome, yet is he wyse vnto him selfe, and the frute of vnderstādynge is commendable in his mouth. D

A wyse man maketh his people wise, & the frutes of his wysdome fayle not. A wyse mā shal be plenteously blessed of God: & al they that se him, shal speake good of hi. The lyfe of man standeth in the nombre of the dayes, but the dayes of Israell are innumerable.

Without these maye not the cyties be maynteyned, inhabited ner occupied: yet come they not hye i the congregacyon: they vnderstande not the couenaūt of ꝑ lawe: they cannot declare equyte and iudgemēt: they cannot fynde out the darcke sentēces, but thozow them shall the creature of ꝑ wozlde be mayntayned: theyr prayer concerneth onely the wozcke and laboure of connynge.

C The.xxxix. Chapter.

C A wyse man. The wozkes of God. Unto the good, good thynges do profyt: but vnto the euell euen good thynges are euell.

A HE that applieth hys mynde to vnderstãde the lawe of God, doth dilygently seke out the wysdome of them of the olde tyme, and exercyseth hym selfe in the Prophetes. He kepeth the sayinges of famous men, & prcasseth to the vnderstãdyng of darck sentẽces of wysdome. He seketh oute the mysterie of secrete sayinges, & exercyseth hym selfe therin continually. He doth seruice amõge greate mẽ, & appeareth before ỹ prince. He goeth into a straũge coũtre, & trauayleth thorow it: loke what good or euell is amõge men, he proueth it & seketh it out. He purposeth in his herte, to resorte early vnto the Lord ỹ made hym, & to praye before the Hyest God. He openeth his mouth in prayer, & prayeth for hys synnes. When ỹ greate Lorde wyll, he shalbe fylled with ỹ spyrete of vnderstãdynge, that he maye then poure out wyse sentẽces, & geue thanckes vnto the Lorde in hys

He shall shewe forth ỹ science of his lernynge, and reioyce in the couenaunt of ỹ lawe of ỹ Lord. The whole congregacyon shall commende hys wisdome, and it shall neuer be put out. ## The.xl.Chapter.

Of many mysteries lyght in a maunes lyfe. All thynges passe awaye, but a tryme and stable fayth remayneth. Of the blessynge of the righteous, and prerogatyue of the feare of God.

A GReate trauayle is created for all A men, and an heuy yocke vpon all men chyldren, from the daye that they go out of theyr mothers wõbe, tyll they be buryed in (the earth) the mother of all thinges: namely, their thoughtes and ymaginacyons, feare of the hert, counsell, meditacyons, longynge and delyre, the daye of death: from the hyest that sytteth vpon the glorious seate, vnto the lowest and most symple vpon the earth: from hym that is gorgyously arayed and weareth a crowne, vnto hym that is, but homely and symply clothed. There is nothynge but wrath, zele, fearfulnes, vnquietnes, and feare of death, rygorous, anger and stryfe. And in the nyght when one shulde rest and slepe vpon his bedd, the slepe chaunged hys vnderstandynge and knowledge. A lytle or nothynge is hys rest, in the slepe as well as in the daye of laboure.

B He feareth & is dysquyeted in the vysyon of his hert, as one that renneth out of a battayll: and in the tyme of health he awaketh & marueleth that the feare was nothynge. Both thynges happen vnto all flesh, both man and best: but seuen folde to ỹ vngodly. Horeouer, death, bloudshedding, stryfe and swerde, oppressyon, hõger, destruccyon and punyshemẽt: * these thinges are all created agaynst ỹ vngodly, & for theyr sakes came ỹ floude also. * All ỹ is of ỹ earth, shall turne to earth againe: & all waters ebbe againe in to ỹ see. All brybes & vnryghteousnes shalbe put awaye, but kythfulnes & trueth shal ẽdure for euer. The substaũce & goodes of the vngodly shalbe dryed vp and syncke awaye as a water floude, & they shall make a sounde lyke a greate thõder in the rayne.

C Lyke as the ryghteous reioyseth when he openeth his hande, so shall the transgressours be sayne, when theyr goddes vanysh and consume awaye. * The chyldren of the vngodly shall not obtayne many braũches and the vncleane rotes vpon ỹ hye rockes shalbe roted out before the grasse by the water syde & vpon the ryuer banckes.

Frendlynes and liberalite in the increase & blessynge of God, is lyke a paradyse and garden of pleasure: soch mercy also & kyndnes endureth for euer. * To labour & to be *Ecclus.bi.b content wt̃ that a man hath, is a swete plea-

D Pypynge & harpynge make a swete noyse, but a frendly tonge goeth beyonde them both. Thyne eye desireth fauoure and bewtye, but a grene sede tyme, rather then they both. A frende and companyon come together at opportunite, but aboue them both is a wyfe ỹ agreeth with her husbande. One brother helpeth another in the tyme of trouble, but almes shall delyuer more then they both. Golde and syluer fasten the fete, but a good councell is more pleasaunt then they both. Temporall substaunce and strenght lyft vp ỹ mynde: but the feare of the Lorde more then they both. The feare of the Lord wanteth nothynge, and nedeth no helpe. The feare of the Lorde is a pleasaunt garden of blessynge, & nothynge so bewtyfull as it is. My sonne, lede not a beggers lyfe, for better it were to dye then to begg. Who so loketh to another mans table, taketh no thought for his awne lyuige how to vpholde hys lyfe, for he fedeth hym selfe wt̃ other mens meat. But a wyse and well nurtoured man wyll bewarre therof. Beggyng is swete in the mouth of the vnchamefast, but in hys bely there burneth a fyre.

Be ashamed of whordome, before father and mother: Be ashamed of lesynge, before the prynce and men of auctorite: Of synne, before the iudge and ruler: Of offence, before the congregacyon & people: Of vnryghteousues, before a companyon and frende: * Roma.i.b.
